GAS SHELLS PAVING WAY FOR NEW ATTACKS

GERMAN FIRE IS INCESSANT

GUNS OF BRITISH REPLY VIGOROUSLY

English Hurl Cavalry Into Trench Warfare for First Time.

Today's War News Given in Summary

London today reports an intensive bombardment of the British lines at places, gas shells and tear-producing projectiles being freely used. The British guns are replying vigorously. The afternoon bulletin from Paris ignores the Somme front, where the French, presumably are busy consolidating their positions on the ground won from the Germans in Thursday's assault.

In the Verdun sector the Germans attacked a French position south of Damloup, northeast of the fortress but were repulsed. They are heavily bombarding the Fleury and Fumin wood sectors in this region.

German attacks on French trenches at Fille Morte in the Argonne and northwest of St. Die in the Vosges, were repulsed.

Berlin announces the sinking by German submarines on July 17 of six British trawlers off the English east coast. The British steamers Wolf, of 2,443 tons, and Karma, of 2,354 tons, and the French steamer, Cattois, of 1,200 tons, have been sunk.

London, July 22—(1:55 p. m.)—A spirited artillery duel along the British front in northern France, during which the British line and supporting trenches were bombarded with gas shells and projectiles containing eye-iritants, is recorded in today's war office report.

Aside from these heavy bombardments at several points on the front in the past 12 hours, there have been no important developments.

WHEAT YIELD WILL BE ABOUT NORMAL

County Agent Makes Prediction for Allen County This Season.

The wheat yield in Allen county this year will be about normal, and in the northern section it will be a little above normal, though the acreage will be one-fourth to one-third of normal according to a statement made Saturday by C. Henry, county agent.

Report of one yield of wheat of thirty-five bushels to the acre has been made to the office of the county agent from the farm of F. Voirol, living east of New Haven. There is considerable sandy soil in Allen county and wheat yields in such soil are always better according to the county agent. Wheat raised in clay soil never produces as well.

Returns From Purdue.

C. Henry, county agent, returned from Purdue university, Lafayette, Friday night, where he conferred with W. A. Coleman, assistant to Prof. G. I. Christie, head of Indiana county agent work, and Mr. Christie, regarding new work he will begin as soon after September 1 as possible.

Mr. Henry's work will be with the county agents in the field. He will help start new county agents with their work, direct demonstration work in the state and act generally in an advisory capacity. He will be on the road every week fro mTuesday until Saturday paying visits to county agents already in the field. Mr. Henry will be known as assistant to Prof. G. I. Christie in county agent work. Mr. Coleman, now an assistant to Professor Christie, will keep his department of the work—that of executive business.

Mr. Henry said, Purdue could not name a definite date on which a man would be sent to Allen county to replace him. An experienced man, however, will be chosen for Allen county, said Mr. Henry.

Acceptance of Carranza Proposal Seems Certain

Washington, July 22.—Acceptance here of the Carranza government's proposal for a joint commission to settle difficulties between the United States and Mexico appears certain today. An announcement was expected momentarily. The only delay apparently was for time for a reply from Carranza to suggestions that the proposals be amended somewhat.

There have been indications that President Wilson is for a more general discussion of the questions involved than is proposed in the Mexican communication of July 11, just made public in Mexico City. The note would hold the commission to three subjects—withdrawal of American troops, arrangement of a reciprocal agreement under which troops of either government might cross the border in pursuit of bandits, and investigation of the source of bandit raids on American towns.

Reports reaching Gen. Pershing and various border points that Villa has assembled a formidable force and is preparing to renew his war on the de facto government had no confirmation today from reliable sources. It was made plain that even if the bandit again is active, it will not affect the course of negotiations with the Mexican government. The capture and punishment of Villa is still desired, and co-operation of American troops to that end will be cheerfully extended, it was said, if the de facto government so desired.

DOESN'T WANT US TO MEDDLE

England Would Resent Outside Interference in Casement Case.

FACT IS BROUGHT OUT IN CONGRESS

Washington, July 2.—When Senator Martine today again pressed his resolution to have President Wilson urge a stay of execution for Sir Roger Casement, Chairman Stone, of the foreign relations committee, told the senate Ambassador Page had informed the state department, the British government would resent any such representations. Senator Stone again opposed Senator Martine's resolution.

"For the United States to make official representations would do more harm than good," said Senator Stone. "The state department already on the request of Casement's sister, has had Ambassador Page transmit a personal appeal for clemency to the British government. Ambassador Page has advised the department that official representations would not be received in a kindly way. If Great Britain is disposed to extend clemency to Casement it will do it on its own motion rather than have it said that clemency was shown at the request of a

MILLION-DOLLAR FUND FOR PROHI CAMPAIGN

Sum of $250,000 Already Subscribed—Hanly to Fight Hard.

Chicago, July 22.—A million dollar campaign fund of which $250,000 has already been subscribed, is planned by the prohibition party, according to a statement by Daniel Poling, of Boston, who, with former Governor J. Frank Hanly, of Indiana, presidential nominee of the party, arrived here today. Other leaders and delegates who attended the national convention at St. Paul, including Ira Landrith, of Tennessee, who was nominated for vice president, also were in the party.

Mr. Poling, who was temporary chairman of the convention, said that one individual has already given $50,000 which, alone, he said, was $10,000 more than the prohibitionists ever have spent in a campaign. Mr. Hanly, talking at a reception given the candidates, said that he would make a vigorous campaign. A meeting of the executive committee of the national committee will be held in a few days, Mr. Hanly said.

DEUTSCHLAND STILL DELAYS RETURN DASH

Baltimore, Md., July 22.—Little activity was noticeable this forenoon about the pier at Locust Point, where the German merchant submarine Deutschland is moored all ready, it is believed, to start on her return voyage to Germany with a cargo of nickel and crude rubber.

The tug Thomas F. Timmins, which met the undersea craft at the Virginia capes, was lying along side, as she has been almost constantly during the past week, with a full head of steam up.

Paul G. Hilken, of the Eastern Forwarding company, agents of the Deutschland, who returned after a forty-eight hour absence from the city, declined to discuss the reported plan to send a consignment of gold on the submersible.

FOE SHIPS ARE ALERT.

Norfolk, Va., July 22.—Allied warships off Cape Henry, awaiting departure by the German submarine Deutschland, after a night of slow cruising during which their searchlights were played over the entrance to the capes frequently, at daylight today quickened their speed and resumed their regular north and south patrol.

It is estimated that the ships are today from eight to ten miles out. At one time last night one of them, presumably a French ship, moved into within five miles of Virginia beach, coming closer to shore than she had at any previous time. It was impossible at this distance to determine her identity. She had four funnels. The other ship, which is of a darker color and is supposed to be British, carries three funnels.

Despite reports from Baltimore that Count von Bernstorff plans to visit the Deutschland again next Wednesday, German sources here maintain it will be far out in the Atlantic by that time. Furthermore, they say the Bremen then will be in some American port.

SEES A BIG ONE.

Bridgeport, Conn., July 22.—Theodore Judson, keeper of the Stratford light house, reports sighting at 9:45 a large submarine bound east. The vessel is larger than the United States navy submarine, he says.

Commander R. H. M. Robinson, general manager of the Lake Torpedo Boat company, says that the G-3, a United States submarine which came to the Lake ship yards for repairs, left this morning for New London.

DENIES SEEING ANY EXCHANGE OF MONEY

Muncie, Ind., July 22.—Harriet Williams, who was styled the "missing witness" during the trial of Gene Williams, deputy prosecutor, recently convicted, took the witness stand for the defense today in the trial of Mayor Bunch, who was named with the deputy prosecutor and others in an indictment, charging soliciting and accepting bribes from the underworld. Miss Williams was an office girl for Lloyd Yount, the slot machine agent, and previously had been stenographer for Gene Williams.

The witness denied seeing any exchange of money, check or secret package between Yount, Mayor Bunch or Williams while employed by the slot machine agent. She stated the slot machines were in a rear room and she had never entered the room. On cross examination she could not remember where she hung her wraps.

It is believed that the trial will end [illegible] of the attorneys [illegible] Saturday.

DEMOCRATS WILL NOT OVERLOOK CONGRESS

Washington, July 22.—Vance McCormick, chairman of the democratic national committee, conferred with President Wilson, senators and representatives and other democratic leaders here on the democartic campaigns and details of the plans for re-electing a democratic senate and house. The first definite work of this kind will be done in Maine, where the democrats will put forth their best efforts.

President Wilson has his speech of acceptance well under way, although he will not complete it until after former Justice Hughes delivers his speech of acceptance in New York on July 31. Mr. McCormick said today that he had not yet completed the selection of the campaign committee of the national committee, but expected to make headway today in his conferences here.

STORES CLOSE AT 6 O'CLOCK TONIGHT

Twenty-five or more of the principal stores in Fort Wayne will close this evening at 6 o'clock, as per the new summer schedule that will go into effect today and continue effective throughout the remainder of July and during the month of August.

The agreement to close at 6 o'clock has caused general rejoicing among the clerks of the city. The buying public is urged to do its Saturday shopping early.

FRAUDS THRIVING ON NEW YORK EPIDEMIC

New York, July 22.—Hundreds of "quack" doctors, patent medicine agents and get-rich-quick schemers are thriving on the epidemic of infantile paralysis here, Dr. Oscar M. Leiser, assistant director of public health education, declared today.

"Solutions that cost five to ten cents a gallon to prepare, are being sold for a dollar a bottle," he asserted. "The public should take warning against these so-called [illegible]

Col. Butler Innocent of Wrong in Shooting Case

Washington, D. C., July 22.—War department reports today from Alpine, Tex., giving further details of the shooting of Lieut. Col. M. C. Butler by Harry J. Spannell, manager of the Alpine hotel, say Colonel Butler was "absolutely innocent of any wrong," and whatever the cause might have been, "it appears like a cold-blooded, premeditated murder committed by a man crazed by jealousy.

The report says Spannell invited Colonel Butler to ride in his automobile in a seat beside Mrs. Spannell and that Spannell then drove into the residential section of Alpine and killed both Colonel Butler and Mrs. Spannell.

"Just how the killing was done," says the report, "cannot positively be stated, as there seems not to have been any witness present. Colonel and Mrs. Butler both associated freely with Mr. and Mrs. Spannell, taking frequent drives with the Spannells. Spannell seems to have been of extremely jealous disposition and it is stated that he had frequent disagreements with his wife who was a great beauty."

Five hundred spring chickens lost their heads Saturday in order that the appetites of 1,000 Elks might be partially appeased at the annual picnic which will be held Sunday in Herman J. Bueter's grove, two and a half miles east of the city on the Lincoln highway.

It is not to be understood, however, that chicken is all the jolly set of boys will get to eat tomorrow. Warm pork chops will be served the entire day. And anything else good to eat, including watermelons, will be on the menu.

Frank Morsch, chairman of the general committee on arrangements, has left nothing undone to make the picnic a success. Indications point to the fact that if the weather permits a record crowd will be in attendance. This affair is stag and will be for Elks only. Frank declares that it will be a lot of work getting everything ready for the event.

Large delegations are expected from cities near Fort Wayne. Three large money prizes have been offered for the three largest delegations and, it is understood that the lodges of some of the cities near Fort Wayne are endeavoring to land some of the cash.

Free transportation to the scene of the picnic will be furnished. A bus will leave the Elks' temple every ten minutes, beginning at 8:30 o'clock in the morning.

One of the features of the day's program will be the base ball game in the morning between the fats and the leans. Other amusements have been provided such as throwing at nigger babies, horse shoe pitching, etc.

Fort Wayne Man, in Trip East, Will Visit Many New England Cities.

B. Paul Mossman, a member of the building and site committee for the new Y. M. C. A. building, on a trip east will inspect Y. M. C. A.'s of recent construction at Springfield, Mass.; Providence, R. I., an dHartford, Conn., according to announcement of Arthur F. Hall, head of the publicity division of the building and site committee.

Have Fine Building.

The structure at Springfield, Mass., is said to be the "last word" in Y. M. C. A. building plans. It is complete in every particular. When Mr. Mossman returns from the east the building and site committee will visit in Canton and Van Wert, O.; Detroit, Erie, Pa., and South Bend, where Y. M. C. A.'s will be inspected. The Van Wert building, though of smaller proportions tha nthe one proposed for Fort Wayne, is said to be an excellently planned structure. Mr. Mossman will leave Tuesday for the east accompanied by Mrs. Mossman.

MANY DEMANDS FOR SPEECHES BY HUGHES

New York, July 22.—Chairman William R. Willcox, of the republican national committee, said today that the itinerary of Charles E. Hughes for his western speech-making tour was nearly completed, but as the demand for speeches was five times what the candidate could accomplish, announcement of the final program was being delayed until some of the claims of various sections for Mr. Hughes' appearance could be adjusted.

THEFTS MAY BE $75,000

SUSPECT IS BEING CLOSELY GUARDED

New York, July 22.—It became known today that secret investigation has been in progress for some time into the embezzlement of between $50,000 and $75,000 by a trusted employe of the Coal & Iron National bank, of this city.

Officials of the bank admitted today that the man under suspicion was being closely guarded and intimated that an arrest would probably be made within a few days.

Allison Dodd, one of the bank's vice-presidents, said this morning that discovery of the embezzlement came on June 21 through attention being called to a discrepancy of less than $1,000. It was said that not even the man who took the money knows what the total is.

The suspected employe is said to have been employed by the bank for many years. Systematic embezzlements of various sums continued throughout most of the time, it was declared.

The employe is said to be deeply repentant, but it was stated, was unable to make restitution.

May Not Be Prosecuted.

According to a later statement by President Sproul, of the bank, there is no present intention of prosecuting the employe, whose name is being carefully guarded.

"It is true," said Mr. Sproul, "that one of our employes stole about $75,000, but the bank is fully protected by bonding companies which have already made good their obligations. As far as the bank is concerned, the incident is closed. We do not even intend to prosecute unless the bonding companies request us to do so."

According to Mr. Sproul the defalcations were discovered on June 21 when a small discrepancy in the employe's books led to an investigation that disclosed the embezzlement of small sums over a long period of years. The embezzler himself took the most prominent part in the investigation and is endeavoring, it is said, to make restitution to the bonding companies. In the event that he does, it is understood he will not be prosecuted and his identity kept secret.

IN HANDS OF EXAMINERS.

Washington, D. C., July 22.—Investigation into the reported embezzlement in the Coal & Iron National bank, of New York, is so far entirely in the hands of the national bank examiners there. The examiner is not expected to make a report here until he has finished investigation or unless he discovers something which, makes it necessary to advise the comptroller of the currency. In such cases it is not customary for the examiner to report until he has finished at least a preliminary investigation.

EXCAVATION WORK PROGRESSING RAPIDLY

The work of excavation on the site where the new Odd Fellows building is to be erected on Berry street has progressed very rapidly this week and by nightfall will be nearly completed. This is almost a record time considering the amount of ground which had to be removed.

The method that is used in hauling the ground out has caused much comment and attracted no little attention. The southern portion of the basement was excavated first. A large platform has been erected and a steam engine is being used to pull the heavy loads up to the surface, in this way greatly assisting the horses in their work. Enough teams are being used so that the large steam shovel is kept constantly in operation.

LIPKEY TO DEVOTE FUTURE TO THE FARM

For eight years Cliff R. Lipkey has pounded typewriter keys, pasted copy and used the scissors as well as the blue pencil at the office of the Journal-Gazette. He has filled every position in the editorial department of that paper and for the past four years has been its managing editor. Now he is going back to the soil from whence he came.

While his services at the Journal-Gazette will be missed, certainly no one can blame him in resigning when it is known that he is to become associated in the management of the farm of his uncle, Charles Lipkey, near Uniondale and will move next week into the new residence that has been erected for him there.

Mr. Lipkey will be succeeded as managing editor by Frank Holloway and Avery M. Groves has been advanced to city editor. Chester F. Weaver, [illegible] local newspaper man, has been [illegible]

MORE GLORY FOR STATE

CLOSE WATCH ON CAMPAIGN HERE

State in Unusual Position as Producer of Presidential Possibilities.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 22.—The position of Indiana in the political arena this year became more conspicuous since the nomination of J. Frank Hanly, as the prohibition presidential candidate at the convention in St. Paul. His nomination following that of Charles W. Fairbanks as the republican candiate for vice president, and that of Thomas R. Marshall for the same office on the democratic ticket, places the state in an unusual position as producer of presidential possibilities.

Another feature of the political campaigns in this state this year, which has caused some of the political leaders of the country to refer to Indiana as the "Verdun of the campaign," is the fact that two United States senators are to be elected, one for the full term, and one to serve for four years.

The election of at least one of the candidates for the office above United States senator being probable, and also that of two senators assured, is causing the state to be watched closely by political leaders and will make it one of the hardest fought battle grounds of the campaign. Practically every party has placed a full state ticket in the field.

Mr. Hanly is a former republican governor of the state and since he left that office has practiced law and fought the liquor interests. He consented to and was the progressive candidate for governor, having been nominated at the March primary. When the progressive national convention failed to include a prohibition plank in its platform, however, Mr. Hanly withdrew from the state ticket. He is 52 years old. His residence is only a few blocks from those of Mr. Fairbanks and Vice President Marshall.

RECEPTION FOR NOMINEES

Chicago, July 22.—J. Frank Hanly, of Indiana and Ira D. Landrith, of Tennessee, nominees of the prohibition party for president and vice president of the United States, are to be guests at a reception tendered by local prohibitionists, upon their arrival at Chicago from St. Paul today.

A conference on plans of the party is set for today and both nominees are expected to address the meeting.

the offensive thrust along the Somme front on Thursday, according to a German army headquarters bulletin. Its use was futile, however, according to the statement, which said:

"British cavalry mounted on horseback entered the combat. This new feature of trench warfare was unable to change the final result."

A press dispatch from Stockholm says that a Russian submarine discharged a torpedo at the German steamship Elbe in the Gulf of Bothnia within Swedish territorial waters.

Six British trawlers were sunk by German submarines off the English east coast on July 17, says a German admiralty statement today.

FRENCH PRAISE FOR HAIG.

Will Have Paid for Valid Peace, Says the British Commander.

Paris, July 22—Senator Henri Berenger, who has returned from a visit to the British field headquarters, quotes Gen. Sir Douglas Haig as saying: "We must impose a peace that is really valid as we shall have paid for it."

The French senator was shown in detail the methods used by the British general staff in handling the enormous details of the western campaign. He describes Sir Douglas Haig as a commander who leaves nothing to chance, and says that the British commander believes that the war will be decided on the western battlefields.

"The technical skill of the British general staff," said the senator, "is on an equality with the heroism of the British troops."

CALL IT PURE INVENTION

London, July 22.—The report that a secret treaty had been concluded between Austria-Hungary and Germany, providing for the unification of armies and conduct of foreign affairs, is emphatically denied by the Hungarian press bureau, according to the Vienna correspondent of the Exchange telegraph company. The bureau characterizes the report as a pure invention.

A dispatch to Lloyds from Algiers says that the British steamer Karma, 2,354 tons, and the French steamer Cettois, 1,200 tons, have been sunk. The crew was landed at Algiers.

GERMAN ATTACK REPULSED.

Paris, July 22.—(12:30 p. m.)—A strong German attack northwest of St. Die, in the Vosges, was repulsed last night by the French, the war office report of today says. On the Verdun front the Germans bombarded violently French positions in the sectors of Fleury and Fumin wood. In the region of Moulin-Sous-Toutvent a strong German reconnaisance was dispersed.

SAN FRANCISCO TO PARADE.

Preparedness Pageant is Non-Military in Its Character.

San Francisco, Cal., July 22.—San Francisco is to enter today the list of American cities whose people have registered a demand for "preparedness" by holding parades. According to those who have arranged the demonstration, between 40,000 and 50,000 persons will march through Market street, the city's central thoroughfare. The demonstration as planned is non-military, with no uniformed ranks excepting those of the students from the business men's training camp at Monterey, Cal.

NO VACATIONS IN FIVE YEARS

Many Bank Employes in Country Are Not Allowed Outings.

Washington, July 22. — Comptroller Williams today announced that 901 employes of country national banks and ten per cent. of clerks in national banks of reserve and federal reserve cities, have had no vacations for five years. The figures were obtained from reports solicited in an effort to encourage vacations so that books may be examined in employe's absence and possible defalcation prevented.

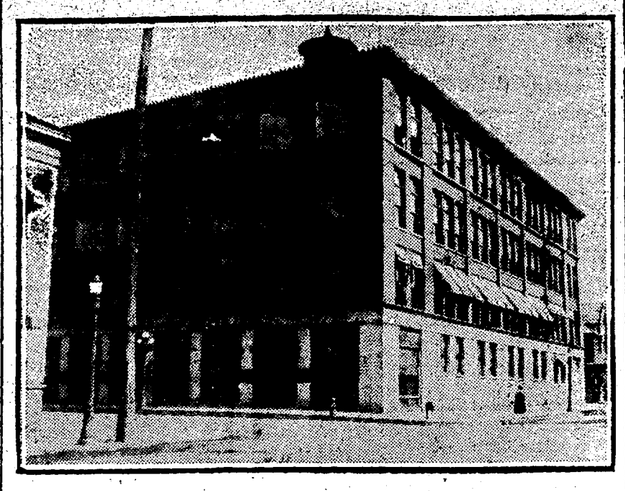
PATTERSON FLETCHER COMPANY CLOSES LEASE FOR PIDGEON BUILDING.



The Patterson-Fletcher company has closed a ten-year lease for the modern four-story building at the southeast corner of Wayne and Harrison streets belonging to the Pidgeon Realty company and will occupy the same by the first of the year. The C. T. Pidgeon Millinery company, which now occupies the building, will move to the new building to be erected for the Indiana Gas and Electric company, more familiarly known as the gas company, on the site of the old Fort Wayne Bur company's barn on East Wayne street. The millinery company will occupy two entire floors.

Extensive changes are to be made in the building, which, when completed, will make it into one of the finest, if not the finest, buildings for a gents' furnishing store in the state. The story will have 30,509 square feet of floor space, making it probably the largest in Indiana. Although the store now occupies a four-story building on Calhoun street, there is only 13,600 square feet of floor space. The new store will be over twice as large, besides the many more advantages and conveniences that will be provided.

180 Feet of Show Window.

The store will have 180 feet of show windows on Wayne and Harrison streets. There will be show windows on almost the entire Harrison street side of the building. Two passenger elevators will be provided, together with one freight elevator. The lot is 150 feet deep.

Many improvements are contemplated by the company. One entire floor will be devoted to a children's department. New departments will be added.

When the building now occupied by Patterson-Fletcher on Calhoun street was leased to a five and ten cent store some months ago, Mr. Fletcher immediately began to look for a new location. Several buildings were under consideration, but none of them offered the advantages of the Pidgeon block. It is ideally located and will be even better situated within the next few months as business is rapidly extending to West Wayne street and Harrison street. The fine new business block being erected by Freiburger Brothers, owners of the Central grocery, on the southwest corner of Wayne and Harrison streets, will doubtless be completed and ready for occupancy by the time the Pidgeon block is ready for Patterson-Fletcher company.

PLEASED WITH THE BUILDINGS INSPECTED

County Commissioners Talk of Their Recent Trip to Cleveland.

County commissioners of Allen county were favorably impressed with the operation of county institutions on their visit to Cleveland, Ohio, concluded Thursday. The county at Cleveland operates a farm of 2,200 acres with a house of correction, tubercular sanitarium, infirmary and home for the aged located thereon. The sanitarium and infirmary are 200 feet apart and there is no confusion in operation, according to William H. Schwier, county commissioner.

The county farm at Cleveland is fourteen miles from the city. There are a total of 212 in the tuberculosis camp, 900 in the infirmary and 400 in the house of correction. There is a general farm superintendent employed and a superintendent for each county institution is maintained. The Cleveland farm managers found it advantageous to bunch the county institutions in their operation, Mr. Schwier states.

It is the desire of the county commissioners to bunch the county institutions on the county farm. There are at present a detention home, tubercular camp and infirmary on the county property and the contract for a barracks to care for the lazy husbands will be let on August 12. The farm consists of 733 acres. The county commissioners got many good ideas in tuberculosis hospital construction while at Cleveland. These will prove valuable, it is claimed, if it should be decided to vote funds for a county tuberculosis hospital here.

Suits for Separation.

Eva Osterman has filed suit in superior court for a divorce from Charles Osterman, asking a divorce, alimony of $500 and custody of the child. Mr. and Mrs. Osterman were married Oct. 21, 1914 and separated in July, 1916. The plaintiff charges that the defendant forcibly ejected her from their home. She asks a restraining order preventing Osterman from drawing his funds from the Hoffman Brothers company, with whom he is employed.

Suit to Quiet Title.

Ed. G. Anderson has filed suit in superior court against Sam Diffendarfer, to quiet title. William H. Kissinger, Columbia City lawyer, represents the plaintiff.

Wait on Ruling.

"The county commissioners will make no kind of a decision as to the successor to H. P. Scherer, Wayne township trustee, until after Judge W. H. Eichhorn has entered final record in the case," declared William H. Schwier, county commissioner, Saturday. He said there was no foundation for reports that the men who were Scherer's opponents in the election for office would be considered on the basis of their vote count, thus giving the second highest man in the election returns the best chance of appointment. "The second highest man in the election has not been around to see the commissioners," said Mr. Schwier.

ACTS AS SPECIAL JUDGE.

Judge O'Rourke, of this city, sat as special judge in the issues of the case brought by Bertha Stenger against the Metropolitan Life Insurance company Friday afternoon in the Whitley circuit court. The plaintiff some time ago was awarded $1,000 and costs on a life insurance policy carried by her deceased husband. The insurance company contended that the policy was void on account of the death of the insured occurring while he was engaged in the commission of a felony. The jury found in favor of the plaintiff on the ground that Stenger came unlawfully into possession of the contract and carried the case to the supreme court of the state, where the decision of the trial was set Friday by Judge O'Rourke for the November term of the Whitley circuit court.

Divorce Is Asked.

Zella R. Hines has filed suit for a divorce in superior court from Charles T. Hines alleging failure to provide. Mr. and Mrs. Hines were married Oct. 27, 1909, and separated Jan. 5, 1914. R. B. Dreibelbiss is attorney for the plaintiff.

INJURED IN POWDER BLAST

Seven Employes Suffer in Explosion at Kenvil, N. J.

Kenvil, N. J., July 22—Seven employes of the Hercules Powder company were injured early today in an explosion at the plants "dry" house. The company denied reports that a number of workmen were killed. It was said that all the injured probably would recover.

THREE MORE CASES REPORTED.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 22.—Three additional cases of infantile paralysis were reported to the state board of health yesterday. They were the 18-months-old daughter of Walter Yates of Montgomery, 6-weeks-old child of Charles Beau of Indiana Harbor and 5-months-old child of Donald Heise of Scipio.

at her address and was prostrated over the fact of her daughter's marriage. The bride is 16. "I had no objection except they were too young," said Mrs. Killen.

With His Father.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed returned to Fort Wayne Thursday night, taking residence with Reed's father at 1218 Organ avenue. They were married by a Presbyterian minister at Hillsdale. They were accompanied there by LeRoy Clifford, of Rome, N. Y., and Miss Vera Reed, sister of the groom. A wedding dinner was served at the Reed home following the return of the couple, attended by the newlyweds and the wedding witnesses.

Met at Rome, N. Y.

The elder Reed says his daughter met Clifford at Rome, N. Y., where both attended Rome academy. Clifford is in Fort Wayne on a visit to the Reed home. He came a few days before the marriage took place at Hillsdale. "There was no objection to the marriage, the young folks just wanted to leave town to get married," asserted young Reed's father. The elder Reed put up the money for the wedding trip and furnished the auto for the tour.

"I knew the couple were going to get married two weeks ago," said the feed merchant. But Mrs. Killen had a different story. "Daisy left home Thursday morning for her work and did not return for dinner. Then I knew something was wrong," said Mrs. Killen. Her daughter did not come home again until she came home married. The bride was employed as a stenographer at the Fort Wayne Box company. She had held the position since last November, Mrs. Killen said. The mother secured it for her.

Was a Good Girl.

"Daisy is a good girl, but you can never tell what you are raising your children for," said Mrs. Killen. "I educated her thinking she could help me." The mother of the bride has three small children. She separated from her husband three years ago. According to Mrs. Killen, Reed had asked her daughter two weeks ago to become his wife, and the girl asked him to wait two years. Reed had shown Miss Killen attention for two years. They will furnish a home soon, according to the groom's father, their residence with the elder Reed being temporary.

Mutt & Jeff

Some jokes that are good, but old, are always appreciated. For instance, when Mutt asked Jeff what an optimist was, he was told that an optimist was one who tested eyes. C. A. Meigs, in the Lyric Theater Bldg., is an optimist any way you put it, and makes it his business to cheer up those who have eye or eyeglass trouble. If you are a pessimist in regard to glasses he can soon make you an optimist.

Sister eHars Discussion.

Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, agreeing with Senator Stone, said he believed Great Britain would commute Casement's sentence to life imprisonment and pardon him after the war. Mrs. Agnes Newman, sister of Sir Roger, sat in the senate gallery during the discussion.

Senator Williams, asking what the United States would have thought if the British parliament had adopted a resolution of intercession in the case of Mrs. Suratt when she was executed for complicity in the murder of Abraham Lincoln.

Senator Vardaman, in sympathy with the resolution, urged Senator Martine to eliminate from the preamble criticism of the British court, and Senator Phelan suggested a substitute merely expressing sympathy of the senate and urging clemency.

Go Over Without Action.

Senator Martine finally offered a new resolution which would request the president "to advise the American ambassador to Great Britain to use his kindly offices unofficially to ask for communtation in the sentence of death passed upon Sir Roger Casement."

Senator Phelan submitted one to ask the British government "for clemency in the treatment of Irish political prisoners." Senator Thomas objected, and they went over until Monday without action.

Does Liquor Business Pay?

The following very interesting report was read by Professor Price:

"Some months ago the Men's Christian league undertook to determine whether or not Fort Wayne and Allen county profited by the liquor traffic. It is argued by some that it is financially profitable for the city and the county to continue this traffic; by others, equally confident, it is asserted that the liquor business is a burden on the community, rather than a financial asset. The facts are what each side to this controversy needs.

"Certainly no community will continue to support a business that entails a financial loss upon itself unless there are compensating advantages accruing from that business. It is, therefore, the intention of the Men's Christian league to investigate this subject and to give to the interested public such facts as we are able to obtain. The following report covers our investigations up to date:

Source of Information.

'For the expenditures of the city and the county public records were consulted when obtainable. Where no public records were available, the information was obtained from those persons most intimately associated in the expenditures and whose judgments are, therefore, the most reliable that are to be had. In determining the proper share of expenditure that may justly be charged against the liquor traffic, the following question was asked: 'What percentage of this expenditure was, in your best judgment, made necessary either directly or indirectly by the liquor traffic?' When the question was not answered by the officials or those in charge the most reliable source of information was substituted. To illustrate this, let us cite the case of our state penitentiaries. The officials answered our letter by sending us their annual report. This gave us their expenditures, but failed to give us the much more interesting information, namely, the cause of the prisoners being there. We then consulted the best authorities on causes of crime, and used the percentage so obtained. We believe these figures to be as near the truth as will be obtainable until our charitable and criminal institutions give more attention to the causes producing their inmates.

'The city of Fort Wayne received from liquor license fees $54,700 within the year ending Dec. 14, 1915. Allen county received from the same source $41,400. The total receipts are, therefore, $96,100. This is a very nice sum of money, and we might be excused for being so dazzled by it that we fail to see any of the moral evils produced by the liquor traffic. To raise this sum would require a levy of 14 cents on the $100. But before we accept this bribe for permitting the continuance of this traffic, let us see what financial obligations we assume by thus entering into a partnership in the liquor business.

Our Paupers.

'Let us begin with the care of our paupers. The Allen county poor [illegible] of your inmates come from Fort Wayne, and what percentage of these inmates are wards of the county because of alcoholic drinks?' The answer was, 95 per cent of the paupers here are from Fort Wayne, and 75 per cent are here from the influence of drink.

"We understand full well that drink was not in every case the immediate cause of the commitment. Ofttimes it is old age or sickness, but in the majority of these cases the person had spent his income for liquor and had made no provisions for old age. In such cases the saloon had taken over the man's money that should have supported him in old age or sickness. The saloon, however, refuses to support the man, and society must assume the burden.

"During the year 1915 the county spent for the care of its wards in the county home 5 per cent interest on the value of the plant, $59,417.20. Seventy-five per cent of this expenditure in the judgment of those most intimately associated with the work was for the care of the products of our saloons. We will, therefore, enter as our first charge against the liquor business the sum of $44,562.90 for the care of our alcoholic paupers.

"The trustees of the townships spent for the relief of the poor $13,894.54. Seventy-five to 80 per cent of the poor relief was made necessary by alcoholic drink.

"Seventy-five per cent of the relief given by the township trustees would amount to $10,420.90.

"The city of Fort Wayne through the public schools gave aid to the amount of $541, 70 per cent of which was made necessary because of drink. This gives as our third charge $378.70.

"A letter was sent to the ministers of the churches affiliating with the Men's Christian league asking the following questions: 'What did your church spend last year to relieve the poor?' 'What percentage of this was made necessary by the use of liquor?' From this source we found that these churches were spending annually $3,900 to care for the products of the saloons.

"The Catholics and German Lutherans are spending about $2,000 per year for the same purpose. This estimate we believe to be too low rather than too high.

"The Rescue mission spent last year about $5,000, of which $3,675 was to care for those who had been patrons of the saloon.

"The Salvation Army and the Associated Charities estimated that their expenditures to relieve want traceable to booze was $3,665.

"The county orphanage was asked: "What per cent of your wards were made wards of the county by the influence of drinks?' The average estimate by the officials giving information was 66 2-3 per cent.

'Last year the county spent for the county orphanage the sum of $10,672.50. Five per cent interest on the money invested in the plant gives an additional outlay of $825, a total of $11,497.50. Sixty-six and two-thirds per cent of this sum gives as the cost to care for alcoholic orphans the sum of $7,665.

"The estimated expense to care for the orphans of this county in the church orphanages is $3,450, of which $2,300 was made necessary by alcohol."

The amount given by individuals directly to relieve the poor we have no way of determining. It would doubtlessly amount to a tidy sum. Neglecting all private charities, we have $78,565.80 that we expended last year to care for our alcoholic poor.

Before we turn to the study of our criminals, let us consider rather briefly whether or not the abolision of alcoholic drinks bring any decrease in the amount of pauperism. The only safe test for determining this is to take the history of those places that have abolished the use of alcoholic drinks. From the federal census of 1910 we find that in the prohibition states there were 118 paupers to each 100,000 population, but in the wet states there were 276 paupers to each 100,000 population.

Prohibition Kansas has 38 counties, with their poor asylums empty, and in many cases these plants have been transformed into agricultural experimental school farms.

It is a recognized fact among charity workers that alcoholic drink is the largest contributing cause of poverty.

Our Criminals.

Now, let us turn our attention to the cost of Allen county's criminals.

In the northern state prison at Michigan City, Allen county has 51 inmates. The cost for their maintenance was $7,764.24. This institution failed to give us the percent of the inmates that were guests of the state, through the influence of liquor and the saloon. From a Michigan prison we got an estimate. In reply to our inquiry, "Why are these men here?" we received the following answer, "Three-fourths of these men are here because of drink. The other one-fourth because they thought they were smart enough to beat the world." It is in this latter class that we find our bank convicts and confidence men."

In the Jeffersonville prison, Allen county has 47 inmates. The expenditure for their care was $9,797.15.

Allen county has three women in the women's prison at Indianapolis. Their care cost $771.18. This makes a total cost of $18,332.57.

Seventy-five per cent. of this amount would be necessary to care for the products of our saloons, if the Michigan authorities are correct. To be conservative, let us say 60 per cent. of the criminals owe their downfall to the saloon and drink. At this estimate it costs $10,999.54 to care for the alcoholic criminals that are in our three state prisons from Allen county. The state has invested in these institutions about the sum of $1,714,652. Allen county's share of this is about $76,000. We may therefore add $2,850 interest on money invested to care for our alcoholic prisoners. Unless we stop making criminals so rapidly we are going to have to invest a few more million to care for them.

County Jail.

Last year our own county jail cost us the sum of $18,217.22. The value of the jail plant is $112,000. Five per cent. interest on this sum is $5,600.

Seventy-five to eighty per cent. of our county jail population, not counting bed bugs, etc., is there because of drink and the influence of the saloon. If this is doubted, follow the records of the courts for a few weeks and all doubts will vanish.

We therefore are paying $13,662.92 to jail our saloon patrons. There is need for a new jail, or for some method of decreasing the number of prisoners. One or the other must be done.

In addition to this, there is an added expense to the sheriff costs. Allen county paid her sheriff last year, exclusive of cost for care of prisoners, the sum of $7,000. [illegible]

Our city police court cost us $8,500. Seventy-five per cent. of its business is the cases growing out of alcoholic drinks. We, therefore, may charge up booze with $1,524.81. During the month of August, 1915, there were before this court 126 cases in which alcoholic drink was the cause, 106 of which were plain drunks.

During September of this year, there were 141 cases in which drink played a part. Of this number 125 were plain drunks. Last year nearly 1,500 plain drunks were before the court at the expense of the taxpayers.

The chief of police informs us that in his judgment ten policemen could be spared from the force in a city of this size if the use of alcoholic beverages were dispensed with. This would result in a saving of $9,600. We believe that the chief's estimate is very conservative. The experience of other cities bear out Chief Lenz's estimate.

The circuit and superior courts and prosecutor cost us $27,039.98. About 20 per cent. of the business of these courts has to do with the liquor business or cases growing out of the use of alcoholic beverages. This gives us $5,407.99 that may be charged against our liquor traffic.

The above figures do not include any part of the expenditures for the boys' reform school at Plainfield, nor the girls reform school at Indianapolis. Allen county has 22 boys in the former and 19 girls in the latter institution. Their care costs the state $10,010.51. There is no doubt that many of the girls and boys in these two institutions are there from the influence of the saloon on themselves or on their homes. But we will not charge any part of this expenditure to the liquor traffic.

Lest some think alcohol is not such a prolific cause of crime, let us call attention to the following facts. Of the 384 prisoners admitted to the northern Indiana prison, 39 were temperate in their use of alcohol, 46 were moderate drinkers and 199 were excessive users of alcoholic beverages. Of 263 women admitted to the Indiana women's prison, 206 were drunks or drunks and prostitutes. Of the 512 received at Jeffersonville prison, 238 were temperate in their use, 226 were moderate and 48 excessive in their use of alcohol. When we know that Jeffersonville receives all of the young offenders, the majority being under 25 years of age, we are not to be surprised that few have become excessive drinkers. One does not have to be an excessive user of alcohol to be fired to do a crime.

Prohibition Kansas has 53 of her county jails empty and no inmates in her penitentiaries from 65 counties. Our jail is continually crowded. In many of her counties there has been no jury criminal trial for ten years.

In wet New York, of 49,423 arrests, 30,509 were for drunks.

By the records of 1890 of every 100 criminals arrested, 20 were non-users of alcohol and 80 were drinkers. Holland attributes 80 per cent. of her crime to drink. Sweeden 75 per cent, and France 50 per cent. to the same cause.

Our Insane.

The best scientific authorities attribute 20 to 24 per cent. of insanity among men to the use of alcoholic beverages, and 6 per cent of the insanity of women to the same cause.

Allen county has 147 inmates in our insane asylums. The total cost for their maintenance was $29,686.65. Figuring 20 per cent. of the men and 6 per cent. of the women insane through the influence of alcohol, we have a cost for Allen county's alcoholic insane, the sum of $4,021.84.

Our Feeble Minded.

Allen county has 53 children in the Indiana school for feeble minded youths. Their maintenance costs $7,841.35. Persons in position to know attribute 12½ to 15 per cent. of feeble mindedness to alcoholism on the part of the parents. The larger per cent. are from feeble minded parents. Feeble mindedness is inherited, a feeble minded family, when it is once established, may produce many feeble minded individuals in successive generations. The cause of the feeble minds of many of the feeble minded children of today can no longer be determined. The initial cause occurred generations ago. In many cases now accredited to hereditary feeble mindedness the initial cause was alcoholism. We will charge alcohol with the 12½ per cent. known to be due to alcoholism. This gives us the sum of $980.16 to care for Allen county's alcoholic feeble minded.

Our Other Dependents.

Allen county has 7 epileptics in the village for epileptics at New Castle, Ind. Their care cost the state $1,845.83. About 16 2-3 per cent. of the cases of epilepsy are accredited to alcoholism. This would give us a charge of $307.64 for the care of epileptics produced by alcohol. There are very many epileptics in the county that are cared for by the families of which they are members.

Allen county has 16 inmates in the soldiers' home at Lafayette. Their maintenance costs the state $3,458.72. Some of these inmates have become wards of the state because of alcohol. We will not charge any of this against the liquor business, however.

Costs Not Estimated.

This investigation is by no means complete. We have made no estimate of the loss of wages through loss of employment by those who drink. Neither have we estimated losses through industrial accidents traceable to drink. Very recently in one of our large industries a man occasioned quite a loss by the destruction of materials. He was drinking.

We have not estimated the loss of wages of the men shut up in our jails. No estimate was made of the expenditures for relief of poor of the churches of the county other than those in Fort Wayne.

Totals.

Omitting all unestimated losses to the community, we have an expenditure of over $128,000 traceable to the liquor business.

We do not infer, however, that all the above expenditures attributed to the influence of liquor would cease the moment the liquor traffic is eliminated. For many years we will have to continue paying for the care of our criminals and paupers that were the products of our saloons. But unless we abolish the saloon we are going to be compelled to invest still greater sums in jails, almshouses and asylums.

Gentlemen, are drinks so essential to you that you are unwilling to give them up for the greater good of our country? Many of you would shoulder a gun and face hardships and death to repel an invading enemy. Such an one would be mainly and personal and you would serve your country by serving [illegible] the liquor traffic and then [illegible]

NEWS OF FORT WAYNE'S NEIGHBORS

Auburn, Ind., July 22.—James Muzzillo, fruit merchant of Garrett, dropped into the county clerk's office Friday and asked for a marriage license. This venturesome young man did not want the newspapers to get onto what he was after. He is a native of Sunny Italy, never was married and is 28 years of age. The prospective bride called at the clerk's office and signed the necessary blanks. She gave her name as Mrs. Nellie Schoaf, her age as 56, and her residence as Garrett.

HEARS OF BROTHER'S DEATH.

Hartford City, Ind., July 22.—Mrs. Alonzo Atkinson, living southwest of the city, has just received word of the death of her brother, Robert Sexton, 31, which occurred July 6, at Van Buren, Ark. Not until she received word of the death did Mrs. Atkinson know her brother's whereabouts, for she had not heard from him for eleven years. The news of the death was brought to Mrs. Atkinson this week by George Sexton, another brother whom she had not heard from or seen for eight years. The brothers and sister became separated years ago, after the death of their father, Robert Sexton, who lived near Albany. At the time of his death the brother was attending a medical school at Van Buren, Ark., while his family was residing with his wife's parents, at Richmond, Ind. The cause of death was a fever, with which he was only ill a few days. Interment was made at Albany, Ind.

JUMPS FROM AUTO.

Warsaw, Ind., July 22.—Miss Dora B. Wertz, bookkeeper at the H. B. Sykes store and a member of the picnic party to Lake Wawasee, sustained painful injuries when she jumped from an automobile while en route home from the picnic. One bone in her left ankle was fractured and another was crushed. The accident occurred at Syracuse. The driver of the automobile in which Miss Mertz was a passenger had driven past the right road home and when her attention was called to the fact, she stopped the machine and reversed the engine. Miss Wertz, who was also sitting in the front seat, became nervous and when the machine struck a stump she jumped. She was assisted to the office of Dr. Hoy in Syracuse and after her ankle was tightly bandaged was able to continue the trip home.

MAY DAM RIVER

Huntington, Ind., July 22.—As result of the constantly increasing consumption of water in this city each year, Huntington is now pumping water from wells that were formerly flowing springs. The water head has sunk to forty-seven feet below the surface since a few years ago when it was only forty-one feet underground, according to John F. Fulton, superintendent of the city water works. When asked as to what would be a remedy and check to the sinking of the water head, Mr. Fulton said: "I would recommend the construction of a dam in the Wabash river just below the wells. This is the only thing that will conserve our water supply and it should be done soon."

THREATENED WITH LOCKJAW.

Columbia City, July 22.—Kitty Belle, the little 8-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Stickler, near Peabody, who ran a nail in her foot several days ago, is threatened with lockjaw. The small injury made by the nail apparently healed over and was thought to be all right, but Tuesday she complained of a headache and showed signs of high fever. Later in the evening Dr. Ben P. Linvill was summoned and found a serious case. He made a hurried trip back to town for anti-toxine, which was given the little girl, and her foot was lanced for the removal of all the poison. Friday she was reported as a little better, but there is still danger of tetanus.

NEW TEACHER AT BLUFFTON.

Bluffton, Ind., July 22.—John Edris, a member of the class of '14 of the Bluffton high school, was elected yesterday afternoon by the school board to take the sixth grade in the Central school during the coming school term. Mr. Edris has been a student at Indiana university for two years past and has done some supply work in the local schools and has been very successful in performing these duties. The policy of the board has been to have two men in the Central building in addition to the principal, in order to better supervise the playground.

FAMILY REUNION AT DELPHOS

Delphos, O., July 22—At the annual reunion of the Point family, held in Scott's park, east of Delphos, Thursday, the election of officers was held, a local man being selected as the president of the association, and several other Delphos people being chosen for other offices. The election resulted as follows: President, W. C. Point, Delphos; vice president, Robert Point, Delphos; secretary, Mrs. James Point, Delphos; treasurer, Mrs. Frank Herminghuysen, sr., Middle Point; executive committee, Will Point, John Wirt, Mrs. Dane Long and Mrs. R. Point.

CARRIES BULLET TWO WEEKS.

Bluffton, Ind., July 22.—Harry Wall, 7, a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Wall, accidentally shot himself in the palm of his right hand two weeks ago with an airgun. The parents thought the bullet had not remained in the flesh, but when the hand refused to heal and began to swell he was taken to a physician, and today the bullet had to be cut out, having lodged near the base of two fingers. Blood poison is threatened from the infection, and the hand and arm are swollen.

HOME IS IN CELINA.

Portland, Ind., July 22.—The identity of the lad who robbed the Finley Myers country home, west of the city, last Sunday, and has since been in the county jail here, was established with the arrival of a brother from Celina, O. The boy gave his name as Frank Stolzenbeck when arrested and said he lived at Toledo, O. It develops that he is Albert Gurloch, of Celina, O. His brother, Edwin Gurloch, came here to his rescue, but the boy is still in jail.

MADE ILL BY PAINTS

Hartford City, Ind., July 22.—Delores Claytor, little daughter of William Claytor, of North Jefferson street, was made critically ill for some time Friday afternoon when the child swallowed a small amount of the crayon paints which are used by the children in school. The child is less than two years old. The attending physician was present at the Claytor home for nearly an hour before the child's sickness could be relieved, but the tot is now much improved and able to play.

SENT TO PENAL FARM.

Bluffton, Ind., July 22.—Judge W. H. Eichhorn has found it necessary to recall the sentence of thirty days confinement pronounced in January on Jack Hankins, when the latter again came before his notice on the charge of drunkenness. Judge Eichhorn this time made it a trip to the penal farm, and with the old sentence of thirty days and the time laid out by his inability to pay a fine, Jack will no doubt get about forty-five days on the farm.

BARN HIT BY LIGHTNING.

Hicksville, O., July 22.—A barn on the farm of John McCormick on the Antwerp road, was struck by lightning during the electrical storm this week and burned to the ground. The structure was filled with hay and all the contents, including farm machinery, harness and some oats, were destroyed. Nine hundred dollars in insurance was carried. William Wolf, who lives on the place, was also a loser.

MARRIED IN MICHIGAN.

Decatur, Ind., July 22.—Mr. and Mrs. Tone Andrews are home from Hillsdale, Mich., where they were united in holy bonds of matrimony. They will live on a farm. Mrs. Andrews was formerly Miss Addie Kline, daughter of John Kline, of near Peterson. The Klines moved here four months ago and purchased the Zimmerman farm. Mr. Andrews is a son of C. M. Andrews, near Peterson.

FORD CAR STOLEN.

Bluffton, Ind., July 22.—A Ford automobile belonging to Homer Clark, rural mail carrier, route 9, was stolen from a barn at his home. Mr. Clark did not miss the machine until this morning, when he went to get it to start on his regular mail trip. The barn door was standing open, showing that the thief or thieves had made a hurried departure.

SAVED BY PRESENCE OF MIND.

Hartford City, Ind., July 22.—"Red" Luce escaped serious injuries when he was run down, while riding a wheel, by the Abbott truck. The young man held on beneath the truck and thus saved himself from serious injuries.

CALLED TO DETROIT.

HOW POTASH IS OBTAINED FROM KELP.

Kelp is cut by a sea-going mower, brought ashore and reduced to potash and other products by a refining process. Nearly 90 per cent. of kelp is water. The process for reducing it consists chiefly in evaporating the water and then, by a grinding and chemical process, separating the residue into its component parts.

(BY MARK LARKIN.)

(Staff Correspondent.)

San Diego, Cal., July 22.—Making hay at sea is the new and interesting industry of kelp harvesting, which has sprung up along the western coast line.

Millions of dollars have been invested in this business of reaping the crops on the ocean floor and yet it is only a makeshift. This vast expenditure is a temporary means of obtaining potash in this country. When the war is over potash will again be imported from Germany for less than it can be produced under present methods.

Kelp is a seaweed growing in gigantic beds on the Pacific ocean bottom close in shore, from Alaska to the end of Lower California. Some of the beds cover many thousands of acres. Huge sea-going mowers, not unlike the machines used on land for cutting grain are employed in kelp harvesting.

The industry has built up a new romance in ocean work and is a calling as hazardous and adventurous as that of the deep sea fishermen. It is a job that breeds a hard-fisted, brawny type of manhood.

The kelp harvester, with his hip boots, oilskins and sou'wester hat looks like a fisherman, but he is really a hay-maker of the sea. Perched high on his cumbersome harvester, he goes rolling and swaying through the water, cutting a 40-foot swath of kelp, cursing when wind and current whip the weeds from the range of his sickle.

Kelp is cut at a depth of six feet. When the wind is blowing hard currents are created in the water, interfering with successful harvesting. The sea farmer has as much trouble with wind as his brother on the land. It is almost impossible to cut in the teeth of the wind, since the harvester can't make headway against heavy seas. When the fog is thick there is danger of running ashore to be pounded to pieces by the surf.

"It's no job for a ribbon counter clerk," said Capt. H. Watson, skipper of the Aliceil, the biggest kelp harvester on the Pacific. "It's work for a man with strength in his arms and a mouthful of good American cuss words. Whether the harvester's standing on her beam's end or wallowing in the trough of the seas, a man must have grip and grit enough to hang on without being tied. The fishing game is child's play compared with kelp harvesting."

Capt. Watson's machine has a capacity of 500,000 tons, but if a machine brings in 200,000 tons a day, it is considered good work.

Potash is not the only product of kelp. The Hercules Powder company, of this city, extracts chemicals from kelp to use in the manufacture of explosives; potash being considered only a by-product. Swife & Co., operating here, consider potash their main product. They use it in the manufacture of fertilizer.

Kelp also produces iodine, acetone and cellulose, the latter being used in the manufacture of photographic films celluloid, artificial silk and paper.

"No one can say whether the kelp cutting industry has come to stay," said S. G. Smith, manager of the Swift plant. "After the war potash can be obtained from Germany much cheaper than we can reap it from the sea. Our hope is to be repaid for money invested before the war ends. This industry is really a big business gamble. If the war ends suddenly, we lose."

The United States department of agriculture has investigated the kelp beds of the Pacific and as a result federal regulation of the use of the beds may be established.

RUDISILL PAVING ADDS TO HARRISON HILL

The prospect of the rapid completion of the paving of Rudisill is attracting many prospective purchasers to Harrison Hill, the new addition located just south of the boulevard on Calhoun street. How rapidly this paving is being completed few people realize. The curb and gutter has been finished on the entire north side and on the south side between Piqua and Calhoun street, while the remainder of the south side will probably be completed by to-night or the fore part of next week at the latest. All grading has been completed on the south side of Rudisill and the gang on this work has now finished the north side as far as South Wayne avenue. The remainder of this side will be completed within the next ten days. The completion of this work will open up the finest driveway in this section of the country and is bound to increase the values of Harrison Hill property. Full details regarding this feature may be secured from the promoters of the addition, Hilgemann & Schaaf, North American building.

Elsworth Cramer and others from Paulding were here Friday circulating a petition that a vote be taken on the abolishment of the office of probate judge. This office pays a monthly salary of about $190. The work of the office is to be transferred to the common pleas court, which would lighten the expense unless the salary would be transferred also. In that case, it would be unfair to James Pugh and others, who are candidates for the office just at a time when it "looks good" to them.

The electrical storm Thursday put the electric light system out of commission and Thursday night our merchants and others had to resort to the old standby, the coaloil lamp. It reminded the old settler of days gone by and the friendships cultivated and stories told around the grocery stove by the then dazzling light of a bracket lamp with a tin reflector.

THE weekly wash is by no means an easy task, and whoever does the work is entitled to the latest appliances for making it less a labor and as agreeable as possible.

This can be done by having us install "Standard" porcelain enameled laundry trays. Call and have us show you why.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. DAILY BIBLE READINGS FOR THE HOME

1 Corinthians, 9:16-27.

16. For though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!
17. For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward: but if against my will, a dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me.
18. What is my reward then? Verily that, when I preach the gospel, I may make the gospel of Christ without charge, that I abuse not my power in the gospel.
19. For though I be free from all men, yet have I made myself servant unto all, that I might gain the more.
20. And unto the Jews I became as a Jew, that I might gain the Jews; to them that are under the law, as under the law, that I might gain them that are under the law;
21. To them that are without law, as without law, (being not without law to God, but under the law to Christ,) that I might gain them that are without law.
22. To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak: I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some.
23. And this I do for the gospel's sake, that I might be partaker thereof with you.
24. Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run, that ye may obtain.
25. And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all thing. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible.
26. I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air:
27. But I keep under my body, and bring it unto subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway.

Mr. Hanly's Nomination.

They're still coming to Indiana for national ticket timber. The renomination of Mr. Marshall for the vice presidency by the democrats and the republican choice of Mr. Fairbanks as the running mate for Mr. Hughes has now been followed by the selection of J. Frank Hanly as the prohibition standard-bearer this year, with Dr. Ira Landreth, of Tennessee, on the tail of the ticket.

It is one of the queer turns and twists of American politics that puts Mr. Hanly forward as the candidate of the cold water folk. Here in Indiana we came to know Mr. Hanly as one of the most uncompromising of republicans, elected by that party as governor of Indiana, and in those days a stalwart of the stalwarts. His official course—particularly his insistence upon a county option law—put him "in bad" with his party leaders, and their favorite diversion for some years has been lying awake o' nights to most cordially hate him. Then Mr. Hanly became to all intents and purposes a progressive. No longer ago than the spring of the present year Mr. Hanly accepted the nomination for governor on the bull moose ticket, with the stipulation that the party platform must not contain certain cardinal progressive doctrines to which he found himself unable to subscribe. When the progressive national convention refused to incorporate national prohibition in its platform, Mr. Hanly withdrew from the Indiana state ticket.

The next number, ladies and gentlemen, presents Mr. Hanly as a full-fledged prohibitionist and as the nominee of his party for the presidency. Yet, after all, the political transition which has landed Mr. Hanly in command of the prohibition ranks is a perfectly logical evolution in his case. He has been for many years an ardent temperance man. Following his term as governor he devoted himself to platform work in the interest of the Anti-Saloon league and kindred organization conducting a militant fight against the liquor power. More than that, he has come to be recognized as heavy artillery in the temperance cause, for he possesses platform power of singular force and effectiveness, and he hits hard.

On the whole, both Mr. Hanly and his party are to be congratulated upon the nomination. Mr. Hanly doesn't expect to be elected, but his party will get the benefit of the services of a seasoned and skilled campaigner, and Mr. Hanly will have the pleasure of officially championing a cause to which his devotion is unquestioned. Besides, a presidential nomination can scarcely operate as a bear factor in fixing the fee for platform addresses after the present campaign is over.

The official report of Major General Bliss to the general effect that the Texas camps to which the national guardsmen of Indiana and other states have been sent for duty along the border are in excellent condition, will do much to relieve the friends of the militiamen back home. Dispatches have already carried many stories of complaint as to both accommodations and equipment, and there have been intimations that sanitary conditions were by no means up to the standard. The regular army officer's report is indirect contradiction to all of these, and as a matter of fact, the army officers are probably correct. The health service of the army is one of the most efficient of the governmental departments, and we do not believe it will fail in providing every safeguard for the troops on border duty.

Indiana progressives who bolted the plan to nominate a state ticket this year have already gotten the machinery of a new political organization in working order. It bears the titular designation of the Progressive League of Indiana, and is under the leadership of Jackson Boyd, Clarence R. Martin and William Holton Dye, the latter being the Indiana member of the national committee who was tossed overboard for his part in sanctioning the Hughes-bull moose deal at Chicago. Well, what would Indiana politics be without some insurgents, anyway?

Allied representatives are said to entertain the opinion that the United States, having recognized the Deutschland as a merchantman, would be liable to indemnity for damage in case the commercial submarine should suddenly change her mind, pluck armament from the air by means of some mysterious legerdemain and ravage peaceful shipping on the high seas. Can you beat that for diplomatic ingenuity?

Authorities agree that the Lincoln highway is rapidly become the main street of the nation, and estimates show that $4,000,000 has already been expended in the improvement of the road. Allen county, too, can take pride in the reflection that she has had a part in the splendid effort.

Regardless of the outcome of the graft trials at Muncie, that town is doubtless going to feel much better after the pretty thorough ventilation it is receiving.

"Remember Boy!"

GOOD ADVICE.

Girlie, let that guy alone who loves you on the telephone! You have talked to him enough, silly, mushy, gushy stuff; and you're making people sick, babbling to that phoney hick! Yes, you think it's kind of cute, "just to entertain the brute." Silly, silly, simple kid, how you cackle through your lid! Get a guy who'll come and talk right out yonder on the walk, let him prattle low or loud, on the porch or in the crowd, let him talk of what you like, only, for the love of Mike, don't make everybody groan, spooning on the telephone!

Fellow on the other end, have you countless hours to spend? Quit your boresome, goofy talk, rest the phone, and take a walk! Toddle home and love your wife, just for once in your pied life! —CHARLES B. DRISCOLL.

ON THE RIGHT TRACK.

(South Bend Tribune.)

Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the Indiana state board of health, continues to press his campaign for county health officers who shall devote their entire time to the business of looking after the health and sanitary conditions of his county. That such legislation should be enacted we believe to be wise. There is argument, too, that these men should be appointed, after examination, by the state board of health, provided proper precautions are taken to prevent insofar as possible the building up of a personal political machine.

The argument is strong that these health officers should be supreme in the county, having jurisdiction even of the cities. In this way much of the clash of opinion and variance of orders would be eliminated. Such a county health officer should, however, be empowered, like the prosecuting attorney, to name his deputies in the towns outside the county seat.

We are not exactly certain just what Dr. Hurty's opinion on the salaries of these men should be. But they should be sufficient to obtain the services of good and competent men. Perhaps $1,000 might be sufficient for counties of less than 20,000 population; but it is doubtful if the right sort of man could be found for St. Joseph county for less than $2,500 to $3,000 and deputy hire. This may seem a bit high, yet the prosecutor of St. Joseph county receives $3,500 and $2,800 deputy allowance, and surely it is as important to preserve the public health as the public order. Dr. Hurty is on the right track.

INVESTIGATES CHARGES.

Chicago, Ill., July 21.—Investigation of charges brought against two physicians employed by the health department who were charged with attempting to extort money from immigrants whose children they examined for infantile paralysis, was begun today by the city civil service commission. Morris Broidie testified that he paid the physicians $1 for examining his infant son. The physicians admitted having examined the child but denied that they had taken any money.

OFFICERS ARE ADVANCED.

Washington, D. C., July 21.—Colonel John W. Ruckman, of the coast artillery, was today nominated to be brigadier general and Lieutenant Colonel Samuel Reber, of the signal corps, was nominated for colonel.

CANDIDATE IS FINED.

Butte, Mont., July 22.—Arthur Reimer, of Boston, socialist labor party, candidate for president of the United States, was fined $10 in the municipal court here yesterday for violating the city ordinance by speaking in a down town street. The fine was suspended by the magistrate. Reimer conducted his own defense, asserting he was the victim of discrimination.

GIRL WEDS RESCUER.

South Bend, Ind., July 22.—The marriage of William Robert Mays, jr., and Miss Esther Watkins here was the culmination of a courtship which began at Hudson lake two weeks ago when Mays rescued Miss Watkins from drowning.

AIN'T NATURE WONDERFUL?

Unnatural History, by Eugene Ahern.

THE TOUGH BIRD.

He walks around stoop-shouldered and drags his feet like a fly doing a "Weston" over fly paper.

What's the matter with the boob, Arthur; what's the idea in trying to be a bad guy; what is he going to get out of it?

Oh, he thinks it's just the candy to be hard-boiled; he imagines people admire him for it.

Tough birds always travel in gangs; they like to get a name over the surrounding territory as a bunch of holy terrors, always looking for a scrap—and maybe they can't battle!

But if you ever met one of the tough birds alone away from his gang he'd have a yellow streak that'd make the milky way look like a crack on the head of a pin.

No, Raymond, don't wallop the next tough bird you see on the head, or you'll get your hand full of slivers.

MILLION ACRES TO BE THROWN OPEN TO ENTRY

New Agricultural Lands Soon Available in the Coast States.

Portland, Ore., July 22.—Approximately one million acres of agricultural lands of the Oregon and California land grant will be thrown open to entry and settlement by fall, it was announced here today by the United States land office. Settlers will be permitted to file on tracts of 160 acres each, paying the government $2.50 an acre. These lands, which were granted to the Oregon and California Railroad company have been in litigation for years, the company having refused to carry out the terms of the grant. The government sued to enforce the terms and won the case in the United States supreme court. Recently congress passed an enabling act to restore the lands to entry but the Southern Pacific company, which succeeded to the interests of the Oregon and California company, has served notice that it would refuse to abide by the act, and that it intended to fight the case anew through the courts.

An automobile museum has been established in London, where there are exhibited gasoline cars, made as early as 1895, a steam tricycle made in 1891, and one of the earliest steam cars, made in 1860.

During July and August we will close at 5 o'clock on week days and six o'clock on Saturdays.

DO YOUR CANNING EARLY IS NEW PLEA

Campaign is Launched by National Housewives' League.

New York, July 22.—A campaign urging housewives throughout the country to "do your canning early," was begun today by the national executive committee of the Housewives' league. The committee's statement says: "The housewives of the country are losing an opportunity to save money for themselves and for the producer in not canning the usual amount of fruit at this season. The reason given is the high price of sugar, although it is only three cents above the normal quotation. This is a home-canning season if there ever was one and we ask women everywhere to fill their own larders with delicious home made canned fruit, which will produce both economy and health in the family and greatly aid the producers of fruit."

Fruit is cheap this year, the appeal adds, and next year commercial canned fruit will be higher "on account of the increase in the cost of tin."

Germany now has iron money in circulation.

Our best recommendation "Hol-Tayto-Loaf" Bread.

MOOSERS THREATEN TO GO INTO COURTS

Syracuse, N. Y., July 22.—Progressive leaders gathered here for the meeting of the state committee this afternoon threaten to go into the courts if any action is taken to place the name of Charles E. Hughes or those of the republican presidential electors on the progressive ballot in New York state.

Chairman John J. O'Connell, of the New York county committee said today that joint mandamus and injunction proceedings would be brought if an attempt is made to carry out in this state the action of the progressive national committee. The state committee, according to Mr. O'Connell, will be enjoined from placing the names of Hughes and Fairbanks on the state ticket and it will be mandamused to meet and name presidential electors for John M. Parker, the progressive nominee for vice president. Committees to bring about the nomination of Judge Samuel Seabury of the court of appeals for governor in opposition to Governor Whitman have been appointed in several counties.

In spite of O'Connell's prediction the indications are that Hughes will be endorsed.

Bainbridge Colby arrived here this morning and immediately issued a statement in which he stated that a number of former Hughes appointees were here working tooth and nail in an effort to deliver the progressive machinery to the republicans. He said Hughes' leaders among the progressives were attempting to "garrote and coerce others to follow them."

Were it not for the numerous diversions and attractions of the Country club, Madame Society would find life fairly dull these midsummer days. As it is she can go to that attractive spot and have a good time and forget that she is not going abroad on account of the war, not to the seashore because it is so warm, nor to the lakes because she went there last summer.

At the Country club Madame Society can watch the bridge tournament that comes to an end next Wednesday afternoon and for which very handsome prizes have been provided for the winners. "It is going to be quite the fair thing," said Madame to her caller. TENNIS FOR THE BEGINNERS

(THE THIRD OF A SERIES OF TENNIS, POSED ESPECIALLY FOR THE SENTINEL BY MISS FLORENCE A. BALLIN OF BRYN MAWR COLLEGE, THE 1916 SENSATION OF TENNIS, HOCKEY AND BASKETBALL STAR.)

In making the forehand stroke the racquet should be held almost horizontal and straight out in the line of the arm. Thus you will reach over to hit low balls instead of scooping them with the racquet. Tighten your grip on your racquet as you swing back and the wrist will govern direction. A snap of the wrist often adds effectiveness to the stroke.

It is essential that you get the right swing in execution and you cannot accomplish this unless you are in the proper position. Rely upon the forehand stroke to return practically all ground balls on your right hand.

Assume a position facing the plane of the approaching ball, poise your weight on your right foot and as the ball bounds from the ground swing your racquet well behind your back, then, while balanced, swing the racquet around so it will strike the ball just before it completes the bounce.

Simultaneously with the impact of racquet and ball your body should be going forward, your weight on your left foot. Be sure to carry the stroke through until your racquet is across your body.

To obtain the whole force of your arm and body, catch the ball when it is opposite or even a little less past you.

BREWERY STRIKE IS OFF; FOREMAN QUITS

Workers Return to Posts When William Breuer, Jr., Resigns.

With the resignation of William Breuer, jr., son of William Breuer, vice-president of the Berghoff Brewing company, and over whose actions as foreman at the plant of the brewery company about 250 members of the brewery workers' and beer drivers' union declared a strike Friday, there was a settlement of the trouble Friday night in Bartenders' hall, 619 Calhoun street, and the men were at their posts Saturday. The strikers demanded the resignation of Breuer, declaring he continually "rushed" them and insisted on helping load cars in violation of union agreement.

The strike lasted twenty-four hours and is the longest time the brewery workers at Berghoff's have been on a walkout since M. C. Norton became general manager of the brewing company three years ago. Mr. Norton says there have been slight difficulties lasting a few minutes of a morning prior to starting work, but a strike was never declared.

Fair to Labor.

The Berghoff Brewing company is not in opposition to organized labor, Mr. Norton states, and the union men do not so consider the company, it is declared, following the strike adjustment. The strike was caused by the action of individuals rather than by any open rupture between union men and the brewing company, it is asserted. The joint local executive board of the brewery workers and drivers' union, which had charge of the walkout consisted of Albert Langer, Fred Roth, Albert Ekerle, Joseph Curtis, Jesse Walker, Peter Ladig and Henry Schwehn, secretary.

There has been a rush, it is declared, at the Berghoff Brewing company since the heat wave set in, and the force has been taxed to fill orders. Speeding up deliveries and urging men to harder tasks, as well as alleged violation of the union agreement by one of the foremen, led to the strike.

PLAGUE DEATH MARK AT HIGHEST TOTAL

Thirty-Nine Children Die and 135 New Cases Come in Twenty-Four Hours.

New York, July 22.—There were more deaths in the epidemic of paralysis during the last twenty-four hours than at any time since the inception of the disease four weeks ago. Since 10 a. m. yesterday the plague killed thirty-nine children in the five boroughs of New York city. There were 135 new cases.

The plague took a big stride in Manhattan, where there were ten deaths, the largest number yet reported. In the Bronx also the disease gained, where there were five deaths. A marked increase was shown in Brooklyn, the seat of disease and cases and deaths in the other boroughs indicated that the epidemic, aided by a wave of high humidity was becoming more widespread.

INDIANAPOLIS FIRES CAUSE $58,000 DAMAGE

Indianapolis, Ind., July 22.—Two downtown fires that occurred almost simultaneously about 8 o'clock last night at the Citizens' Relief Ice company's plant at 915 East North street and the Gibson company's auto sales office at 416 North Capitol avenue, caused a loss estimated at approximately $58,000, a loss of $50,000 being suffered by the auto company. Capt. William Grady of Engine company No. 8 was compelled to jump from a high shed at the ice plant fire and suffered a broken leg. Seven horses were burned to death in this fire. About 100 automobiles at the Gibson concern were saved without damage.

The ice company fire, the first of the two, was in the barn at North and Economy streets, running along the Big Four railroad line. The origin of the fire is unknown. The barn was about a block long and was burning fiercely before the first companies reached it from headquarters, which is only a few blocks away. Eight horses were in the barn, but the flames were so hot and the smoke so dense that spectators who had gathered feared to go into the place again after they had saved one of the horses, and the others perished. A large quantity of hay and other supplies was in the barn and was destroyed.

WILL PICK MEN FROM HUNTINGTON CAVALRY

Fort Wayne Battery D May Be Largely Augmented from This Source.

Enthusiastic and patriotic sons of Huntington formed a cavalry troop but Adjutant General Bridges would not accept them, stating that he wanted artillery before he did cavalry and suggested that the boys who had expressed their willingness to serve Uncle Sam should join the Fort Wayne battery. Captain John Scheffer and several other recruiting officers will go to Huntington Saturday evening and will muster into the service those who desire to enter. The cavalry had reached a membership of 103 men and it is presumed that the local organization will be largely augmented from this source.

The recruiting officers returned from a two days' trip to small towns in the vicinity of Fort Wayne Friday evening. They were well repaid for their labor and came back with about twenty more new men. This makes the total membership in Battery D nearly 125, eight less than required peace strength.

Nothing definite has been received from local authorities as to when the new battery will be called. It is presumed, however, that before another week has gone by the boys will be quartered at Fort Riley, Kansas.

Sunday afternoon many of the men will march in the funeral procession of Private Floyd Wolf, who met his death by drowning at Mercedes, Texas.

PATRIOTIC FUNERAL FOR PRIVATE WOLF

The remains of Private Floyd Wolf, of company E, who was drowned while in bathing near Mercedes, Texas, last Monday, arrived in Fort Wayne Friday evening at 5 o'clock. All arrangements have been completed for a patriotic and military funeral, which will be held Sunday afternoon. Services at the residence, 1626 East Wayne street, at 1:30 o'clock and at the First M. E. church at 2 o'clock.

All patriotic bodies and organizations and ex-members of company E, battery B and new members of battery D will meet at the recruiting station, on East Wayne street, at 1:30 o'clock and will march to the church at 1:45.

The Electro-Technic band kindly donated its service to furnish patriotic music. A firing squad of company E will attend the funeral and the six honorary pall bearers will be chosen from the ranks of the company.

Trumpeter Harry Weisbecker, late of the Fifteenth United States cavalry, and Charles Tesselman, of the Thirteenth United States cavalry, will sound taps at the grave.

MATERIALS COMBINED FOR THE SURF SUIT

THE vogue for using a combination of plain and figured material is not by any means limited to street and dress costumes, as this very smart bathing suit will bear witness. Here you have before you a charming conception of what can be done with a dark-blue taffeta and a green-and-blue plaid.

The blouses and deep peplum are made in one piece and are laid in rather deep side pleats. These pleats are held in at the waistline with a belt of the plaid taffeta. The advantage of a one-piece suit of this sort is that the belt may be placed wherever it is the most becoming to one's figure, as there is no reason why it cannot be dropped or raised at will. You will see that there are no sleeves to this suit, as the pleats on the shoulder are allowed to droop gracefully over the upper arm.

Something on the order of a fichu, but without the bunchiness of a fichu is fashioned of the plaid silk to tie about the neck, with balls of green silk to finish the ends. A pleated underskirt of the plaid skirt serves to hide the knickers, which clasp tightly at the knee, as most bathing-bloomers do this season.

With dark-blue shoes and green stockings and a tight cap of rubber, covered with a scarf of the plaid silk, and a detachable rim of dark-blue rubber, this bathing costume will be smart enough to grace the most fastidious beach gathering.

As a suggestion, you might lengthen the one-piece blouse and peplum, omit the plaid skirt and finish the bloomers off with scarfs of the plaid silk tied in handkerchief knots.

SPECIAL PLAYS FOR SUMMER DAYS

UP IN the country and down by the sea are equally good places to play, and if you look hard enough you can find water, and even sand, in the mountains as well as by the ocean. So for that reason sand and water toys are popular with all.

Of course, there are all sorts of tin molds for the sandpile maker. There are fishes and birds and beasts, and besides that, tins tinted in all the natural shades of lucious fruit. Square molds are finished with a cameo design in the middle making the youthful sand worker believe that he is completing a real work of art. Buckets, gayly painted, and strong substantial shovels and rakes should not be omitted from the catalogue.

If you are not satisfied with these and would like to haul the sand away, you can have a truck automobile, built entirely of wood, and capable of holding an extra heavy load. There are games of quoits to play on the shore or in country, and parachute bows and arrows, that send up tiny parachutes to the never-ending delight of the youngsters.

Brightly painted wooden animals and people are sure of standing up because they have wooden spikes attached to stick into Mother Earth.

Of course, one must mention the seesaws that differ from the old-time ones in having corners rounded, polish applied to avoid nasty splinters, and a bar for the timid ones to grasp.

There is a sliding board as high and as long as you like, and an ingenious little wheeled cart on which you can sit and ride down a red track. This gives you a start to send you rolling right over the country, almost as far as you'd like to go.

FASHIONGRAMS

THE large hat with a high crown and drooping brim is a graceful promise for early fall styles in felt and velvet.

Gloves to match the shoes seem to be another phase of the matching fad. Pearl gray and biscuit-colored kid, with loose wrists to fit over the sleeves, are among advance glove fashions.

Plastrons, as the French call the chemisettes which fit over the frock instead of under, are coming into vogue again. Sometimes they are scarcely more than the long flat jabot or stole collar.

A big lace season is promised for fall and winter. The laces will be retained principally for evening wear, however, and will number many new metallic effects.

Velvet fruit for millinery in the shape of peaches, pears, apples and grapes is appropriate surely for the autumn hat!

Here is a new fabric for the sportswoman. It has a right side, with a satin finish of high luster in any bright sports color, while the back is a close imitation of leather. Either side can be used, or they may be used in combination.

Fancy skirts to be worn with dressy blouses are coming back to favor. The princess skirt or the skirt with bretelles comes under this head.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

Bathing Suit

Is taffeta used for bathing suits? How would you make and trim a black bathing suit of this material? Mrs. W. R.

Taffeta of a good quality is suitable for bathing suits. Make a full circular skirt, with as many narrow ruffles on it as you wish. Attach this to a surplice waist and finish the neck with a narrow quilling.

Outing Hat

Please give me several easy ways of trimming a hat for sports wear. I do not want anything too elaborate. Miss E. E. W.

A band of striped ribbon, or flowers painted or worked in wool on the crown are easy and effective ways to trim a hat. Or if you have an effectively colored bandanna handkerchief, drape it loosely over the crown and weight the ends with jet beads.

ORGANDIE AND TAFFETA COMBINED

EVERY one has need for a silk street dress even in the midst of summer months. There are dreary, rainy days when one cannot possibly wear a light washable frock and look respectable. For such a purpose the frock pictured would prove most serviceable. It is made of dark blue taffeta. The bodice is very striking, being made on modified basque lines. This impression is gained because of the fact that the front section is drawn tightly around to the back where it is tied in a huge bow.

It is rather unusual to see organdie used on silk as it is here seen. A ruching of the organdie tops the heading of the gathered skirt and trims the sleeves near the cuffs. The crisp material is again used to fashion the deep collar, which is scarcely visible, in front.

A frock of this type would prove most satisfactory, since it would carry one well into the fall days and allow one time to select the best of the new fashions which will then be launched.

PARASOL NOVELTY

ARE you looking for something new in parasols? Here is a novelty that is most attractive. It seems that there has been a Japanese invasion of novelties and decorations, for these parasols are made of Japanese silk and embroidered in fetching colors. These are made exactly the same as the paper parasol with the soft wood ribs and bamboo handles. One of the nicest features of these parasols is that they can be carried with either a fancy dress or with a sports costume. In fact, for all occasions, they are convenient and becoming.

CALL IT MERELY A PLEA TO GAIN TIME

Cleveland, Ohio, July 22.—The following statement was issued today by the Transportation Brotherhoods:

The proposition of the railroads to refer the demands of the railway brotherhoods for an eight hour day to the interstate commerce commission is nothing but a proposition to gain time for the railroads and to waste time for the men.

The interstate commerce commission is not equipped to undertake this task. In order to undertake it the interstate commerce commission act would have to be radically amended by congress. Such an amendment would require at least a month for passage, and upon its passage several months would be required before the commission could actually begin the work thus imposed upon it.

Whatever may be the desirability of empowering the interstate commerce commission to handle wage disputes, this is not the time to do it. The commission is overburdened with duties. A bill has been pending before congress, urgently advocated by the railroads themselves, calling for an increase in the membership of the commission in order to enable it to handle cases already on its docket.

A resolution is now pending in the house, after having been passed by the senate, calling for an investigation by a joint committee of congress into the need for railroad legislation, particularly into the need for legislation affecting the interstate commerce commission. This resolution was introduced at the request of the railroads and for the express purpose of heading off any railroad legislation till a comprehensive survey of the entire situation should have been made. Representatives of the railroads have urged this resolution for these reasons.

Yet now the railroads, forgetting these arguments and frightened at the prospect of being forced to yield to the brotherhoods, are demanding hasty and ill-considered legislation, the first effect of which would be to give them an advantage in their dispute with their employes.

The commission only has authority over rates, etc., on interstate traffic and has no control over matters that are wholly within a state.

If authority is conferred on the interstate commerce commission by congress to fix or exercise any control over wages, it would only apply to employes whose runs are from one state to another.

Inasmuch as the bulk of trainmen work wholly within a state, it would result in the worst muddle possible. A few employes having their wages fixed by the United States and the rest of them standing just where they are now.

The claim made by the railroads that as the interstate commerce commission has authority over freight rates, it should also have authority over rates of pay, is a clever and seemingly plausible argument, put forward to secure public sympathy.

The interstate commerce commission has always taken cognizance of wages or labor costs in passing upon freight rates. One of the leading arguments of the railroads in making application for authority to advance their freight rates has been that outlays for employes have increased and as a consequence that they should be permitted to charge more for their services.

Elaborate statistical exhibits have in all general rate cases been presented by the railroads to the commission, which set forth in great detail how many more dollars are paid out in wages and salaries now as compared with former years. As a consequence the interstate commerce commission has always passed on the question of the relation of wages to freight and passenger rates and to total operating costs.

'Spot Saved My Life and I Don't Want No Home Nor No Job Without Spot Around,' Says Runaway Boy

Huckleberry Finn, Come to Life, Is Found in New Orleans, Hungry and Footsore, Having Missed His Breakfast, Likewise Supper Night Before.

IT WAS breakfast time on the shanty boat, moored in a little inlet of the big Mississippi River in the South. On the projection, by way of a porch, sat Leo Hogan, with Spot, "jest an 'ornery houn' dog pup," according to river men, who sometimes came in contact with Spot in disputing the right of way.

But to Leo he was the finest specimen o the dog family that ever existed, and he was more than a dog, for he was the only friend that Leo had. Others thought Leo ought to be at something, all the time helping with the everlasting fishing, hanging the clothesline caring for the baby or doing something elst equally unimportant in the boy's estimation.

But Spot had no sympathy with such tasks and was only happy when he and Leo were following the bent of their own sweet wills, chasing birds along the bank, sitting in the shade watching the steamers or eating lunches, abstracted with painstaking care from the family supply.

Leo's "pappy" was up early in the morning, and all day he set his lines and attended to other duties connected with his fishing. When the moon came up he lay down to sleep. One night after Spot had first come to live with them Leo had slipped off the boat into the river. Spot had watched his efforts in the water for a moment and then had set up the most ear-piercing cries, that were something more than barking, and penetrated to the consciousness of the sleeping man, who, coming out, saw the peril of the child and rescued him.

Needless to say, this had cemented the friendship between the boy and the dog, and ever after they were always together.

"Spot Saved His Life"

Leo could swim now, like a fish, and he and Spot were often in the water together. One day a man came along and was about to steal Leo's poor little clothes, consisting of "pants and shirt," when Spot rushed out like a whirlwind, and Leo, who did not wear a bathing suit, needless to say, hurried out of the water and caught up his precious clothes, which the man had dropped.

"They Had Fish for Supper"

After a few days he found he had to leave the river bank and take to the road that ran as nearly parallel as he could find.

He and Spot were driven away from doors where they asked for food, and often were given a generous supply, so that they did not starve. Upon the whole it was a pleasant trip, but it seemed a long time before they came to their journey's end, and landed in New Orleans. Leo was footsore and weary, when a policeman found him on the street and took him to the station. He had missed breakfast, likewise supper, the day before, and was dead tired and hungry, but his first thought was for Spot.

"Don't you all do nothin' to Spot," he said, looking up at the police officer without any fear. "He done saved my life, barkin' and wakin' up pappy when I fell overboard before I could swim good. We stick. I don't want no home, nor no job, where I caint have Spot aroun'."

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children was asked to take Leo in, and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals found a place for Spot. No doubt some good people will care for both of them on one of the little vegetable farms around New Orleans.

On this particular day Spot was sharing his breakfast with Leo, for it was as much the breakfast of one as the other. Leo had had to help get it, and now he knew that he would have to wash the dishes if not called upon to do that more odious task of taking care of the baby.

The air was filled with the perfume of wild cherry blossoms, and grape blossoms, and the sky was as blue as sapphire, with here and there a flaky cloud floating by. In the distance could be heard the chug-chug of the Grey Eagle on its road to Memphis, and the faint line of smoke in the distance told of a smart little motor boat on its way to a river clubhouse.

All the good times in the world beyond the shanty boat, Leo thought, and here he was moored to this old boat and uncongenial people. "Twelve years old," he said to himself, "and no start made yet." It was time he got a move on him if he was ever to be anything in this world. He got up with his piece of corn bread in his hand. Spot looked at the crumbs of his piece, but after a moment followed him.

He walked down to the river bank and quickly disappeared in the tangle of willows, alders, cat tails and other green things that grew down to the river's edge. He knew a place where wild ducks had nested, and where a water puppy had been seen, and as he went along it was all familiar ground, but he did not stop for a moment, his face being set resolutely to the south.

He heard the baby cry, then his mother call, then the shout of his father, but still he went straight on and was finally out of hearing. It was not until he had covered a couple of miles that he and Spot made their way out of the bushes, although still keeping to the bank. He slipped his corn bread into his pocket as he did not know how soon he might see another piece like it.

They walked all day and at night he and Spot slept on the bank. After awhile he would stop and maybe wash dishes or do something to earn some food, but for today the piece of corn bread must do, and so at sunset he and Spot lay down under the stars and slept until sunrise. He found some poles set and caught a fish. He then foraged for some bread among the farmers, and for some matches. "I hope you don't smoke," the good lady said, who gave him matches, and he declared that he did not, but that he wanted to have some to make a fire in case it turned cold. She laughed at him and gave him a package of food, which he carefully put away, cooking the fish for supper.

FAMILY AFFAIRS.

"MY father says that we aren't going away this summer because mamma's spent so much money," said little Clara, "but mamma says that she's glad of it, 'cause now she'll know why papa spends so much every summer staying at home."

"You should not tell your family affairs in that way," said the teacher.

"Oh, they ain't family affairs," said Clara. "The family jest listens."

SKEPTICAL.

"MOTHER, Willie said that Mike eats snakes, and I asked him did he eat snakes."

"And what did he say?" asked mother.

"He said yes, and I asked him what for, and he said 'for greens.' Now don't you think that was a funny kind of greens?"

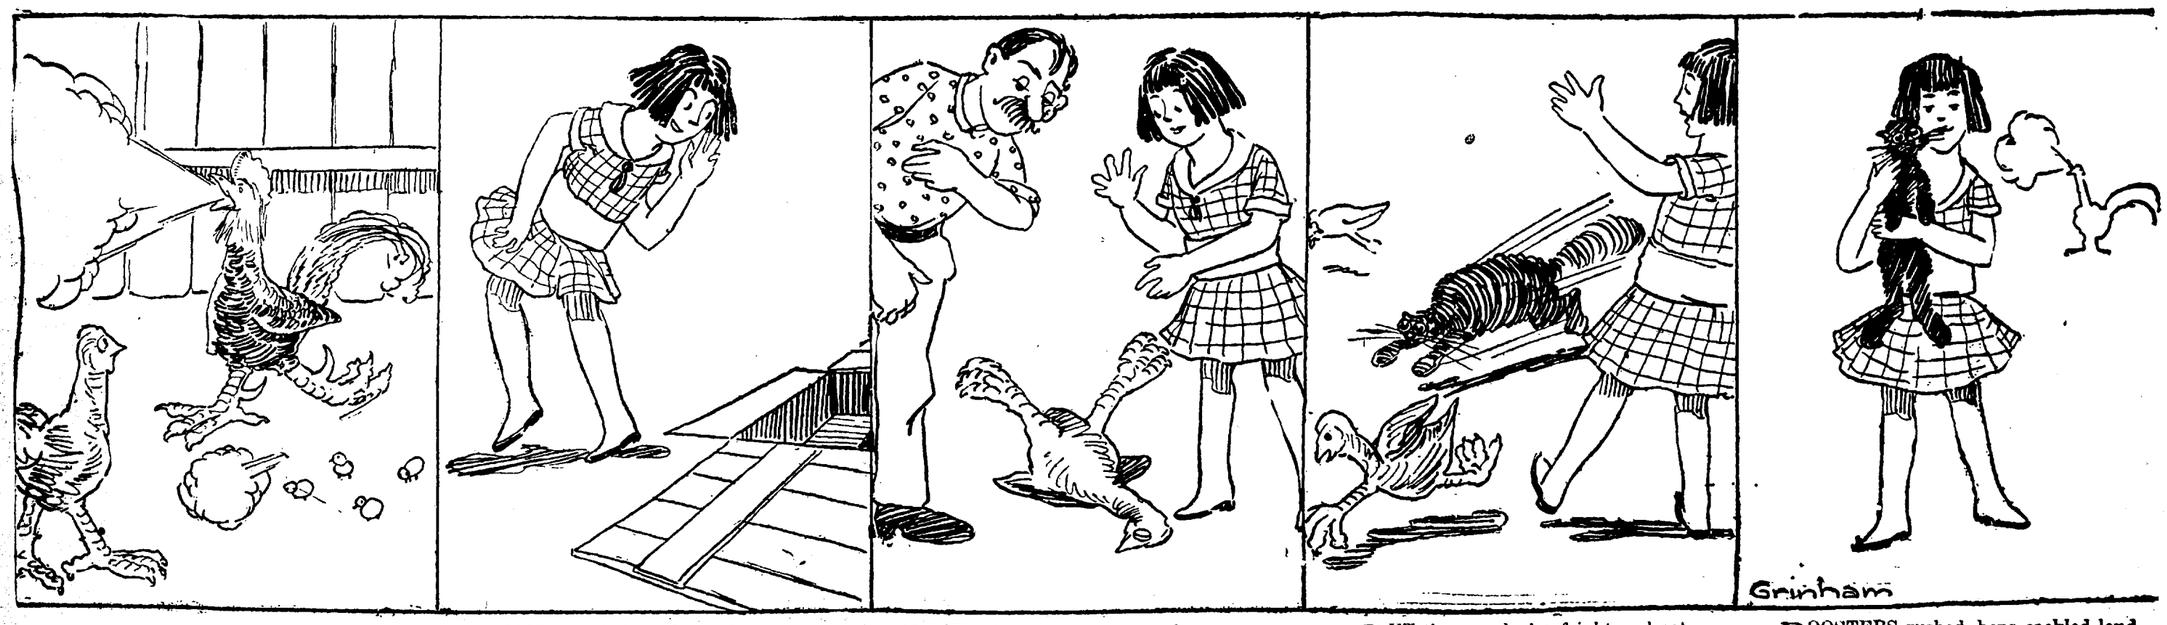
"Yes," said mother, "but you must not believe all Mike tells you."

"Oh, I don't, mother. He told me that once you were as little as I am and that you were ten times prettier, but, of course, I did not believe that."

NAUGHTY NETTIE

NAUGHTY NETTIE TIED A RIBBON
TO HER KITTY'S TAIL,
AND THE KITTY WHISKED IT WILDLY,
BUT TO NO AVAIL.
THEN QUITE FRANTIC KITTY SCAMPERED
TO THE DINING ROOM,
HOPPED ON SIDEBOARD AND ON TABLES,
THEN CAME CRACK-O-DOOM.
MOTHER'S CHINA SMASHED TO PIECES,
KITTY PROMPTLY YANKED,
AND WHEN ALL THE FUSS WAS OVER,
NAUGHTY NETTIE SPANKED.

A LITTLE BIT OF TRAGEDY IN OUR BACK YARD



COCK-A-LORUM, cock-a-lu,
'Tis a pretty howd'ye-do,
Crowed the rooster, scratching hard.
With his wives in our back yard.

MATTIE heard the noise and ran,
Quickly for the furnace man,
"Something's scared the hens," she said,
"Mercy me, there's one that's dead."

SUCH a fuss you never heard,
Then the "dead" hen softly stirred,
Then it up and ran away,
Straight into a pile of hay.

OUT there rushed a frightened cat,
At the hen it loudly spat,
Mattie rushed into the fray,
Safely pulling puss away.

ROOSTERS rushed, hens cackled loud
The cat fled leading all the crowd,
Mattie caught and hugged it well,
While Kitty tried her tale to tell.

FREIGHT STATION DESTROYED BY FIRE

G. R. & I. Transfer House at Portland is Burned to the Ground.

Word was received at the local offices of the G. R. & I. road this morning that the transfer freight house of the company at Portland, Ind., was burned to the ground last night. No cause has as yet been found for the origin of the fire, which seemed to have started near the roof of the structure. There were no lights burning in the building at the time the fire probably started. The building is a total loss, as only one wall remains standing.

The burned structure was located in a "Y" between the G. R. & I. tracks and those of the Lake Erie & Western. It was used for storing freight which was to be transferred from one road to the other. The exact loss has not yet been determined, but unless a great amount of freight was destroyed it may not exceed a thousand dollars.

MORE MEN STRIKE

Clover Leaf Again Experiences Trouble With Section Men

With the strike of trainmen confronting them, officials of the Clover Leaf railroad are experiencing much trouble in keeping sufficient men on the sections over the three divisions to make the necessary repairs,

Yesterday a large number of men employed on the western division, between Charleston and St. Louis, left their work after making a demand for higher wages. While the strike is not regarded as serious, it is causing the road no little inconvenience. This is the third gang of section workers that have walked out on the road, even foreigners and negroes who were out on the job, refusing to remain. The men have been receiving $1.65 a day and are making a demand for $2.

TRACK ELEVATION TO COST BIG SUM

The Pennsylvania railroad will spend $295,700 in elevating its tracks over Hanna and Lafayette streets if the estimate filed with the board of works Saturday from the Pittsburgh offices of the railroad are accurate. The city of Fort Wayne is expected to add $75,000 more in completing the work, according to the figures by railroad officials.

The estimate of cost of the proposed track elevation, which members of the board of works hold to be about correct, is several times the amount used in lifting the tracks over Calhoun street. Advance in the cost of structural steel is given as one reason. The fact that there will be many more tracks to be carried over the streets than were laid over Calhoun is another costly feature. Calhoun street is crossed by but three tracks, while at least seven will be over Hanna and Lafayette streets.

Final plans for the elevation, made to conform with views of Fort Wayne officials, are expected from the Pittsburgh offices next week. The list of estimates was sent as a forerunner of the complete plans. The structural work over Lafayette street is expected to cost $151,600 and over Hanna street $41,100. The city of Fort Wayne must pay for the street approaches and subway.

MOURNING OF CHINA HAS BEEN FARCICAL

Death of Yuan-Shi-Kai Occasions Rejoicing, Not Sorrow.

Liang Shi-Yi and Chow Tzu-Chi, the of The Associated Press.)—Chinese public opinion has been in a strangely unformed state since the death of Yuan Shi-Kai. The passing of the would-be emperor president, was hailed with rejoicing rather than sorrow and efforts to enforce mourning have been somewhat farcical.

Every day it becomes clearer that many of the leaders of the revolution in the south who declared Yuan Shi-Kai's retirement was the chief end which they sought, has personal ambitions and are not giving Yuan Hung the support which might reasonably be expected of them. Many of the provinces have refused to rejoin the union and new demands are made upon the president almost daily by political leaders in the rebelling provinces.

Liang Shi-Yi and Chow Tzu-Chi, the two members of the government who have had most to do with finances in China, have both resigned under fire. The former was head of the financial council and director general of the Bank of Communications. The latter was formerly minister of commerce and agriculture, but had for a short time served as minister of finance. Both of these men were close advisers of Yuan Shi Kai, and are regarded by foreigners as two of the ablest leaders in China.

Liang Shi-Ki has been the storm center of criticism for many months and recently the republican press has assailed him bitterly. The board of censors has made an adverse report on his malfeasance in office. He is accused of various financial irregularities and is blamed with the shortage of hard money which made it necessary to suspend specie payment on the notes of the Bank of Communications and the aBnk of China.

THE "BIG PUSH" OF THE ALLIES IN FRANCE.

This one of the first authentic pictures of the British drive against the Germans in France and Belgium to the Somme river, shows one of the big guns used by the British. It was with guns of this type that the British bombarded German strongholds and cleared the way for infantry advances. Behind the gun can be seen the gunners at work. The war correspondent says he has seen many of these guns in action.

BLACKLIST CALLED TACTICAL BLUNDER

English Diplomat Regards Act of His Country as Very Unwise.

London, July 22. — (Delayed) —A neutral diplomat exceptionally well informed regarding the details of the economic war which Great Britain is waging on the central powers declared today to a representative of the Associated Press that he regarded the recent publication by the British government of the blacklist of certain American firms as "the greatest posssible tactical blunder at this stage when a French loan is about to be financed in America and important Russian financial arrangements are under way there."

"It is a blunder," continued the diplomat, "because it is unnecessary since for months most of the firms on the list have been on a subrosa blacklist. At any rate they were not on the white list, so the government had complete control over any of their operations which touched British territory.

The financial section of London is by no means unanimous in approval of the measure, even those in its favor being dissatisfied with its scope, contending that some omissions from the list are more significant than inclusions.

"Its publication at this time is a mystery. One possible theory is that the government's hand was forced by recalcitant British firms which may have declined to give up trading with firms not on the white list until their position was made legally untenable by the actual promulgation of the list. If the government had desired to warn the British public wider publicity would have been sought. The list was published only in the official London Gazette. None of the London papers printed it.

The possibility of legal retaliation against the blacklist is a question for international lawyers, but the possibility of unofficial retaliations is almost unlimited. At least a Pacific coast firm of unimpeachable Americanism might make the positions of British traders in a number of fertile fields decidedly uncomfortable."

GHES WATCHES SHIPWRECK.

...rs With His Wife to See Surf Pound Ill-Fated Bark.

Bridgehampton, N. Y., July 22.—Charles E. Hughes and his wife and daughters motored today to Southampton beach, ten miles away, to watch a heavy surf pound the four-masted Norwegian bark, Clan Galbraith, which went ashore in a fog early today while en route, in ballast, from Avonmouth, England, to New York.

The high tide brought the ship within 75 yards off shore. She rolled heavily, broadside to the sea, and appeared some time about to capsize. Her crew of about fifteen remained aboard.

FIGHT DUEL OVER GIRL WHO DIED 50 YEARS AGO

Hammond, Ind., July 22.—James Alfonzo, 75, and Gastova Gentele, 72, are in a serious condition today as the result of a duel they fought with stilettos in a box car last night over a girl who has been dead fifty years. Both men may die.

Nearly fifty years ago the men were in love with an Italian girl in Sardini. They were called to war, and when they returned home the girl was dead. Their paths separated and the men had not seen each other since, until they met here as track laborers. The trouble started over an argument as to which of the men the girl loved more.

WIDOW HOLDS BOTH VICTIMS BLAMELESS

All Alpine Turns Out to the Funeral of Mrs. Spannell.

Alpine, Tex., July 22.— Practically the entire population of Alpine attended funeral services here today for Mrs. Crystal Holland Spannell who, with Lieut. Col. M. C. Butler, was killed by her husband last Thursday night. Friends of Spannell said today that he apparently shot in a fit of insane jealousy and that since he has been overwhelmed with remorse and on several occasions begged his guards to kill him.

As she boarded a train last night for Washington, where she is taking her husband's body for burial, Mrs. Butler said to friends on the station platform:

"Neither my husband nor Mrs. Spannell was in the least to blame."

SPANNELL IN EL PASO JAIL.

El Paso, Texas, July 22.—Harry J. Spannell, who Thursday night shot and killed his wife and Lieut. Col. M. C. Butler, at Alpine, Texas, was held at the county jail here today under heavy guard. Three deputies, who arrived with the prisoner early today, asserted feeling in Alpine is tense and authorities there felt an attempt at violence might be made.

Spannell is held in Communicade. On the way to the jail the party was intercepted by a newspaper man who asked Spannell why he killed his wife and Butler.

Apparently on the verge of a collapse, Spannell replied:

'Don't bother me. I have nothing to say."

According to reports from jail authorities Spannell last night awoke from a fitful sleep, burst out weeping and expressed a wish to see his five-year-old daughter.

ASKS COLUMBIA CITY PAPER TO REPRINT IT

Indianapolis, July 22. — Adjt. Gen. Frank L. Bridges yesterday addressed a letter to the editor of the Columbia City (Ind.) Post, in which he asks that newspaper to reprint the facsimile of a letter addressed to him recently by Joseph R. Harrison, also of Columbia City, who speaks highly of the Indiana national guard camp at Fort Harrison. Mr. Harrison formerly was a lieutenant colonel in the Indiana national guard, and Gen. Bridges says that he was deposed in the 1915 reorganization of the state militia.

Mr. Harrison visited the camp while the troops were concentrated there, and wrote a letter to Gen. Bridges expressing his appreciation of the splendid condition of the camp and the spirit of the men. In his letter to the Columbia City editor Gen. Bridges declares that Mr. Harrison wrote him the complimentary letter regardless of the fact that he gave the newspapers of Columbia City information on which was based articles purporting to show that Bridges was incompetent.

ROTARIANS GIVEN GREAT RECEPTION

With the clashing tunes of twenty-six bands still ringing in his ears and the lasting memory of how that Cincinnati watermelon lay in his digestive tract, Charles Biederwolf, secretary of the Fort Wayne Commercial club, returned to the city Friday in company of the Fort Wayne delegation after having attended a memorable convention of the Rotary clubs of America in the ueen City. Mr. Biederwolf and Rev. Arthur J. Folsom were the delegates to the convention from the Fort Wayne Rotary club.

"You have no idea of the sight that convention was," said Mr. Biederwolf. "It was a succession of watermelon feasts, boat rides and auto trips over the city." The secretary was profuse in his praise of entertainment accorded the Rotary clubs at Dayton, O., by John H. Patterson, president of the National Cash Register company. Mr. Paterson tore Dayton wide open with his reception of the Rotary clubs. Two special trains of twenty-six coaches carried the clubmen to Dayton, O., where they were met at the train by autos and taken for a drive over the city and for an inspection of the plant of the Cash Register company.

"Is there anything new, today?" Mr. Biederwolf was asked. But it was a foolish question. He was too busy going over a neglected mass of mail.

DR. ATWOOD, VICTIM OF BULLET, MAY SURVIVE

Boston, Mass., July 22.—Dr. Wilfred E. Harris, was much improved today in the opinion of the attending physicians and hope was strengthened that he would survive the wounds inflicted by Dr. Aldridge Atwood on Tuesday.

The police are continuing their efforts to establish a connection between the shooting of Dr. Harris and the death by poisoning a few hours before of Dr. Celia P. Adams. Atwood says that Harris prevented his marriage to Miss Adams and that he attacked the other physician when he learned that his fiancee was dead, supposedly a suicide.

Doctors Decide That Colored Child Is Suffering from Apoplexy.

Apoplexy is the latest substitute for infantile paralysis. Apoplexy was what Berlina Suttles, colored, 1217 Thayer street, had when the house was quarantined for infantile parlysis. There is a wave of relief in the neighborhood of North Oliver street, and children which were sent on visits, when the plague was reported in the vicinity, will return home.

The colored girl showed all the early symptoms of the disease. She was paralyzed, physicians say. Her right side was helpless, they report. This is a rare symptom for apoplexy, doctors claim. Late Friday afternoon, however, advanced stages of the ailment showed clearly that the girl had apoplexy.

The city health department is relieved. They hope that Fort Wayne will not have a case of real infantile paralysis this summer. There is little danger until the plague gets a foothold, they say.

FOREIGN SERVICE PAY MILLIONS VOTED OUT

Army Bill Leaders Do Not Expect Serious Turn in Mexican Case.

Washington, D. C., July 22.— Millions of dollars for extra "foreign service pay" for officers and men of the army, provided for in the army bill, in the expectation that troops would be engaged in Mexico, were voted out today on motion of Senator Chamberlain of the senate military committee, who is regarded as speaking for the war department.

The action was regarded as evidence that the leaders do not expect the Mexican situation to take the serious turn it promised when the army bill was in committee.

Army bill advocates had urged adoption without amendment, asserting that increases of more than $148,000,000 over the house measure were essential. The bill now carries a total of $330,000,000. Debate probably will continue for several days.

The appropriation for subsistence of the army and national guard was reduced $7,000,000. A reduction of $13,000,000 was made in the appropriation for transportation and a four-million-dollar cut was made in the appropriation for clothing, camp and garrison equipment.

The reductions urged by the military committee aggregated $31,000,000, reducing the total of the bill to $299,000,000.

PARTIAL REPLY WILL NOT BE SATISFACTORY

Washington, July 22.—If great Britain's memorandum regarding mail seizures now on its way to Washington from Ambassador Page, deals only with specific cases but neglects to discuss the principles for which the United States contends, as has been indicated in forecasts of its contents, the American government will press for a complete reply making it plain that it considers delay in answering the American note inexcusable.

It was made clear at the state department today that a partial reply will not satisfy the United States. The British memorandum had not been received today by the department.

FORT WAYNE WILL NOT GET AUTO THIEF

Toledo Wins Race for Custody of Man Who Stole Car from Here.

If the interurban car running between Fort Wayne and Bluffton had not broken down Friday night Arthur P. Newman, 40, would have been in Fort Wayne, Saturday to answer to a charge of stealing a Ford automobile from Dr. Christian Martz. The machine was taken from in front of the Martz home, 207 East Creighton avenue on May 3.

As it is, Newman is in Toledo to answer to a similar charge there. He was arrested Friday afternoon in Anderson. Police of Fort Wayne and Toledo were both notified of his capture.

"Newman will be given over to the city who sends a man for him first," was the telephone message Police Chief Lenz received.

There was a rush to have the necessary papers made out. Detective Sergeant Joseph Brennan was dispatched for Newman. Brennan was ready in twenty minutes and left on the 6 o'clock car. He had a beautiful start.

But the car broke down between Kingsland and Bluffton. Brennan walked up and down the track and impatiently looked now and then at his watch. It was forty minutes before the car started again. Brennan arrived in Anderson fifteen minutes after the Toledo officer. He would have won the race but for the breakdown.

Brennan wired back the disappointing answer to Lenz late Friday evening. Brennan stayed in Anderson Saturday morning to question the prisoner. Then Newman was taken to Toledo and Brennan returned home.

On His Trail for Months.

Fort Wayne police have been on the trail of Newman for three months. Police Chief Lenz says he has always been sure of being after the right fellow. Newman worked in Fort Wayne a short time as representative of the Velvetone Products company, of Cincinnati. He quit his job and he and the car were missing next day.

He answered the description of the man seen with the machine perfectly. Police followed him to Monroe, Mich., where he had give his name as I. E. Walker. He went from Monroe to Detroit and had not been heard of since.

Brennan wired back that Newman said he had left the car belonging to Martz in Rochester, N. Y. He said police would be able to recover the machine as he knew exactly where it was located.

Lenz thinks that Newman is a member of the organization of auto thieves working in this section of the country. Lenz was especially anxious to gain possession of him as a prisoner because of information he hoped to obtain relating to other stolen cars.

Bellows Falls, Vt., July 22.—The will of Mrs. Hetty Green was admitted to probate here today without contest, leaving the entire estate to her son, Col. Edward H. R. Green, and daughter, Mrs Matthew Astor Wilkes. Col. Green filed a bond for $50,000 as trustee for the fund left his sister.

Edward L. Walker and Charles E. Capron, of Bellows Falls, were appointed commissioners of the estate and Mr. Walker will also act as agent of service.

LONG WRANGLE DUE ON SENATE'S NAVAL BILL

Washington, July 22.—The senate naval bill went to a conference committee of the two houses today with every prospect ahead for a long struggle over its increased building provisions. Eight senators voted against the measure yesterday. Two are democrats, Senators Thomas and Vardaman. Republicans who opposed it are Senators Clapp, Curtis, Gronna, La Follette, Norris and Works. Many proposals to curtail big building increases were voted down overwhelmingly. Senator La Follette made a seven hour speech against the bill.

They were located today by a policeman.

WEED GROWERS HAVE CAUSE TO TREMBLE

Many Affidavits Are Expected to Follow Inspection Trip.

Police court is expected to be filled with weed growers Monday morning.

Three officers, in the police runabout, drove through nearly all sections of Fort Wayne Saturday afternoon. They said their trip was for the purpose of finding out upon what properties weeds were allowed to grow. Affidavits will follow at once, police said.

Not less than 100 affidavits are expected to be signed up against property owners who tolerate weeds unless many lots have been mowed within the past two days, police say.

The police method will be to give no preliminary warning. They will find out who the property upon which gaunt weeds thrive, belong to. One of the officers will sign an affidavit against the citizen, who has not performed the duty of making his land respectable. The affidavit will be read to the offender. He will be told to appear in police court. If he is not there the patrol will be sent for him.

Will Fine Offenders.

Judge Kerr says he is afraid he will have to fine all those brought before him, who have not heeded the repeated warnings to cut their weeds. The statute fixes a penalty of from $5 to $25.

"There is little use for delinquent citizenship," Judge Kerr said. "In winter and summer I find it the same. There is always the same class of citizens who will neither shovel snow in December nor cut weeds in July, until they have to."

When the order to have weeds cut was given out by Mayor Hosey there was some discussion as to which department the task of looking after prosecutions would come under.

The health board did not want the job. It has been removed from their department, they claimed. The board of safety did not take up the matter at once. Police will now take the position of prosecutors. aPtrolmen will report properties where weeds grow until all plats have been cleaned.

"It is a nuisance and not a health matter in reality," Mayor Hosey said. "We have a law against weeds. Maybe we should have enforced it in May and brought in all who gave weeds a chance. We tried to be reasonable. There is no excuse for weeds continuing to grow. We will stop it by stringent measures."

MORE STENOGRAPHERS NEEDED IN THE FIELD

An examination for male stenographers and typewriters for the field service will be held under direction of the civil service division at the federal building July 29, according to an announcement of W. J. Hess, assistant postmaster. There is a scarcity of stenographers and typewriters in the field service.

Field service stenographers are employed outside of Washington, many of them in federal buildings in some of the larger cities of the country. As an illustration of the nature of the work of a field stenographer, Mr. Hess pointed to work done by stenographers for the engineers who were in the Fort Wayne territory making a report on the proposed Michigan-Erie canal. The salary to start for the position of male stenographer is about $900.

New Jitney Ordinance is Ready for City Council

The reconstructed jitney ordinance will be placed before the council, assembled as a committee of the whole, Monday evening. Several jitney drivers are expected to attend the meeting and a warm discussion may result.

The new law, as built by the subcommittee, will not ask a bond for jitney drivers. It will demand instead a strict regulation of drivers and traffic. It will call for a $50 license fee to be paid annually by jitney operators.

The ordinance is patterned as nearly as possible after the code established at Washington, D. C. The capital city is supposed to have the best jitney law in the United States. The traffic code there was drawn up by experts and congressmen.

Requirements for jitney drivers will be more strict than if they were burdened by expense of furnishing a cash fund, according to the proposed ordinance, committeemen believe. Each applicant for a jitney permit must furnish a statement from three reliable citizens stating that he is moral and capable of operating a public conveyance. He will not be allowed to drive on Fort Wayne streets until he meets the requirements.

Jitney drivers will have established runs, according to the proposed law. They must run on a schedule. They must operate for seven hours each day. This clause was inserted to protect regular jitney drivers from men who operate cars after working hours. The new law takes into consideration the needs of jitney drivers as well as the public at large, members of the committee think. They called taxi drivers into their conferences.

A traffic officer, to regulate jitney traffic alone, will be employed from the money paid in by drivers for their licenses. This traffic guard will see that cars ru non schedule and that they keep their regular runs. A Pontiac driver must always stay on his Pontiac line, under the new code.

Several members of the council strongly favor a bond for taxi drivers. It is said that they will oppose the license plan of regulating the taxi pilots. Members of the sub-committee believe, however, that most council members will favor the new law as framed by their

CYCLONE ALBERTS TO BE GUNNER SUNDAY

Blackbirds in Pink of Condition for Hardest of the Season.

Cy Alberts is to be in the box Sunday for the Blackbirds to show that he is as good as ever. Cy is as tickled as a kid with a stick of candy over his choice for the game. Cy mowed them down so easily last Sunday the management decided that he was good enough for the Chicago Nickel Plates. Mike Freese, the youngster who has been pitching such sterling ball for the Blackbirds, will be at hand should the Chicagoers take it into thir heads to hit Cy. Something tells the management that there is going to be one of the largest crowds that the game has drawn this year at the game Sunday. The popular prices put into effect last Sunday are to have full sway Sunday and as the prices are within the reach of all there is no reason why the fans should stay away.

The Chicago Nickel Plates arrived in town today, a husky bunch to look at. The manager, Mr. Springer, says that all of the tossers with him are in the best of condition and are the starts of the Chicago semi-pros of his town.

Jack Raidy, of League park keeper fame, says that he has the grounds in the best of condition and will show the Chicago visitors what a real ball ground is like.

NORTH RANDALL SCENE OF BROKEN RECORDS

Cleveland, O., July 22.—All season's and two world's records went by the boards in the free-for-all pace at the last day of the North Randall Grand circuit races in which Single G. created a sensation after Russel Boy had won the opening heat in 2:00¼ by coming on and nosing out Murphy's pacer in the second heat, duplicating the time of the first mile and then taking the race by tramping the third heat in 2:01¼.

The world's records were: The fastest three heats ever paced, the three heats averaging 2:00 92-100. The fastest second and third heats ever paced by the same horse, averaging 2:01.

The season's record: Fastest first heat, 2:00¼; fastest second heat, 2:00½; fastest third heat, 2:01¼; fastest three heat race, averaging 2:00 92-100.

Single G, crowned himself as one of the greatest pacing machines in the history of the harness sport. He raced like a real race horse; trailed, burst out and when compelled to, made a pace that killed off those that tried to follow in his path.

That they can sometimes come back, was shown in the 2:06 trot, when Joan, driven by Mike McDevitt, romped off with the race in straight heats and looked like the Joan of two years ago, when he was practically unbeatable.

Castaway, the Cleveland pacer that once sold for $55, won the 2:18 pace by taking the first and third heats, while Contention B. was the winner in the second mile.

Donna Clay kicked everything wide open in the 2:13 trot when Charley Valentine piloted her to first money by winning the first and second heats and trimming the heavy favorite, Worthy Prince.

TRAPSHOT PREFERS CHAMPIONSHIP TO PRESIDENCY OF THE UNITED STATES.

ALDEN B. RICHARDSON.

(By Harold Johnson.)

Alden B. Richardson's father was a power in politics, once serving as United States senator from Delaware, but the former doesn't hanker after public office and the honors attached thereto. He would rather be amateur champion trapshooter of the United States than be president.

Dover, the home of Richardson, seems to extract more genuine pride from the fact that he lives there than that the city is the capital of the state.

Richardson is the present trapshooting champion of Delaware and many regard him as the best shot in America. Just now he is shooting at the top of his farm and is bent on annexing the grand American handicap to be contested starting Aug. 21 at St. Louis.

For two years Richardson has missed the honors by the narrowest margins but next month he expects to pulverize every bird released from the traps in the Mound City classic and bring the glad news back to Dover.

Competing against a crack field in 1914, Richardson won the Delaware championship with 96 breaks and repeated in 1915 with 100. His average in 1913 was 93.57; in 1914, 93.80 and in 1915, 95.66. To date this year he has averaged better than 97 for over 2,000 targets and there doesn't appear to be any sign of a let up.

At the independent club shoot in Philadelphia Richardson shooting on Memorial day broke 200 straight, smashing 175 from the 16-yard mark and 25 from the 20-yard line, and he nailed every target in the center.

That is his best performance of the season but on several occasions he had concluded the program with unfinished runs of 50 and 100 and has copped the honors in nine-tenths of the tournaments he has competed in this season.

Just to get on edge for the Delaware championship and the grand American, Richardson challenged Allan Heil, of Allentown, Pa., to a shoot for the 18-yard championship challenge trophy. Heil won it last fall at the Westy Hogan shoot, breaking 97 targets in a gale.

When the two met July 17 at Philadelphia Richardson won with a score of 97.

PLAY FIRST GAME IN LEAGUE SERIES

Saturday afternoon at League park there was played one of those good old ball games where rivalry is sticking out everywhere and where the players are the best.

The Bowser nine having played off the disputed game last Saturday, took on the Turners for the first game of the championship series. The managers say that their teams are in the best of condition and are confident of winning.

There was a lot of rivalry demonstrated. The contending teams had two bands and about four or five hundred rooters. Last Saturday, when the Bowser and Electric works played off their disputed game there was a large amount of noise resembling a college game, but Saturday's game promises to surpass even that.

INJURY JINX HITS YANKS HEAVY BLOW

Miracle men bob up on the ball field each season. At the start of the race Lee Fohl wore the 1916 title, but the Cleveland pilot must make way for Bill Donovan, who is keeping his Yankees in first place in the face of tremendous odds; due to the activity of the injury jinx. Here is the Yankee's hospital list, yet the club continues to lead:

Frank Gilhooley—Took Maisel's place, became star lead-off man of league, then broke ankle sliding to base.

Hughey High—Sprained ankle chasing a flyball.

One Minute Talks with Ballplayers

JACK LAPP, CHICAGO WHITE SOX:

"A catcher always takes a chance of having someone read his signals, but if he employs the right kind of sign language then he is safe for there are so few fellows in baseball who know it that you can spell your signal to the pitcher with the coacher looking on and never let him know whether you are asking for a fast one, a curve, a slow ball or a pitchout.

"I learned the trick when I was with the Athletics, where all the men under Mack were proficient in the language. Jim Scott is enthusiastic about the new code and says that the next time he pitches he will discard the usual signs and carry on all of his conversation with me by wiggling his ears."

CONNIE MACK, PHILADELPHIA ATHLETICS:

"I have everything I own tied up in the Athletics and am doing what I know is best. I believe I know the baseball business and I am coming back with a greater team than ever before.

"I don't believe in building up a ball team as other managers do and therefore I care nothing about the charges made by critics. I have the foundation for a great club right now.

"I admit that I am disappointed at the showing of several of my recruits and a few of the veterans but we have others coming who will fill the bill if these fail to do."

THIS BUSHER WHIFFS 27 IN 23 INNINGS

Owensboro, Ky., July 22.—Pitcher "Lefty" Roberts, of the Owensboro team of the Kitty league, has qualified as an iron man. Hurling a double-header against Clarksville he allowed only one run and fanned twenty-seven men in twenty-three innings. Twelve hits were made off his delivery. Roberts won the opener 1 to 0. The windup, fourteen innings, went to Clarksville 1 to 0.

A few days prior to this feat Roberts pitched two games against Henderson without being scored upon.

SPORT DOPE

Dispatches from St. Louis state that a crowd started a riot at one of the ball parks the other day. We presume he was subdued.

With a few more columns of expert dope Frank Gotch's fibula may become as famous as Jimmy Britt's ulna.

Blank has signed to play shortstop for the Evansville team. He is expected to fill in nicely for Manager Knoll.

"I can't say I'm nutty about the 'Charge of the Light Brigade,' mused the old-time sport as he glimpsed his gas bill.

Ping Bodie has fallen for golf, according to a tip from the coast. He claims to have done the first nine holes in three hours and fifteen minutes.

The team that Bill Donovan is managing these days looks like the one that drifted up from the sunny south via the Kerosene circuit.

The news that Umpire Rigler has been consulting Bonesetter Reese is disappointing to several National league managers, who think he should consult an oculist.

STAR JUMPER TO QUIT.

New York, July 22—Wesley Oler, former Yale captain and New York A. C. champion high jumper, will hang up his shoes after the national championships at Newark on Sept. 9. Although one of the best high jumpers in the world, Oler yesterday announced he would complete his athletic career at the coming games, for which he is already training.

Philadelphia cleanup week cost the baseball fans $12,000 for damages of 90 home runs and 4 circuit.

DEATH ON WHEELS!

GIOVANNI BOCCA

THIS is the story of Giovanni Bocca as it is being told in Padua, where Italian troops are gathering from the footpaths of the Tyrolean Alps, from which the Austrians are slowly beating back these hardy mountain soldiers. From Innsbruck, the capital of the most southerly province of Austria, there runs southward and to the east of Lake Garda, the great Brenner Pass, connecting the Italian city of Verona. Foot by foot at the beginning of the war, the Italians advanced across the border for several miles as the crow flies—but for many, many miles, if the twisting paths through the mountains are measured.

Along the east of the Brenner Path the Central Tyrolean Alps rise in jagged peaks so abruptly a man all but hangs in space as he climbs, only to find sheer precipices on the opposite side when the summit is reached. The altitude varies from 8000 to 12,000 feet above sea level.

There are the scenes of more than a score of times of the fiercest fighting in history, owing to its position astride the Alps, and so commanding is the road across them. It is the roof of the world, and a victory on the small plateaus, where opposing handfuls of soldiers occasionally meet in hand-to-hand conflicts, means that the bones of the defeated bleach where they fall, or are thrown off the globe. Quarter is seldom given, for it usually is an individual warfare, each man for himself.

In retreating, each man's life depends upon the sureness of his toes and the grip of his fingers. His rifle is strapped to his back. It would be difficult in the extreme to guard a prisoner in descending to a camp if one should be captured among the glaciers and slippery toe-holds of the snow-capped mountains.

But Giovanni Bocca captured fifty and they were brought down the mountains to Padua.

The story has drifted to Venice, Bocca's home, by those who, at this writing, fear that Padua will be unable to withstand the threatened onslaught of the invading Austrian.

Going back to Roman history, the passes through these mountains have been few, and with the exception of some of the larger ones, are known only by the natives. The Romans knew of two, the Splugen and Septimer, but were guided through these. But back from the old tourist trails there is a network of paths that lead to more than one artery that runs from one side of the range to the other. It has been comparatively easy for either side to block the known passes with artillery. It has been a different matter with the network of paths, for that has required the climbing of peaks, the transportation of machine gune and howitzers up the thousands of feet of perpendicular mountain walls.

Once in position, this artillery has easily commanded as high as a dozen footpaths, one of which, perhaps, would connect another network, the whole making an outlet to the other side. There would be held for weeks and months an entire section of range until the enemy, avoiding the beaten paths, would climb the hitherto defiant mountain sides, and, in a surprise attack, command instead of being commanded.

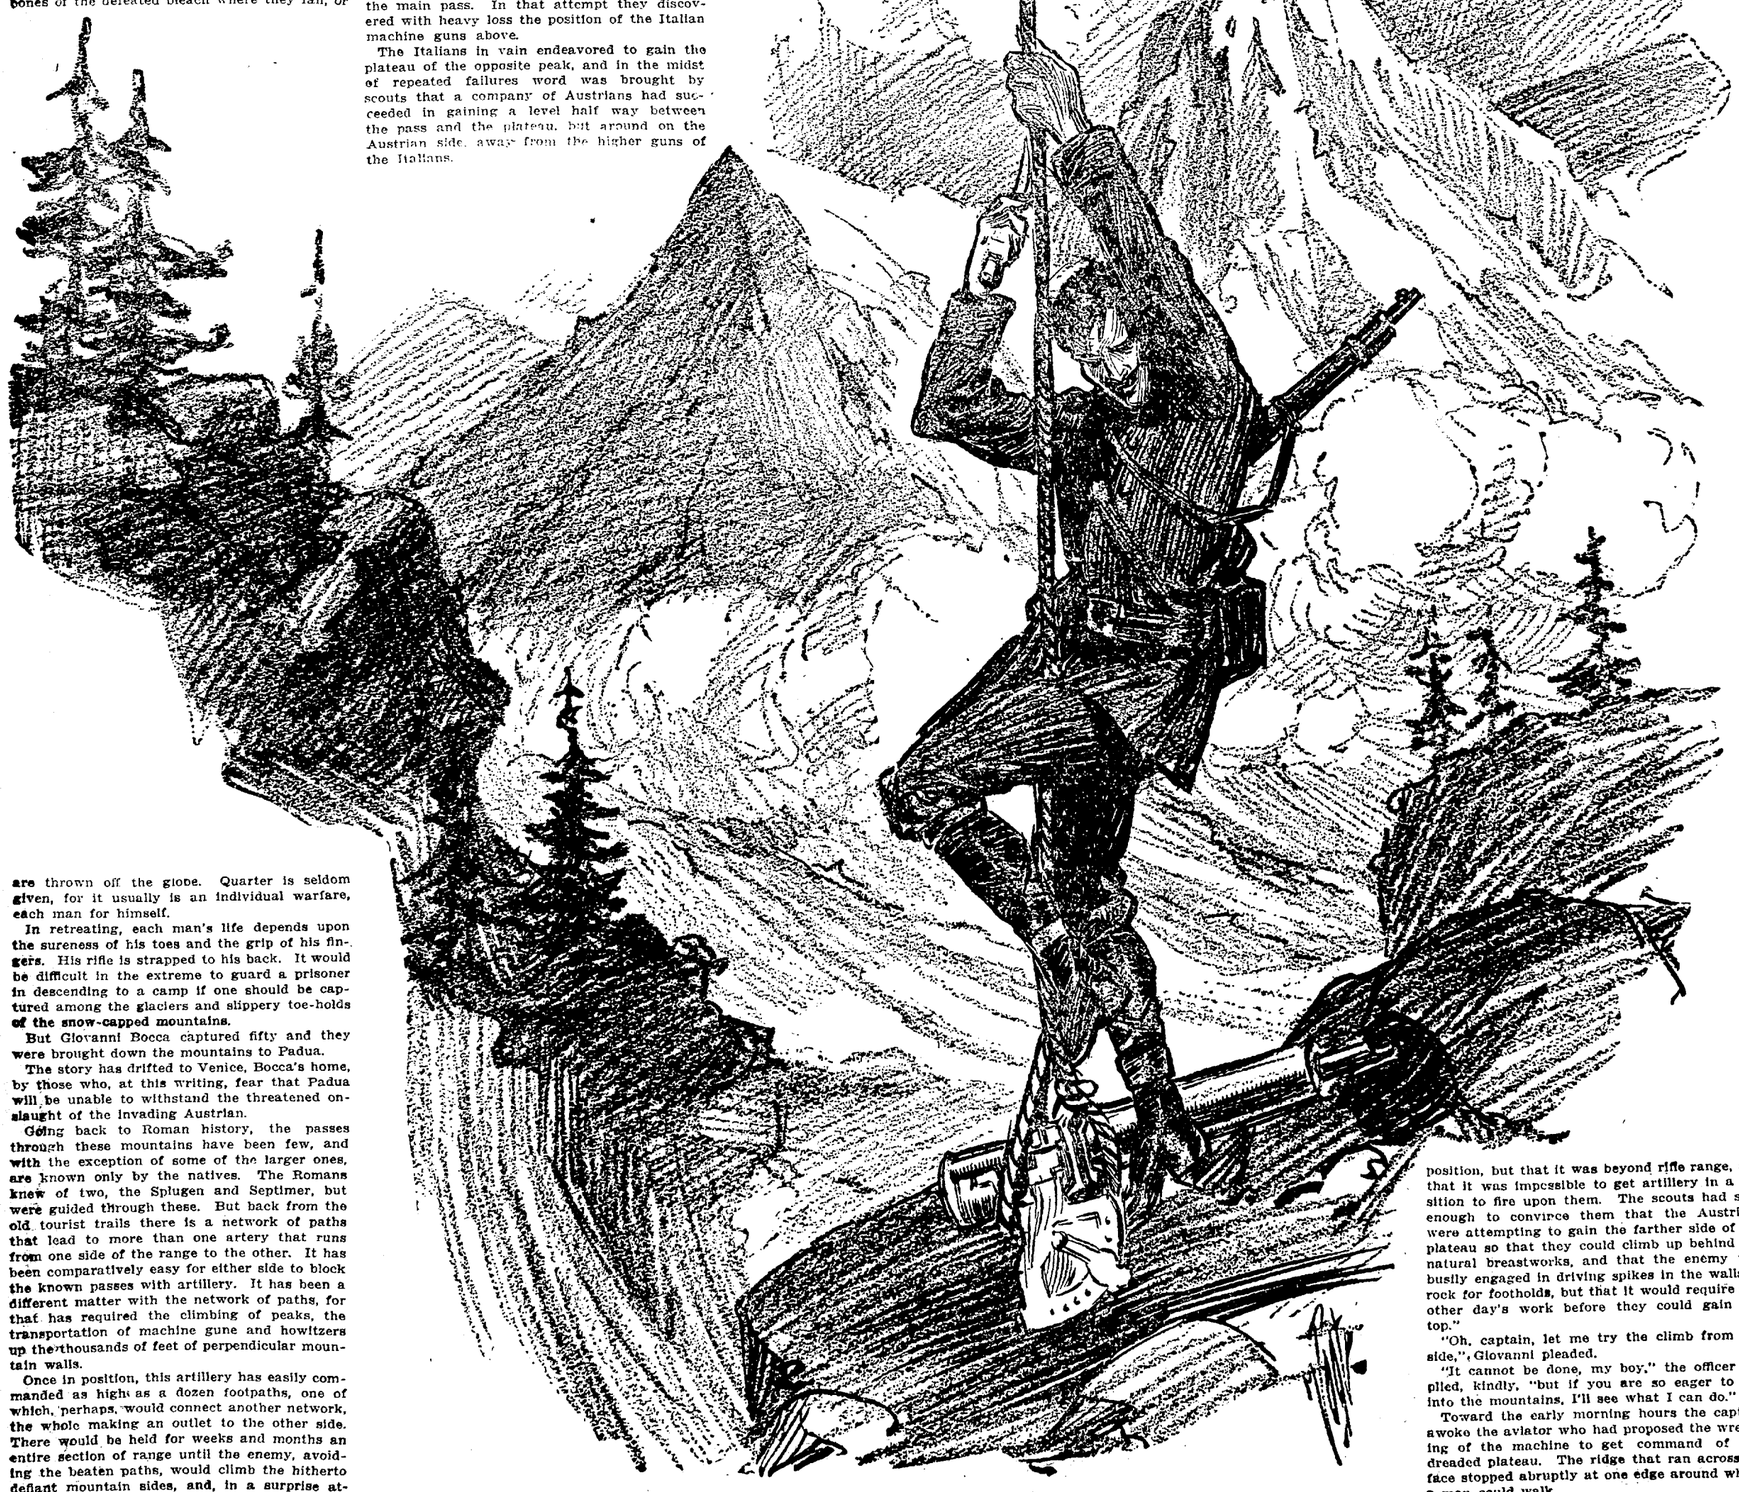
It was one of these commanding sites that the Italians recently were situated upon. Below was the pass. To the east as far as the eye could see was an impassable range. Across the path below rose the sides of a 100-foot slab of upended rock, snow and ice. As far as the eye could see across the pass, there was no other way of crossing the range until another smaller path between the hills was reached, and there the Italians commanded.

The Austrian Tyroleans, famous for their marksmanship and their climbing, could not get through. Their only hope would be to scale the mountain side to the Italian position in a surprise attack from the Austrian side, or to gain a commanding position on the peak that reared above the Italians across the path.

An attack on the Italian position up the Austrian side of their mountain was closely guarded night and day. Through the pass below the Italian troops constantly poured, back and forth, hunting their enemy through the maze of footpaths that lead from every angle. Further on the pass was held by the Austrians in a position as impregnable as that of the Italians seemed.

Across the pass on the opposite mountain peak within rifle shot was a plateau, across which ran breastworks of solid stone. Behind that it would be an easy matter for the enemy to dislodge the commanding guns of the Italians, should the Austrians ever succeed in getting on the top. Clashes along the mountain sides were of daily occurrence, but only one attempt was made by the Austrians to rush the main pass. In that attempt they discovered with heavy loss the position of the Italian machine guns above.

The Italians in vain endeavored to gain the plateau of the opposite peak, and in the midst of repeated failures word was brought by scouts that a company of Austrians had succeeded in gaining a level half way between the pass and the plateau, but around on the Austrian side, away from the higher guns of the Italians.



"Giovanni quickly cut the rope."

The Italians found the footholds leading to the Austrians' position, and tried in a night climb to surprise them, but were repulsed. Word was sent to the base in the valley for an aeroplane, minute directions being given for the purpose of bomb-dropping.

Then the aviator explained his plan.

"The plateau that overlooks the pass," he said, "runs level for 50 yards. It is open on three sides—the side next to the pass and on either end. Back, however, there is a ridge of stone. My plan would be to try to alight at the edge of the plateau and let the machine run the 50 yards into the ridge, where it would be wrecked, but where myself and passenger would stop, possibly dead—but that is a chance we would have to take.

"We could take rope enough to bring up men from the Italian side of the mountain. We could carry enough rifles and ammunition to hold off the Austrians, if they should succeed in climbing up from their present position."

The aviator was interrupted by the appearance of a messenger.

The messenger reported that the Italian scouts in the mountains had seen the Austrians' position, but that it was impossible to get artillery in a position to fire upon them. The scouts had seen enough to convince them that the Austrians were attempting to gain the farther side of the plateau so that they could climb up behind the natural breastworks, and that the enemy was busily engaged in driving spikes in the walls of rock for footholds, but that it would require another day's work before they could gain the top.

"Oh, captain, let me try the climb from our side," Giovanni pleaded.

"It cannot be done, my boy," the officer replied, kindly, "but if you are so eager to get into the mountains, I'll see what I can do."

Toward the early morning hours the captain awoke the aviator who had proposed the wrecking of the machine to get command of the dreaded plateau. The ridge that ran across its face stopped abruptly at one edge around which a man could walk.

"Could one man pick them off as fast as they could climb up?" he asked the airman.

"I am sure of it, captain," the aviator replied. "There is but one place in which to gain the top, and they will have to spike the wall all of the way up. They will not be looking for interference and will be slow."

"I have decided," the captain said, evenly, "to try an unheard-of feat. I believe it will succeed and will not be as dangerous as the plan you proposed

"It is needless to say that Giovanni will gladly risk his life for the attempt. He will die happy, at least.

"I have given orders for a machine gun to be packed, also a box of ammunition, a rifle and rope. This will be suspended from your machine and we will have Giovanni on it. I want you to circle above the plateau and turn at the proper moment to allow Giovanni to drop upon the top. He will cut the rope and land all together, if that is possible. If he succeeds in landing, but does not succeed in severing the rope in time, you will have to return and throw enough rope to him. He will then use the rope to get up a rifle and possibly more men. We can climb within 300 feet of the plateau, and there will be 400 feet of rope."

Giovanni was ready at daybreak for the start. The problem of suspending the heavy weight from the aeroplane was solved without accident.

On the left of the aviator was the coil of rope. On the right wing sat Giovanni, nursing a heavily padded gun, box and rifle. As the machine arose, Giovanni lowered the gun and ammunition overboard slowly until it hung 20 feet below, then, as instructed by the captain, he leaned over, grasped the rope as the landscape raced backward beneath him, and quickly was on the small, strong cord below the aeroplane. Down he slid until his feet rested on the big bundle.

In order to keep from spinning around in midair as the machine climbed higher and ever higher, Giovanni had attached to one tip of the aeroplane wing a small cord which he held fast.

Soon the peak appeared beneath him, then began a long circling descent toward them. He saw the pass, recognized the position held by the Italians and studied carefully the opposite plateau upon which he was to land. The captain had instructed him to keep knife ready to cut the rope and drop just as the machine turned in the center above the mountain floor. If the aviator misjudged the distance, he had been warned not to drop, but await a second circle. He was to use his own judgment, and the aviator had been instructed to circle above the plateau again and again until the attempt succeeded.

Giovanni realized that if the machine descended too low before approaching the mountain top, he would be dashed to death against the side. It was the biggest risk of all. He decided he would rather take the chance of a long drop.

The machine flew over the plateau, too high and too fast for the suspended man to drop off. Then the aeroplane turned back through the pass, with Giovanni lower than the level of the peak, but in a circling flight that tended upward, so that as it neared the edge of the peak it turned again outward from it. The right height had been reached. Giovanni could almost step off on to the plateau as the machine whirled away for a figure 8, one end of which Giovanni could see would quickly place him in the center of the mountain floor. The bundle beneath his feet almost scraped the edge of the precipice as the machine darted over, then turned.

Giovanni saw his chance. He was being jerked rapidly toward the edge and back into space when he slashed through the rope that held him to the machine. Over and over he rolled with the bundle of gun and ammunition after him until his body struck against the barrier of rock that crossed the plateau.

Slowly Giovanni lifted his head, then one arm and leg after the other. He sat up, half stunned, half wondering if he was falling through the air and half wondering if he was still riding suspended beneath the machine.

Time was not to be lost, however, and Giovanni quickly unpacked the gun, loaded the disc of shells and examined his rifle to see that it was in good order after the tumble it had received. The rifle was not injured.

Giovanni shouldered it and went to explore the opposite side of the plateau behind the ridge. He found an open place smaller than his own landing place. Cautiously he glanced over the edge. The Austrians had worked throughout the night and were near the top. They would have to approach the top one at a time, with their rifles strapped to their backs. They were unaware of what was waiting for them, and Giovanni smiled.

Stepping back he waited. Another spike was driven home below. Giovanni was doing some fast thinking. If the first man saw him he would shout a warning to those below. The first man would be sure to withdraw as soon as he stuck his head above the edge. The men probably were climbing without ropes, as most of the soldiers do in the Alps.

So Giovanni stood with rifle ready for the appearance of the first Austrian. First he saw an ungloved hand reach up from below and grasp the rock. Then an arm and the head and shoulders. Giovanni fired. There was a piercing yell. The Austrian flung high his hands and toppled backward.

Two went along the path that led back of the ledge where he knew the Austrians must be lying in wait. Soon he saw the men return and report. Then they returned and soon were carrying rifles. These were handed to the Italian soldiers below. Then the two Italian soldiers climbed up toward Giovanni a few feet, each holding to the spikes with one hand and a revolver in the other. Soon the Austrians appeared and descended. Giovanni was ordered to lower the machine gun on the rope and to descend. This was soon accomplished. There were fifty prisoners taken from the Austrian ledge.

BUNGALOW APRONS

EVERY mother likes to see her small daughter look dainty at all times. But girls, as well as boys, get their clothes soiled at play, and while boys can be put into overalls or rompers, according to their age, few mothers will like to see their little girls dressed in these homely garments. But there will be no objection to miniature bungalow aprons on the order of those worn by the mothers, especially if a pretty color is chosen.

To make the apron measure off twice the length from the shoulder of the wearer to the edge of her dress, allowing for a deep hem, fold this and cut the top in kimono fashion, taking out under the arms to below the waist line, then cut straight across to the selvage edges. This fullness is plaited or gathered and set on after cutting slits in the body of the apron to fit. A strip of the material holds the fullness down. If preferred, the shirt part may be gored all the way down, but the child does not get the freedom the fullness allows.

These aprons are quite easy to make at home. The best kind of materials to use are the soft cotton poplins, ratine cotton and silk mixtures in the cheaper grades, and the crepe goods.

MANICURING

BY EDNA EGAN.

"THERE! Your nails are manicured," said the bustling little manicure, leaning back and looking proudly at her work. "Have I hurt you? Are your nails sore? No? Just remember that the right manicuring, which is the gentle manicuring, does not hurt the nails, does not leave them sore or bleeding, and gives you an added sense of personal comfort. In fact it is resting to the nerves.

"If by any chance you have made them sore run hot water on them, and if they bleed apply a little peroxide of hydrogen.

"Your nails are in such a bad condition that the process of shaping them at the sides may take a little time and patience. Sometimes in such a case it is well to let them grow out once quite long, in order to get them back in their natural proportions at the sides, if you have been narrowing them too much.

"How often should you manicure? Once a week is enough if you give them a little daily attention, with oil and emery board and polish. By all means don't keep digging at them and don't get lazy and say you haven't time to do them. Five minutes every day will work wonders. If they get bad again come to me; in fact, bad cases of nails should always be taken to a professional manicure to get them started right.

"Those white spots? I know you are waiting impatiently to hear about them. Prevent them, you can't remove them. It is generally said that they come from bruises on the surface of the nail, especially at the base where the growing nail is very soft, or further down on the finger where the root of the nail grows in a groove in the skin. Gentleness is the remedy. Don't press them with your instruments, don't hit them with the buffer. Be gentle while at your work. As the careful treatment, oiling and polishing go on the odious white spots will grow off with the growing nail and not reappear.

CAN YOU KEEP A SECRET?

BY LUCILLE DAUDET.

SOME women cannot seem to do without a confidante. They must have some one to whom they can tell their secrets. And how absurd it is that they should think that any one will keep it themselves!

Making confidences is one of the most foolish practices in which human beings indulge. It only leads, as a rule, to vain regrets and resolutions never to indulge again. If these resolves were kept, all would be well, but unfortunately women who have formed the habit of imparting confidences never seem to profit by their past experiences.

The habit is formed in girlhood. Almost every young girl has her intimate friend from whom no deed or even thought is concealed. As the girl grows older she often replaces her school chum with other new confidantes, one at a time following after the other, until at thirty there is quite a formidable array of women who have known her every thought and care.

Can't you see the folly of making confidences, girls? Looking back over the years behind you, you will find that the girls who were your best friends four or five years ago are scarcely acquaintances now. The friend to whom you now tell all your little secrets will be almost a stranger five years from now.

You may even quarrel with your chum in the meantime and make an enemy instead of a friend of her. Think, then, of the weapon you are placing in her hands when you confide your every thought to her, a weapon which she may or may not use, but one of your own making, nevertheless.

To be sure, there may be no harm in these confidences, there may be nothing which you think could act against you. But if you at any time estrange the affections of your confidante you have no idea what she may see fit to read between the lines of your confidences.

ODDS & ENDS

KEEP a large stock of clean tissue paper or white crepe paper on hand with which to dry windows, mirrors, etc. The paper absorbs the dampness much quicker than cloth, and after the water has been absorbed from the surface of the glass the wet sheet is thrown away and a new sheet is used to give a fine polish. You will find that the work of washing windows, etc., can be done in much less time when tissue paper or paper toweling is used in the drying.

THE arrangement of the sick room is important. People seldom realize the wonderful effect which a patient's environment has on his conditions. Brightness and sunshine must have a decided effect upon the nervous system during recovery from serious illness, although in its acute stages much shadow may have been necessary. The best outlook for a sick room is a southeasterly one. Much can be done at times by altering the bed in order that the light may not cause glare in eyes easily strained because of weakness and ill health. Have just a few flowers, very fresh; and always take trouble about their arrangement. Whispering or talking outside the door is quite unforgivable. Never, if you can avoid it, awaken a patient, whether with intention or by accident. The patient is infinitely more dependent on his food than on any medicine. Therefore, one should never spare any effort to provide him with dishes likely to be appetizing. But try not to ask him what he wants or likes. Surprises often stimulate the appetite.

ONE way to make the underwaist is to cut it from the shirtwaist pattern which fits you, making it round or square neck as you like, and with a peplum to avoid fulness over the hips. When it comes to mending, ordinary patches are put in all the way to the waistband if it seems worth while, otherwise round or square ones with the corners carefully mitered. Circular underwaist covers are a little harder to patch since the place where the holes come most quickly—under the arms—is on the bias.

A NEAT little frame for a picture is made with a handkerchief. It is first stiffly laundered. All points are directed toward the center and ironed. The four points are then turned back, just reaching the edge. They are pressed and held in place with baby-ribbon rosettes. This leaves a small square for the picture. Hang it diamond shape on the wall.

DON'T throw away sour milk. It is highly nutritious and easily digested. In fact, many people who can digest little else manage well with this. Of course, the more thoroughly the clot is broken up either before or during its consumption the better able will be the gastric juice to get into it. All milk becomes clotted after it has been swallowed. It does so in rather large lumps, which are difficult to digest, and, it may be mentioned in passing, that one reason for adding lime water to infants' milk is that it makes the clot finer. Clotted milk when taken in that state, does not form large masses in the stomach.

CUT off some strong branches of the lilac and put in a crock of earth. Put a strong solution of plant food in the earth and set the crock in a deep saucer of water, never allowing the water to dry out. Occasionally pour a weak solution of ammonia water around the stalk. Some try to force the buds by growing them in water, but, while they bud, they soon die and are never fully matured. By adding natural plant food, keeping the plant warm and moist, the flowers will develop nicely. All kinds of fruit blossoms will develop if the branches are kept in jars of water, placed in the strong sunlight.

OLD gloves, so often thrown away, have good uses. The backs of light or white ones will make face and leg coverings for dolls wanted on the Christmas tree, and there can be no better iron holders than those made of three or four placed together, as the heat will not penetrate them. Two pair of old black kid gloves boiled to a pulp in a quart of water will produce a black liquor which jellies when cold. This jelly can be melted and used as an almost unrivaled reviver of black lace and stuffs.

THE KITCHEN

Cream Eclairs.

Boil together for one moment one cup of water, half a cup of butter and one cup of flour, set away to cool and then stir in, one at a time, three eggs, not beaten, drop into greased pans and bake. After baking, which must be done in a steady oven, let them cool, cut a slit in the side and insert the filling.

Maple Walnut Tapioca.

Heat one pint of milk in double boiler, stir in carefully two tablespoons minute tapioca. Cook 15 minutes, then add the well beaten yolks of two eggs and a pinch of salt, but no sugar. Stir for three minutes, then let cool. Take two-thirds cup thick maple syrup and beat into the cool tapioca, and one cup English walnut meats closely chopped. Serve cold with whipped cream and place half nut meat on top.

Maple Blancmange.

Make one-fourth of the amount for a family of two; using one rounding tablespoon of cornstarch, half of a cup of syrup and a cup of milk. The printed rule runs thus: Mix five level tablespoons of cornstarch with one and a half cups of maple syrup until smooth; add one saltspoon of salt and half saltspoon of soda, and then pour the mixture slowly into one quart of scalding milk. Cook for 20 minutes, stirring frequently; pour it into small wet molds and serve cold with cream, either plain or whipped. When quartering this rule use the merest suspicion of soda and salt. Of course, too much would ruin the pudding.

Filling—One pint milk, two tablespoons of flour, two eggs, one cup sugar, a little salt. Let milk and sugar boil and stir milk and flour until well mixed.

Oyster Soup.

Two quarts milk, a head of celery, one-half or three-quarter pound of butter, one cup rolled crackers, salt, pinch of red pepper. Boil the milk with the celery, strain off the celery, put the milk back on the stove, add butter, seasonings, 100 oysters (or one may use a smaller quantity). Let it simmer once or twice, or until the edges of the oysters curl; thicken with the cracker and serve very hot with oyster crackers. Very delicious.

Caramel Cake With Butter Frosting.

One and one-half cups sugar, scant half cup butter, half cup sour milk, half cup chocolate dissolved in half cup boiling water, two eggs, two cups flour, flavor to taste, one teaspoon soda, pinch of salt.

Butter frosting—One cup confectioners' sugar, one tablespoon butter, one tablespoon milk, one tablespoon coffee or cocoa, one-quarter teaspoon flavoring. Mix well with spoon, then beat with silver fork until creamy.

Cracker Raisin Pudding.

Six large crackers split and well buttered. Place buttered side up in dish; pour over one quart of warm milk and let stand over night. In the morning take two eggs well beaten, half cup sugar, half teaspoon each of nutmeg, cinnamon, allspice, one-quarter teaspoon each of clove, mace, salt. Mix sugar and spice and salt together, then add the well-beaten eggs, now two-thirds cup seeded raisins. Put layer of crackers in pudding dish, layer of raisins spread over all mixture of spice, sugar and eggs. Do this until all ingredients are used, then add one cup more of milk. Bake in slow oven two hours. Keep covered first, then uncover, and if not wet enough add more milk, and when all soaked in add more.

MILADY'S BEAUTY

COURT plaster is a good wrinkle remedy. Cut the plaster into triangles and strips to fit the wrinkles and paste on in the night. Remove in the morning and massage gently for five or ten minutes with a good cold cream. Use a strong plaster and one that will stick well. The black variety is best for this purpose.

MASSAGING the scalp every day tends to loosen the scalp and thus induce a flow of blood to the hair follicles, nourishing them and causing a new growth of hair. Persistent massaging has often produced a new growth of lustrous hair where it had been thin and lifeless for years.

POLISHING powder makes the nails brittle; once a week is all that should be allowed for its use. Make a cream especially for the nails by mixing half an ounce sweet almond oil with sixteen and a half grains each of powdered alum and resin and sixteen grains table salt; to this are added a grain of carmine and forty of white wax. This cream may be rubbed on during the day, leaving it on if convenient.

IN beautifying brows a soft brush must be constantly used and frequent applications of vaseline—that is, using it twice a day, morning and night—will be beneficial, especially if instead of brushing the grease is rubbed in with the finger tips. This rubbing must be done from the nose toward the other end of the brows. The stroke of the brush must be given in the same direction. The hair must never be turned the wrong way. When the finger tips are employed the movement should be short and fairly hard—that is, sufficiently so to stimulate circulation. A beneficial unguent to put on in this way is almond oil—the sweet variety. Oil of cajuput is another good tonic. Several drops of this are rubbed into the brows every other night. A combination of red vaseline in the proportion of an ounce to half a dram of tincture of cantharides and seven drops of each of the oil of lavender and rosemary strengthened the hair. This is rubbed in morning and night.

ONE treatment for pimples is to open them with a new cambric needle, very gently press out the matter and then wipe the spot with clear alcohol. After this wipe the skin with a lotion made from one-half dram each of precipitate of sulphur, tincture of camphor and glycerin, adding two ounces of rose water. Put this most liberally over the eruption, applying it several times a day and at night.

UNLESS special precautions are taken hair is as apt to fall badly in spring and early summer as in autumn. The scalp feels the overheating of winter headgear and the general system being run down also affects it badly. Try the effect of ventilation and sunning. If possible let the hair down and sit in a sunny window for half an hour, at least, each day. If the windows can be opened all the better. Frequently run the fingers through the hair and lift it out to its full length to let the air circulate freely through it. If you have grown careless about massaging begin systematic movements for a month or six weeks. One well-known hair specialist declares that better results are to be had by rubbing the head periodically for a month or six weeks at a time and then stopping for several weeks. An excellent movement to loosen the scalp and make it flexible, also tone up the blood vessels, is to clasp the hands flatly on the top of the head and move them back and forth on the scalp in a line parallel with the shoulders.

THAT TIRED FEELING

BY MRS. McCUNE.

THERE are times for every one of us, when we get tired of what we are doing. Some grow tired of doing nothing and some of having a good time, but most of us are tired of the everlasting grind. Not always—but now and then.

The feeling comes when one catches a glimpse into the future and can find no hope of a change for the better; when one sees old age in the distance and nothing but loneliness as a reward for one's life endeavors.

If one could only loaf a while. If the brain and the tired muscles could have a rest. If the soul's longings could only be satisfied sometimes. If one could have a bit more leisure, some change of scene, even a change of occupation, without the risk of losing the little one has.

A sweet woman once said to me: "I've had many sorrows in my life, but I never think of them now. I'm remembering my blessings."

It is a good rule to follow. But there are times when one simply cannot remember blessings of the past in the pessimism of the present. Even blessings take on an indigo tint when the future seems to be marked out in the same old groove.

But the next time I'm tired of my own personal grind, I'm going to think of Mrs. Anna Nagy.

Mrs. Nagy has seven children of step-ladder ages. They are all young and must be cared for. Mrs. Nagy is thirty-four years old. Her husband earns a laborer's wage. They live in a small place near a big city, and have been married sixteen years.

In all that sixteen years Anna Nagy has never had a rest. Most of the time she has held a baby in her arms, and other babies have been tugging at her skirts.

She has kept house for her family, doing every bit of the manual labor herself. She has fed a hungry husband and seven hungry children and, when she wasn't too tired to eat, she fed herself.

Anna Nagy never sat down to rest. If she sat down at all, it was to sew or to hold a baby, and she never sat long at that, for every minute some need made her jump up to attend to it. Nor was there time to sleep enough. Seven small children have a way of keeping their mother awake nights. And of course, the man of the house must have his rest!

The other evening Anna Nagy fed her seven children, undressed them and tucked them into their beds. She washed the dishes and cleaned up the kitchen. She looked at a pile of mending to be done. And then she put on her coat and tied a shawl over her head and went out into the swirl of a blizzardy night.

She walked seven miles through the snowstorm before she was found, half frozen, half unconscious, and hurried to the city hospital.

"What was the matter? Why did you do it?" she was asked.

"I was tired," sighed Anna Nagy. "I was hunting for a place to rest."

TENACIOUS HABITS

BY MRS. KINGSLEY.

ONCE there was a professor at a well known college who used to exhort undergraduates to periodical disuse of tobacco; not because he thought tobacco a bad thing, but because he pronounced it weakness to make anything whatever indispensable to one's comfort.

Probably his principle was sound, though it requires a force of resolution rather higher than we are used to expect of human nature. But you will remark that it is a principle for undergraduates; that is, for young people. We are more adaptable at twenty than at thirty, and by forty we are nearly settled in our ways.

It is usual to speak of this as a rather contemptible, rather ridiculous tendency in human nature. We talk of people becoming fossilized, turning into mere oysters or barnacles. But in the slavery to habit there is some reason. By the time middle age is reached most sensible people have discovered for themselves the sort of life of all those within their reach that suits them best. They know what they can eat and drink without danger; they have learned by more or less unpleasant experience how much sleep their bodies demand.

So, too, with the more subtle, more spiritual needs of humanity. The middle aged know, for example, of how much affection they are capable, how much self sacrifice. Inevitably they are very reluctant to be dragged or coaxed or bullied into enterprises for which they feel themselves inadequate. At twenty, even at thirty, you may believe yourself the stuff of which saints and martyrs are made. Once you have come to forty years you know how easy it is to be ridiculous.

But times of trouble often shed a new light on our possibilities. Many a woman has discovered that she can do without many of the things that she believed necessities, and that she is capable of accomplishing tasks of which she never dreamed. Many habits which seemed as natural as breathing are abandoned under the stress of a dwindling income. When poverty makes itself felt many women and men too, have discovered that they can reconstruct themselves without catastrophe.

TENTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Jarvis Hope is detailed by the United States naval board to investigate and report his findings on the invention of Dr. Ralph Burke, which serves to bring the submarine to a state of perfection. The lieutenant arrives in Valdavia and is welcomed by the inventor and his daughter, Cleo. On the trial trip of the inventor's boat, a Japanese helper is surprised in the act of examining the mechanism of the ventilating device. Hope reports favorably on the new device but there are others interested in it. An attempt to burglarize Doctor Burke's laboratory fails, but later Cleo finds him murdered in his bedroom. Cleo sells her father's books to get money; later she finds a note from which she learns that they contain the secret formula. With Hope she races to the auctioneer's store only to find it in flames. Olga Ivanoff and Gerald Morton, two spies in search of the formula, attempt to capture Cleo when she calls at the house of Stephanski, the anarchist. Hope rushes to her aid; Morton shoots at him but the bullet hits a bomb in the cellar, which explodes. Stephanski and Cleo attend a ball at Mrs. Delmar's whose nephew has two of the missing books. Mahlin, a spy, attempts to steal the books, but is discovered by Hope; in the excitement that follows the books disappear. Mahlin escapes. Hope and Cleo take a boat for an island out in the bay. The conspirators follow in other boats. Mahlin and the Jap turn out the island light. Morton's boat with the countess strikes a stray mine in the bay. After a violent storm Hope and Cleo arrive on a strange island and discover that the man they hunt is there. But Mahlin and the Japanese also reach the island and put up a fight for the books. They escape from Hope but return and dynamite the shack. The conspirators fail to harm Hope and Cleo. They manage to reach Sandsboro, where Doctor Owen has one of the books. Each of the others approach the doctor, but he refuses to hear them. He arranges to meet Hope at the hotel with the book. Morton poses as Hope and but for an earthquake would have possessed the volume. Cleo is captured by Morton and taken in his friend's aeroplane to a lonely cabin in the mountains. She finds there the book for which they search. Fortunately she gets a note to Hope, who, with Hook, starts to the rescue. As he crosses the chasm in the swinging basket Mahlin steals up and chops at the cable with an ax.

Again Mahlin's ax rose and fell; again it bit through a strand of wire; again the tight-stretched cable sang and quivered. Hope, half way across the chasm now, and literally dangling between earth and sky, realized his peril. Yet he was helpless. So gradual was the incline of the cable that his progress was comparatively slow. He knew that before he could reach the opposite cliff Mahlin would have done his work and he would go plunging downward to meet his end on the rocks below. A thousand thoughts flashed through his mind. . . . Cleo, marooned on the ledge and dying of starvation. . . . the secret of the submarine lost to America forever. He shut his eyes and his lips moved in prayer. In another moment it would all be over. For a third time the ax swung upward . . . and then a shot rang out! A bullet spattered itself against a rock within a foot of Mahlin. He whirled about and as he did so a second bullet tore through his coat. Running across the mesa, a huge navy revolver in his hand, came Hook, firing as he ran. Even as Mahlin looked another bullet sang by his head, whereupon he dropped his ax and ran.

An instant later Hope reached the opposite bank. Swinging himself on to the ledge, he ran to where Cleo was lying in a heap. His danger and the perils through which she had passed had been too much for her; she had fainted. Lifting her limp and slender form, he bore her into the cabin and laid her tenderly upon the bunk.

"Cleo! Darling!" he whispered brokenly. "Speak to me. It's Jarvis."

Slowly consciousness returned. Her bosom rose and fell. A tinge of color invaded the alabaster of her cheeks. Her eyelids fluttered. She gave a moan which ended in a frenzied wail of "Jarvis! Jarvis!" Then her eyes opened and she looked up into the face of the man she loved.

"Is it really you, Jarvis," she murmured, "or am I dreaming? I saw you swinging on that dreadful cable. . . . I saw a man start to cut it with an ax . . . and then everything went black . . . I thought you had been killed."

"Hook saved me," he answered, "just as you fainted, darling."

"Thank God!" she whispered. "If—if anything had happened, Jarvis, I should have thrown myself over the cliff after you. Without you life would not be worth living."

"Do you care for me as much as that, dear heart?" he asked wonderingly.

"I care for you more than all the world," she answered simply.

"You are all the world to me," he whispered tenderly, as he drew her close. "I have loved you since the first time I saw you, that afternoon in your father's garden."

"It was love at sight for me, too, Jarvis."

"Will you marry me, Cleo?"

"Yes," she breathed, so softly that he could barely hear her, and her arms stole round his neck. Their lips met and for a long moment there was no sound.

Held tightly in Hope's arms, her head pillowed upon his shoulder, Cleo related her adventures. She told of being seized while strolling in the outskirts of Santa Eulalia and dragged into a car and chloroformed; of finding herself in the cabin on the ledge with Morton, and of his attempt to force her into marrying him.

"The cad!" exploded Hope, clenching his fists. "The dirty cur! I wish I could get my hands on him! One of these days I'll make him pay for his treatment of you, my darling."

"I knew that you would come for me, of course," Cleo continued, "but I was afraid that you might come too late. I had made up my mind that if he returned and attempted to so much as lay a finger on me that I would kill myself. . . . Oh, Jarvis, Jarvis!" she cried, shuddering, "you came just in time, my dear."

"You must never think of it again, dear heart," he said soothingly. "The danger is over now and you're safe in my arms."

"They say that every cloud has a silver lining—that out of evil good shall come," said Cleo, turned suddenly from grave to gay. "So, if that awful man hadn't kidnaped me and brought me here, I should never have discovered this!" and she triumphantly held up the book that she had found in the cupboard.

Hope fairly snatched it from her hand.

"I haven't found the formula itself," she answered, "but I've found where the formula is," and she showed him the inscription in her father's handwriting on the inside of the back cover.

"'Philosophy,'" he read slowly. "'Page sixty-one; every seventh word.' It can mean only one thing, of course. It means that if we will read every seventh word on page sixty-one of some work on philosophy we will have the formula of your father's invention. But the question is, which philosophy? There must be hundreds of works on the subject. Can you remember, Cleo, if there was a work on philosophy among your father's books?"

"I think there was," she said after a moment's reflection. "Yes, I am certain of it. Daddy would sometimes read aloud from it in the evenings. But I haven't the least idea what its title was or who wrote it."

"Then I'm afraid that we still have a long search ahead of us. There are still books for us to trace; the philosophy may be the last one that we find."

"I've more good news for you," said Cleo. "I noticed that this work on metallurgy is in two volumes, and, as I felt sure that Mr. Patten must have bought them both, I searched the cabin and discovered the other volume lying under the bunk. There is nothing in it, though; I've gone through it carefully. I had plenty of time for reading here," she added, laughing.

"You poor child," said Hope, kissing her upturned lips, "it makes me shudder to think of the perils through which you have passed."

"It has been worth all the perils, dear," Cleo answered softly, "because they have given me you. Now that we have each other I don't care if we never find the secret of the submarine."

Again there fell a silence in the cabin.

"I'm afraid we must be going, sweetheart," said Hope at last, "or Hook will think that something has happened to us. We've kept the poor old fellow waiting over there for nearly an hour. And he saved my life, too."

"It only makes us square then, lootenant," boomed a familiar voice at the cabin door. "I ain't fergot how you saved me from that shark down in Pago-Pago bay."

"Wall, I got sorter tired a waitin' fer you two young folks to finish your reunion, so I took a look around and what should I find, hidden away, nice as you please, in the bushes, but the basket? So I hauls back the block, hooks on the basket, and sails across as easy as though I wuz on one o' them there roller-coasters."

"You saved my life, Hook," said Hope, holding out his hand, which the old seaman grasped in his horny palm. "I shan't forget it. You came just in the nick of time."

"P'raps it wuz just as well that I come along when I did," Hook admitted. "Two more strokes o' that ax and you'd a been a goner, lootenant. And it wuz a forchnit thing that before we left the hotel I slipped my six-shooter in my pocket. I wuz out o' breath from climbin' the mountain and my aim wuz a leetle unsteady, but I made the feller vamoose just the same."

"Who was he?" asked Hope.

"It wuz Satsuma's side-pardner, Mahlin."

"Mahlin, eh?" repeated Hope. "I thought it might be Morton. The next time I meet either of those gentlemen," he added grimly, "there's going to be a reckoning."

"Waal, Miss Cleo," said Hook, turning to the girl, "it certainly does my heart good to find you safe and sound. We wuz pretty much worried about you fer a time."

"You're a perfect dear, Hook," she said, putting her hands affectionately on the old salt's burly shoulders. "You saved my life when you carried me out of Stephanski's cellar just before the bombs exploded, and now you have saved Mr. Hope's life. If it were not for you neither of us would be here—and that is why I am going to tell you a very great secret. Mr. Hope and I are engaged."

"Whoop! Whoop-ee!" he shouted, grasping their hands. "I wish you both, you, lootenant, and you, Miss Cleo, all the health and happiness and good luck in the world. I'm a good-fer-nothin', no-account old sailor, but when your paw died, Miss Cleo, I sez to myself, sez I, 'Doctor Burke took care o' you when you wuz down and out, Hook Barnacle, and now he's gone it's up to you to look after his daughter.' I ain't made a very good gardeen, Miss Cleo, but I done the best I knew how."

Standing on tiptoe, so that her lips were level with Hope's ear, Cleo whispered something to him. Then, with flaming face, she fled from the cabin.

"She says, Hook," said Hope, "that if we ever have a boy his middle name shall be Barnacle."

The book which contained the key to the code being too bulky to be carried easily, Hope contented himself with cutting off that portion of the book which contained the annotation.

"I ought to leave some word for this fellow Patten," he remarked. "It's hardly fair to cut up his book and not let him know who did it."

So he scrawled in pencil on the inside of the front cover:

"Mr. Patten—I have taken the liberty of cutting out a message which I found in this book. If you will communicate with me at the Shaftsbury hotel, Santa Eulalia, I shall be glad to reimburse you.

"JARVIS HOPE."

"Now," he remarked, "we must be starting. We have three or four hours of hard walking ahead of us and we must be out of the mountains before it gets dark."

Though Mahlin's ax-strokes had materially weakened the cable, it was still strong enough to support one person at a time, Cleo, Hook, and Hope making the passage across the chasm in the basket in turn. Then, turning their backs on the spot where they had found so much peril and so much of happiness, they set out on the long and arduous trip down the mountains.

* * * * * * * *

About the time that the three were leaving the cabin on the ledge, Morton and Olga were preparing to visit the mountains in the aeroplane. And Olga was by no means a welcome passenger.

"I think that I'll fly up to the mesa this afternoon and have a talk with the Burke girl," Morton had carelessly remarked. "She's been in the cabin three days now and I fancy that by this time she won't be quite so stubborn."

"And I think that I will go with you," Olga had rejoined. "I can get more out of the girl than you can."

"Nonsense," said Morton. "You don't want to go along. It's no trip for a woman. It's a nasty place to land up there on the mesa. There's no use in taking unnecessary risks."

"I'll take any risks that you will," said Olga decisively. "I have already said that I am going with you."

"And I say that you're not," said Morton angrily. The last thing in the world that he desired was to have Olga present during his interview with Cleo, for he knew that were the Russian woman to suspect his scheme of forcing Cleo to marry him she was quite capable of making things very unpleasant indeed. And his fears were fully justified by her next remark.

"You will either take me with you," she told him, "or I shall inform the police of some of your recent activities. I fancy that were it known that you are the kidnaper of the Burke girl for whom everyone is searching you would be lucky to escape with your life. They're a hot-headed people, these Californians, and they don't take kindly to having their women stolen. . . . Come, come, my friend. You can't 'put it over' on me, as you Americans say. You're much too anxious to see the girl alone. You will find it a dangerous business to try any double-dealing with me."

"Come along, then," he snarled, making the best of the situation, for he was perfectly aware that, were he to persist in his refusal, Olga would make good her threat.

Morton had been telling the literal truth when he asserted that the flight to the mesa was a hazardous one, for the stiff north wind that had sprung up added materially to the dangers of flying over a mountainous region. Twice they were nearly capsized by the treacherous air currents which unexpectedly swept up at them from the canyons, and it was only Morton's skill as an aviator that saved them. The wind increased in velocity as they ascended, and it was only after repeated circlings that Morton was able to effect a landing on the mesa, which was none too spacious for the purpose, even under the most favorable weather conditions.

"There's the cabin," he said, pointing, after he had helped Olga to alight, "but I don't see any sign of the girl. She must be inside. We'll go over and give her a surprise party."

"It will be a surprise party for her if she remains stubborn," remarked the Russian woman significantly. "A hot iron, properly applied, is a wonderful incentive for making people talk. I saw it used on a soldier once, in the fortress of Peter and Paul. He was a brave man, but it made a baby of him."

Though her tone made even the callous Morton wince, he made no comment, but led the way across the mesa. Pushing his way through the bushes that fringed the chasm, he stopped abruptly at sight of the basket swinging from the cable, where Hope had left it.

"What the devil does this mean?" he ejaculated. "I unhooked the basket before I left and hid it in the bushes. Someone must have been here."

"I fancy it means," remarked Olga dryly, "that your bird has flown."

"Impossible!" asserted Morton. "She could no more escape from that ledge without assistance than she could escape from the moon. And there was no way in which she could get word to anyone."

"There's nothing to be gained by standing here and arguing about it," said Olga acidly. "Suppose we go across and see if she's still there."

"After you then," said Morton. "The basket waits, my lady."

"Thank you, no," she replied. "After you. I'm taking no chances of having you maroon me on the ledge the way you claim to have marooned the Burke girl. You'll go first, if you please, my friend."

"You seem to be obsessed with suspicions of my motives, dear countess," sneered Morton, "but anything to please." Stepping into the basket, he slid across, whereupon Olga hauled it back and crossed in her turn. Together they approached the cabin. Morton flung open the door.

"She's escaped, the little devil!" he snarled. "I feared as much when I saw the basket. She had help from outside, of course."

"What's this?" exclaimed Olga, spying on the table the two books.

"Merciful heaven!" she cried, pointing to Patten's name on the flyleaf of one of them. "They're the very books we have been looking for! How did they get here?"

"I've no more idea than you have," said Morton, utterly stupefied. "I didn't see a sign of any books when I brought the girl here. Of all the hellish coincidences! To think that I should have stumbled on the cabin of the very man we have been trying to find and not have known it!"

"You may well call it a hellish coincidence," she snapped, holding up the volume from which Hope had cut the key to the code. "This tells the story. The naval officer that you are always sneering at has been too smart for you. He has not only found his way here and rescued the girl, but he has evidently discovered the secret of the submarine. You idiot! You blockhead! You fool!" she screamed, flaring into a sudden passion. "You had the secret almost in your hands and you have let it get away from us! Was there ever such incredible imbecility?"

But Morton was too stunned by the disaster to reply to her taunts. The imposing edifice that his imagination had erected had suddenly collapsed. With Cleo's escape ended his scheme of forcibly marrying her and thus obtaining possession of the fortune which she had inherited from Calvin Montgomery. And, as though this were not enough, the secret of the submarine, on finding which he had staked everything, had slipped through his very fingers and was now, he was convinced, in the hands of his rival, the man whom he hated more than any other—Jarvis Hope. The lavish expenditures he had made in prosecuting the search had almost exhausted his means. Gerald Morton was a desperate and a dangerous man.

"Well," demanded Olga, when her anger had somewhat subsided, "what are we going to do about it? There is nothing to be gained by sulking like disappointed children."

"We are going to follow them," said Morton grimly. "I'm going to get that formula if I have to kill them both."

"That," said Olga approvingly, "is the way to talk. Let us be going."

"Their mutual jealousies and suspicions forgotten in the loss of the formula, they recrossed the chasm and climed into the aeroplane. A moment later and, with a roar from its propellers, it rolled forward across the mesa and soared into the air. During their brief stay in the cabin, however, the wind, already dangerously high, had risen to a gale, and as their craft, leaving the comparatively sheltered mesa, climbed skyward, it was buffeted as a ship is buffeted by the waves. But it was impossible to return to the mesa now, and to attempt to descend elsewhere was but to invite disaster. The driving force of its powerful engines notwithstanding, the aeroplane was as helpless as a skiff in a storm. Yet so masterly was Morton's driving, so perfect his co-ordination of hand and brain, that it seemed as though his skill would triumph over the elements and that he would succeed in reaching the plan in safety. But suddenly a windsquall leaped out at them from a canyon over which they were passing; the frail machine reeled and quivered before the blow, and, despite Morton's desperate efforts, turned sideways, capsized and plunged like a wounded bird into the golf below.

An hour or so later a party of cowpunchers, returning to their ranch after rounding up a bunch of strays in the hills, saw on the rocky slope of the canyon a tangled mass of canvas, wood, and steel. Galloping up, they perceived, half buried beneath the wreckage of the aeroplane, the bodies of Olga and Morton.

"They're still breathing, boys," pronounced one of the punchers when he and his companions had succeeded in extricating the inanimate forms. "They're in pretty bad shape. The girl's ribs are all stove in and I'm afraid the fellow's cracked his skull. Bill, you chase down to the ranch and bring up the spring wagon. Better put in a mattress and plenty of blankets, and bring along some whisky. Send one of the boys off to town for the doctor—and tell him to get a move on, too. These people are hurt mighty bad."

So that when Morton and Olga regained consciousness, days later, they found themselves in a ranch-house in a mountain valley, with cowboys nursing them back to health.

* * * * * * * *

Cleo, Hope, and Hook, slowly making their way down the mountainside, little suspected that, following them like bloodhounds, were Mahlin and Satsuma. When the three in front paused to rest the two conspirators paused also, taking the utmost pains, however, to keep themselves concealed; when Cleo and her companions went forward, Mahlin and the Japanese did the same. Their progress was slow, however, for the country they were traversing was extremely rough, seamed with gorges and broken by unexpected outcroppings of rock. Part way down the mountain the trail that they were following entered a winding gorge, so narrow that they were compelled to walk in single file. As they emerged from it, with Cleo somewhat in the lead, Mahlin and Satsuma, who had made a detour so as to intercept them, sprang from a rock behind which they were crouching. So unexpected was the attack that Hope and Hook were taken completely by surprise. Satsuma, felling Hook with a single blow of his billy, turned to assist Mahlin, who was engaged in a desperate struggle with Hope.

"Run, Cleo! Run!" shouted the latter. "Get help!"

Hardly were the words out of his mouth, however, than the Japanese, watching his opportunity, dealt him a terrific blow on the back of the head and, with a smothered groan, the young officer sank to the ground. All this Cleo saw, but not until Mahlin started toward her did she realize that she was powerless to aid her friends and that her own life was in imminent peril. Then, with Mahlin barely a score of yards behind, she turned and ran like a frightened dear. Satsuma stopped only long enough to rifle Hope's pockets, taking from them his pocketbook, his papers, and the piece of the book-cover containing the key to the code. Then he, too, joined in the pursuit of Cleo. Straight down the mountain slope the chase led, over rocks, in and out of gullies, through underbrush and streams. Sometimes Cleo was out of sight of her pursuers, sometimes they were only a few yards behind. But she was young and strong and terror lent her wings, and she would have made her escape had her flight not been abruptly halted by a deep gulch which formed a fissure in the earth at right angles to the course she was pursuing. On the edge of it she stopped, trembling. Though the opposite bank of the gulch, which was comparatively narrow, was not too steep to scale, the side on which she stood fell away so precipitously that it was impossible for her to clamber down it, and, as it was a half a hundred feet to the bottom, to drop was equally out of the question. Like a hunted animal she glanced about her. Her retreat was cut off by Mahlin and Satsuma, who were rapidly approaching. She must act quickly if she was to escape their clutches. All at once she spied a great tree, a veritable monarch of the forest, which was growing from the bank on which she stood at such an angle that it partially overhung the gulch. Hanging from the tree was a wild grapevine of extraordinary length and thickness—the largest, in fact, that she had ever seen. It was as thick as an inch rope. Why, then, would it not serve as a rope on which she could swing to safety? Pulling on the hanging vine, she found that it was firmly anchored and that it was apparently strong enough to bear her weight. It was a hazardous plan, she knew; the chances were all in favor of the vine breaking and of her being dashed upon the rocks below. But such a fate was better, far better, she felt, than to be at the mercy of the human fiends who were closing in on her. Jerking the vine free of the trunk, she grasped it firmly with both hands, as, when a child, she had grasped the swing-rope in the school playground. Stepping well back so as to get the impetus of a run, she sped forward and, just as she felt the touch of Mahlin's outstretched hand, her feet spurned the earth and she swung out into space like a human pendulum.

BEES AS GERMAN ALLIES

Made to Aid Bullets Against British Fighting Force in East Africa.

The Central News quotes from the Natal Mercury, accounts of the difficulties confronting the British fighting forces in East Africa, furnished by an officer of the East African mounted rifles ,who formerly was a coffee planter at Nairobi. This officer said the principal difficulty was the great density of the bush which rendered effective scouting almost impossible and provisioning troops very difficult.

Of the ingenuity of Germans there is no doubt, as the following incident will prove: Round about Tanga, where the Lancashires landed, is a considerable bee country. The natives have a device whereby they placed hollow logs in trees to enable bees to construct their hives, and from these the natives collect honey. In one place the Germans tied a whole lot of these logs together and attached them to a wire in long grass. They also invented a plan which caused a white flag to jump up when anyone came into contact with the wire, this being the signal for them to turn machine guns on to the spot.

A party of Lancashires had the ill luck to stumble over the wire with the result that dozens of beehives fell and up sprang the white flag, revealing their whereabouts. The Lancashires immediately had bees and bullets to contend with, and between the two had a hot time.

Them who eggerly opens up this ishue of the Bugle expeckting to find a brillyunt eddytoriul in this collum will be bitterly disappinted. As edditor, prop. & everythink else conneckted with the publicashion of the most and only uptodatest newspaper in this end of the co we regret this absents of a eddytoriul turrible, but it cant be helpd. The way it happend was largely as follers:

Last Monday morning we tuk our eddytoriul pen in hand to dash off a eddytoriul so as to git it outen the way early in the wk so it would be offen our mind being as having to write a eddytoriul onct per wk is the most obnockshious task we haft to do. Well we haddent enny moren tuk our eddytoriul pen in hand when Ame Hillyer our talented loryer & leggal lite druv up to our offis in his buggy and perswaded us to accompany him to the co seat on bizness & pleashure being as Ame said he diddent want to make the trip alone and would ruther have us go with him for company sake then nobuddy a tall so being flatterd that Ame desired our sossiety we dropt everythink and went with him.

On Tuesday morning we woke up with a splittin headake whitch may or may not have been caused by some ginger beer whitch we partuk of at the co seat the day before to refresh our drooping spirrits. Be that as it may we laid in bed all day Tuesday incapacytated to sitch a extent that we couldnt of wrote a eddytoriul if we had of been hung becuz we diddent.

On Wensday we made up our mind that we would write a eddytoriul or bust but afore we could do so or bust either we recd a threttining letter from the folks from who we buy our paper to print the Bugle on to the effeckt that unless we paid last wks bill of $11.75 cts for paper they wouldnt let us have enny paper to print this wks Bugle on, and so we had to git out and hustle amungst our advertisers and back subscribers and almost git down on our knees to scrape up enuff money to lickydate this obligashion and when night come no eddytoriul had been wrote.

Thursday somethink or other hinderd us from dashing off a eddytoriul ditto Friday and the same on Satterday and here we be all ready to go to press without no eddytoriul having been wrote. This is the 1st time sitch a calamitty has happend to us for lo these menny yrs and we promis with great sollumnitty that it will be longern that afore it happens agin.

You will understand why no eddytoriul appears in this ishue. However we will make up for this defishency in next wks Boogle or know the reason why so look out for a turrible important eddytoriul in the next ishue.

Eb Hoover who has been botherd for yrs with a wart on his nose tuk some fools advice and tide a silk thred around it tite to remoove it. Well the thread remooved the wart but Ebs nose swelled up to twict its nacheral size and now he looks ridickulus in the extream. Our advice would be for ennybuddy with a wart on their nose to let it alone.

Bill Hendricks made a vissit to Hardscrabble last wk and indulged in the lushury of a haircut from the barber there. Being as Bill haddent had a haircut for about 2 yrs it so changed his appearants that when he returned home even his old dog "Tige" diddent know him and started for Bill who had to clime a appel tree.

Miss Hildy Wade, the bell of the Crossroads who was a gest of her aunt at the co seat three days last wk on a vissit returned home sick. Hildy says she gesses she et too mutch while away, things tasted that good to her.

Henry Tate had a hen to lay two duble yokked eggs for him last wk, one on Tuesday and one on Friday. We consider this quite a remarkable feet for the same hen to perform, speshially in one wk. Who can beat this laying dubble yoked eggs?

Sam Wilkins is engaged in breaking a cupple of steers to the yoke in a effort to make a pair of oxes outen em. Theyre purty stubborn and Sam can be heerd breakink em nearly a mile away.

These is all the news in our midst whitch we can think of at the present writing but no doubt some more will ockur by next wk.

SORROW HOLLOW

Enos Simpson while riding his old white mare "Lily" who is 24 yrs old going on 25 down through the village recent scairt at a newspaper witch blowd acrost the road and begin to ackt up like a fool. She snorted and kicked up her heels and throwd Enos clean over her head into the middle of the road and then run until she was all outen breth. When Enos ketched "Lily" he give her a good talkin to—he told her it was ridickulus for a old mare at her time of life to skeer at annythink as in significant as a newspaper.

Lonk Jones is helping Moze Higham bild fence at present but they aint got mutch accompishd so fur. They both differ from each other on politicks and spend most of the time argyfyin. Lank likes to argyfy with Moze becuz when he does so he aint workin except with his mouth whitch comes nacheral to him and yet his pay goes on jest the same.

Mrs. Jemima Hoff went to her back kitchen door last Tuesday to throw out the dish water and throwd about 2 gals of same right into her husband Jim Hoffs fase who was jest coming up the steps. This was a good eal of a surprise to Jim but he diddent say mutch to Jemima. Jim never does say mutch to Jemima—he knows better.

Pluto Larkins set a steel trap for a fox whitch has been stealing his chikkens and ketched a old dominecker hen in the trap. Being as she was crippeld for life Plute killed the hen and had her for dinner last Sunday but he says she was so blamed tuff that a leetle mite of her went a long ways as far as he was concerned.

We aint had enny rain in our midst for nearly 2 wks. Why is this?

Miss Sally Branscomb is keeping company with Josiah Perkins, Eb Perkinses boy at present. She seems to of kind of dropd you aint she, Sam? Well, alls fair in love or a fistfite, so they say.

Hank Wants One

Hank Dewberry one of our most dilatory cittizens has got his heart and sole set on buyin a motersickel and cant talk about nothink else lately.

Hanks says he calkilates that a motersickel is one of the greatest invenshions what has ever been invented for gettin a person from one place to another in the soonest possibil time and that if he can ever scrape up suffishent funds blamed if he dont invest in one.

Personally we aint got on ambishion to buy a motersickel and if we had one wed he afeared to try to ride it and we dont regard ourself as a cowyard either. Judging from the few motersickels whitch we have saw passing through Bingville at the rate of about 100 miles per hour we would jest as leef try to ride a streek of greased lightnin or a sky rocket on the 4th of July or a bunch of firecrackers.

But it aint no use to reason with Hank when he gits a noshion in his head. The only think that will pervent him purchasing a motersickel is lack of funds. Hank says he knows where he can buy a seckond hand motersickel over to the co seat for $100 and being as he alreddy has saved up two dollars all he lacks is $98.

Talkd in His Sleep

Deacon Butterworth, one of our most respeckted cittizens & a stunch piller of the Bingville church made himself ridickulus in church service last Sunday morning while Rev. M Saml Moore our beloved paster was preacining the gospil.

As everbuddy knows Deacon Butterworth is a great hand to swap horses and dicker in same. Most folks hereabouts knows this to their sorrer being as a person has to git up turrible erly in the morning to git ahead of Deacon Butterworth in a horse trade being as he'll skin you outen your eye teeth if you dont look out.

Well last Sunday morning at church the Deacon was in his reglar place in the Amen corner as ushual and as soon as Rev. Moore begin his discourse the Deacon went to sleep as ushual. The sermon was about haff over and Rev. Moore had jest started in on his eighthly when all of a suddint the Deacon hollerd right out loud as follers so everybuddy in the congregashion could hear, "By mighty, I tell you that hoss is sound as a doller and gentle as a lamb!"

Plutarch Watkins who was setting next to the Deacon give him a jab in the ribs and the Deacon woked up with a jerk and Plutarch whisperd to him what he had said. Everybuddy in the audience was lookin at the Deacon and even Rev. Moore had stopd and was glarin at him very severe.

When the Deacon realized what a fool he had made of hisself his fase got as red as a beet and he lookd awful cheep and twisted around in his pew and scrooched down so low that he was outen sight of nearly everybuddy in the congregashion. Then Rev. Moore perceeded with his sermon.

If you desire to git the Deacon riled up jest ask him if he thinks its right to swap horses in church on the Sabbath when hes asleep.

Bad Cold for Gorm

Gorm Hankins has a turrible bad cold in his head chest and all thru his system for that matter. How it ockurd is as follers:

Last Wensday Gorm went out to bild fence and you know yourself what a awful hot day last Wensday was. Well afore Gorm had been bilding fence two hours he was soakin wet with perspirashion and so thirsty he could of drunk a well dry. So Gorm he knockd off bildin fence and adjurned to the house to rest and git a drink. When Gorm reached the house the only cool place he could find was down cellar so he went down and set on a box beside his barl of hard cider from whitch he refreshed hisself from time to time.

When Gorm woke up three hours later he founs hisself layin on the damp dirt floor and calkilates he must of dozed off and fell offen the box. Be that as it may Gorm as a result of coolin off too quick when he was so awful hot ketched what he says is one of the turriblest colds that a mortal man or any other kind of a man ever had. Gorm is all bungd up in the head and chest and cant speek above a whisper. Doc Livermore says if Gorm dont come to him he is liable to pass away. Gorm says he aint no liabler to pass away than if he takes Doc Livermores horse medisin and besides feeling so miserable he dont keer mutch if he does.

Personal Mentchion

Several hen houses has been robbed in our midst during the past few weeks. Some folks thinks its foxes, but Seth Dewberry our lion hearted town constubble says he calkilates its two legged foxes. Seth says he has several clews and unless this chikken stealing desists the law is liable to take its course.

Eb Simpson started a long needed job when he begin to whitewash his railings in front of his residence last wk but when Eb had the job about haff finished he splashd some whitewash into his eye whitch pained him very severe. This made Eb mad who throwd down his brush and says the rest of that fence can rot before he'll whitewash it. As far as thats concernd the fence almost did rot before Eb whitewashed haff of it.

Everybuddy in Bingville calls this purty hot wether but old Dad Hendersone our wether perdickter & profet says it dont hold a candle to the hot whether there was in Bingville during July, 1821. We never knowd Dad was that old.

Amzi Gookins who fit and bled in the war of the Rebellyun and has a wood leg to show for it while walking down st tother day slipd offen the sidewalk and sprained his ankel. EXPLANASHION—Praps we ort to state that the ankel that Amzi sprained was the ankel of his other leg & not his wood leg.

Lokal Squibs

Mehitable Wilkins is nitting wool socks for her husband, Ben Wilkins. Mehitable nitts wool socks for Ben during the summer and he wears em out during the winter. She says he is awful hard on his socks.

Hen Weathersby prop of our general store says trade is so slack this hot weather that he aint skeercely paid for keeping the store open and if it wassent for transhient trade of strangers passing thru sitch as ottomobeelists, et cettery he would shut up shop. Hen says that day before yesterday he had 65 cts worth of transhient trade inclooding seegars, crackers & cheese, etc.

Bud Hinckley who aint quite right in his head aint did nothink out of the way during the past wk. Skeercely a wk passes that Bud dont go cut some prank or git into some scrape but for the past few days he has been acktink almost huming.

Miss Sally Hoskins has abandund her work on a pome entitled "Loves Kwest" whitch we hoped to be able to publish in the Bugle long before this but Sally says it aint no use for her to try to git enny inspirashion for pome writing sitch hot wether as this being as her Moose (whatever that is) wont work a tall.

Zeke Pillsbury from Happy Valley was saw shaking hands on our sts last Tuesday but he diddent show hisself at this offis. Sinst Zeke owes us $11.50 on back subscripshion we persoom he perfers to do his handshaking elsewhere than with us.

These seems to about all the "Lokal Squibs" we can scrape together at this time without a going out of our way to do so and we aint got time to do that. We allus give you all the "Lokal Squibs" we have on hand & we would appershiate it if you would reciprokate this faver by leaving a "Lokal Squib" at this offis now and then for publicashion.

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago, July 22.—Wild buying carried wheat prices up 3c a bushel today before any reaction set in. Opening prices, which ranged from ½c to 1¾c higher, with September at $1.15¾ to $1.16⅜ and December at $1.18⅝ to $1.19¼, were followed by a rapid further ascent and then a slight down turn.

The close was strong, 3⅜c to 3¾@3⅞c net higher, with September at $1.19 and December at $1.21⅞.

Dry hot weather and the wheat strength lifted the corn market. After opening ¼c to 1¼c higher, prices continued to rise.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, July 22.—Short covering accounted largely for the activity of today's operations, although trading was again wholly professional and limited to speculative favorites. United States Steel was the foremost feature, rising to 86½, its best price of the week, on transactions embracing numerous 1,000 to 2,000 share lots. Automobile stocks were prominent at advances of three to ten points, the latter for general motors, and munitions were moderately better, with substantial gains in minor steel and metal issues. Bethlehem Steel lost ten points. Tobaccos showed additional advances, with some inquiry for beet sugar. Rails played no part in the day's business, aside from a four-point decline in Wisconsin Central. The closing was strong. Bonds were steady.

The week-end session opened with very light dealings and few changes of importance. Specialties again furnished the only noteworthy features, Industrial Alcohol, Willys-Overland, American Locomotive, American Linseed preferred and Hides and Leather preferred, recording gains of substantial fractions to over a point. American Writing Paper preferred and International Nickel were inclined to yield.

United States Steel and similar industrials were barely steady, and rails were almost utterly neglected. Tobaccos were represented by Liggett & Myers, which rose over six points.

TAKEN UNDER ADVISEMENT.

Case against Elva Diehl, charged with obtaining $90 from George Hanold under false pretenses, was taken under advisement. Hanold claims that Diehl sold him a coffee urn, wash-stand, dish rack and cash register which belonged to the Schlitz Brewing company and to Mr. Fahnke, who operates a restaurant at 720 Mechanic street.

Hanold purchased the restaurant at 1435 West Main street from Diehl. The room had formerly been used for saloon and a part of the bar fixtures were left in Diehl's care, it was testified. Hanold claims Diehl sold him these things for $90.

FUGITIVES TO BE RETURNED.

James Malatesto, 24, and Jenny Gionatenko, 14, Italians, were turned over to Chicago officials. A detective from Chicago will come for them q ETM Chicago came for them this afternoon. They are listed as fugitives and Malatesto is accused of kidnaping the girl.

The pair were arrested when found in a room together on Melita street by Detective Sergeant Immel Friday night. Their arrest followed a communication from Chicago.

MILK CASE DISMISSED.

Paul Kucher, the new dairy and milk inspector, appeared in police court Saturday morning for the first time. He was interested in the case of Henry D. Korte, living near Fort Wayne, charged with selling milk without a license.

Korte's arrest resulted from a misunderstanding, Kucher said. Korte will take out the proper license at once. The health board officer asked that the case be dismissed. Kucher stayed for most of the police court session. He enjoyed it, he said, but hoped he would not have to be in court often.

OTHER POLICE COURT CASES.

Paul Klincher, charged with public intoxication, and Harry Miller, convicted of train riding, were let go. Remi Wingor, the man who fractured his skull a week ago when he hit his head on a wheel of a truck at the interurban station while intoxicated, is still in the hospital. His case is not critical, however, and his trial will follow recovery.

YOUTH WHO SHOT AT TRAIN BOUND OVER

Farmer Lad, Who Wounded Five Passengers, to Appear in Higher Court.

Kenneth Gallagher, the farmer youth who shot into the vestibule of the Twentieth Century Limited as the train flew past a woods near New Haven last week and wounded five passengers, was bound over to the circuit court from police court Saturday morning. He is held under $300 bond.

Captain Stoll, of the Pennsylvania railroad detective force, reported that all those who were injured by the scattering shots from Gallagher's gun are recovering as far as he can learn. One of the men still has five of the small lead shots in his leg, although several have been removed, Stoll was told. All of those injured when Gallagher tried his marksmanship on the speeding train are now in the east.

Elmer Reinschneider, Gallagher's companion, who sat on the log beside him when Gallagher suddenly decided to shoot the train, must also appear in higher court. He is held on his own recognizance.

Judge Kerr had expected to settle the case in police court. He was taking into consideration only the statute providing for shooting at trains. The fact that passengers were injured makes the offense a felony and it must be ended in the circuit court.

GOTHAM CIVIC BODIES FAVOR BARGE CANAL

Letters Urging Construction of Waterway Sent to Board.

Welding Ring, chairman of the executive board of the New York chamber of commerce, has thrown his strength to the support of a rehearing for the Lakes Erie and Michigan Waterway association before the board of rivers and harbors at Washington, setting forth the benefits and necessity of the Toledo, Fort Wayne and Chicago barge canal. T. E. Ellison, Fort Wayne attorney, has received a copy of a letter which Ring wrote to the rivers and harbors board

Mr. Ring says he is sure that the chamber of commerce of New York will indorse the rehearing, although it is not in session for the summer and cannot act officially now on any endorsement. Mr. Ring states he studied the canal proposition when he was president of the New York Produce exchange, it being brought before that body several years ago. "I was then convinced the project was very reasonable and desirable," Mr. Ring declares in his letter. "I am a great believer in canal transportation for all bulky products."

Exchange Sends Letter.

The New York Produce exchange also sent a letter to the rivers and harbors board signed by E. E. Carhart, chairman; Welding Ring, William Mott, W. H. Douglas, W. B. Cragin, E. T. Cushing, A. G. Field and E. S. Allen. One extract from the letter says: "The great possibilities of the waterway proposed are so apparent that we believe it a part of wisdom to delay any action that would stop further proceedings until at least after the opening of the new barge canal of the state of New York."

Get Cost Idea.

When the barge canal of the state of New York is finished some idea of the cost of constructing the Michigan-Erie canal will be easier obtained, the New York Produce exchange members think.

Mr. Ellison has received a letter from one of the engineers in which he says the board's office in the old postoffice building, New York, will be retained until after the hearing in November. All of the maps, profiles and general reports are in that office.

Col. John Millis, head of the board, has been removed to Savannah, Ga., by a report received in Fort Wayne.

LOCAL MERCHANTS MAKE NEW RULING

"Charity Advertising" is Absolutely Tabooed by Association.

Positively no more charity advertising will be given by the members of the Indiana Retail Merchants Association of Fort Wayne, as indicated by the following notice that has been made public by Secretary Harry F. Kennerk:

"We, the merchants and other business men whose names are hereto attached, do hereby agree each with the other, that we will not advertise in any newspaper publication that is not admitted to the United States mails as second-class matter.

"That we will not advertise in any program, book or any similar publication gotten out by any club, fraternal order, church, factory or social organization, or any organization whatsoever, unless the parties promoting such publication produce a written letter from Mr. H. F. Kennerk, secretary of this association, certifying that the proposition has received the indorsement of our sanction committee.

"We further agree that unless the same authority is shown, that we will not donate either money or goods to society fairs or other similar public entertainments, field days, athletic, church or other pleasure organizations, and that we will not buy any tickets whatsoever to such entertainments.

"We further agree that we will not resort to the use of trading stamps, gifts, premiums, prizes, or any similar unhealthy schemes of trade promotion.

"Recognizing, however, that we are all of us desirous of bearing even more than our full share in the support of worthy public objects, we except from the above prohibitions, such organizations as follows: Allen County Orphan asylum, Catholic Orphan asylum, Reformed Orphan asylum, Associated Charities, Humane society, Fort Wayne Relief Union, Columbia Street Mission, Anti-Tuberculosis League, Hope Hospital association, Visiting Nurse League, Lutheran Hospital association, Catholic Hospital association, Young Women's Christian association, Young Men's Christian association and other worthy associations not mentioned above, organized for similar purpose."

MUSTER MOTOR CARS FOR MILITARY USE

Prominent South Bend Men Launch New Step in Preparedness.

South Bend, Ind., July 22.—Prominent merchants and manufacturers of South Bend, have formed a motor car reserve company and are endeavoring to secure legislation which will authorize similar organizations throughout the country under the supervision of the secretary of war.

They have petitioned congress for and have appealed to Senator Thomas Taggart and Representative H. A. Barnhart, of the thirteenth Indiana district to assist in the passage of the bill which the members of the South Bend motor car reserve company have drawn.

One of the purposes of the organizations will be to keep the war department advised where it will be possible to secure motor cars with the least possible delay in the event of an urgent need.

In addition to supplying available trucks, motor cars and motorcycles in time of emergency, the members of such companies would receive military training under the direction of officers of the regular army.

Another important phase of the proposed bill is one designed to create sentiment for highway improvement for both commercial and military requirements.

The South Bend men ask that in case the bill is passed their organization be designated as Company A, First regiment, of the first division.

LODGE NOTES

A beautiful American flag was presented to Henry W. Lawton camp, No. 35, United Spanish War veterans, by Comrade August C. Hartwig, at the regular meeting Friday evening. Past Commander John G. B. Jones made the presentation to the camp on behalf of Comrade Hartwig. The speech of acceptance was made by Commander Levi A. Todd. Two comrades of 1898 and three of 1861 were mustered in.

A special meeting of the Eagles' lodge has been called by President A. J. Ortlieb for Monday evening at 8:15 o'clock to decide whether the order will put on a week's circus here, beginning August 28. The picnic committee has completed arrangements for the annual picnic to be held Sunday, August 13, at Centlivre's park.

The Protected Home circle initiated a large class of candidates Thursday evening. After the initiation, the Willing Workers supplied the circle with ice cream and cake. A fine selection was rendered by Lady Lura Royer, which was very much appreciated. Dancing followed.

Made Him Duck

Everytime somebody came into the office, whenever he wanted to see the clock or look across the room, Mr. Busyman had to duck his head and look over his glasses. When a friend suggested Meigs' Kryptoks, the double glass without seams or lines, his troubles were over—now he sees better for distance and reads like olden times. Meigs, the eyesight specialist, Lyric Theater Bldg.—guarantees these time-savers. Let him fit your eyes today.

BABY BONDS CULTIVATE INSTINCT FOR SAVING

"Saving is like swimming," says a recent article signed by the American Bankers' association, "once you have the 'hang' of it, it's easy." To learn the art of saving just as to learn the art of swimming two things are necessary: confidence and practice. These two qualifications have been acquired by many local men and women through the medium of Baby Bonds, and now many of these same people have developed the faculty of saving to such an extent that they are investing in one Baby Bond each month.

Baby Bonds come in $10.00 denominations, bear 6 per cent interest, and are secured by first mortgages on local real estate. There are also a few $500.00 bonds of the same issue which bear the same rate of interest and have the same security. Other details may be secured from the Wildwood Sales Company, 817 Shoaff Building.

GAS SHELLS PAVING WAY FOR NEW ATTACKS

GERMAN FIRE IS INCESSANT

Today's War News Given in Summary

London today reports an intensive bombardment of the British lines at places, gas shells and tear-producing projectiles being freely used. The British guns are replying vigorously. The afternoon bulletin from Paris ignores the Somme front, where the French, presumably are busy consolidating their positions on the ground won from the Germans in Thursday's assault.

In the Verdun sector the Germans attacked a French position south of Damloup, northeast of the fortress but were repulsed. They are heavily bombarding the Fleury and Fumin wood sectors in this region.

German attacks on French trenches at Fille Morte in the Argonne and northwest of St. Die in the Vosges, were repulsed.

Berlin announces the sinking by German submarines on July 17 of six British trawlers off the English east coast. The British steamers Wolf, of 2,443 tons, and Karma, of 2,354 tons, and the French steamer, Cattois, of 1,200 tons, have been sunk.

London, July 22—(1:55 p. m.)—A spirited artillery duel along the British front in northern France, during which the British line and supporting trenches were bombarded with gas shells and projectiles containing eye-iritants, is recorded in today's war office report.

Aside from these heavy bombardments at several points on the front in the past 12 hours, there have been no important developments.

WHEAT YIELD WILL BE ABOUT NORMAL

County Agent Makes Prediction for Allen County This Season.

The wheat yield in Allen county this year will be about normal, and in the northern section it will be a little above normal, though the acreage will be one-fourth to one-third of normal according to a statement made Saturday by C. Henry, county agent.

Report of one yield of wheat of thirty-five bushels to the acre has been made to the office of the county agent from the farm of F. Voirol, living east of New Haven. There is considerable sandy soil in Allen county and wheat yields in such soil are always better according to the county agent. Wheat raised in clay soil never produces as well.

Returns From Purdue.

C. Henry, county agent, returned from Purdue university, Lafayette, Friday night, where he conferred with W. A. Coleman, assistant to Prof. G. I. Christie, head of Indiana county agent work, and Mr. Christie, regarding new work he will begin as soon after September 1 as possible.

Mr. Henry's work will be with the county agents in the field. He will help start new county agents on their work, direct demonstration work in the state and act generally in an advisory capacity. He will be on the road every week from Tuesday until Saturday paying visits to county agents already in the field. Mr. Henry will be known as assistant to Prof. G. I. Christie in county agent work. Mr. Coleman, now an assistant to Professor Christie, will keep his department of the work—that of executive business.

Mr. Henry said Purdue could not name a definite date on which a man would be sent to Allen county to replace him. "An experienced man, however, will be chosen for Allen county," said Mr. Henry

Acceptance of Carranza Proposal Seems Certain

Washington, July 22.—Acceptance here of the Carranza government's proposal for a joint commission to settle difficulties between the United States and Mexico appears certain today. An announcement was expected momentarily. The only delay apparently was for time for a reply from Carranza to suggestions that the proposals be amended somewhat.

There have been indications that President Wilson is for a more general discussion of the questions involved than is proposed in the Mexican communication of July 11, just made public in Mexico City. The note would hold the commission to three subjects—withdrawal of American troops, arrangement of a reciprocal agreement under which troops of either government might cross the border in pursuit of bandits, and investigation of the source of bandit raids on American towns.

Reports reaching Gen. Pershing and various border points that Villa has assembled a formidable force and is preparing to renew his war on the de facto government had no confirmation today from reliable sources. It was made plain that even if the bandit again is active, it will not affect the course of negotiations with the Mexican government. The capture and punishment of Villa is still desired, and co-operation of American troops to that end will be cheerfully extended, it was said, if the de facto government so desired.

DOESN'T WANT US TO MEDDLE

England Would Resent Outside Interference in Casement Case.

FACT IS BROUGHT OUT IN CONGRESS

Washington, July 2.—When Senator Martine today again pressed his resolution to have President Wilson urge a stay of execution for Sir Roger Casement, Chairman Stone, of the foreign relations committee, told the senate Ambassador Page had informed the state department, the British government would resent any such representations. Senator Stone again opposed Senator Martine's resolution.

"For the United States to make official representations would do more harm than good," said Senator Stone. "The state department already on the request of Casement's sister, has had Ambassador Page transmit a personal appeal for clemency to the British government. Ambassador Page has advised the department that official representations would not be received in a kindly way. If Great Britain is disposed to extend clemency to Casement it will do it on its own motion rather than have it said that clemency was shown at the request of a

Sum of $250,000 Already Subscribed—Hanly to Fight Hard.

Chicago, July 22.—A million dollar campaign fund of which $250,000 has already been subscribed, is planned by the prohibition party, according to a statement by Daniel Poling, of Boston, who, with former Governor J. Frank Hanly, of Indiana, presidential nominee of the party, arrived here today. Other leaders and delegates who attended the national convention at St. Paul, including Ira Landrith, of Tennessee, who was nominated for vice president, also were in the party.

Mr. Poling, who was temporary chairman of the convention, said that one individual has already given $50,000 which, alone, he said, was $10,000 more than the prohibitionists ever have spent in a campaign. Mr. Hanly, talking at a reception given the candidates, said that he would make a vigorous campaign. A meeting of the executive committee of the national committee will be held in a few days, Mr. Hanly said.

DEUTSCHLAND STILL DELAYS RETURN DASH

Baltimore, Md., July 22.—Little activity was noticeable this forenoon about the pier at Locust Point, where the German merchant submarine Deutschland is moored all ready, it is believed, to start on her return voyage to Germany with a cargo of nickel and crude rubber.

The tug Thomas F. Timmins, which met the undersea craft at the Virginia capes, was lying along side, as she has been almost constantly during the past week, with a full head of steam up.

Paul G. Hilken, of the Eastern Forwarding company, agents of the Deutschland, who returned after a forty-eight hour absence from the city, declined to discuss the reported plan to send a consignment of gold on the submersible.

FOE SHIPS ARE ALERT.

Norfolk, Va., July 22.—Allied warships off Cape Henry, awaiting departure by the German submarine Deutschland, after a night of slow cruising during which their searchlights were played over the entrance to the capes frequently, at daylight today quickened their speed and resumed their regular north and south patrol.

It is estimated that the ships are today from eight to ten miles out. At one time last night one of them, presumably a French ship, moved into within five miles of Virginia beach, coming closer to shore than she had at any previous time. It was impossible at this distance to determine her identity. She had four funnels. The other ship, which is of a darker color and is supposed to be British, carries three funnels.

Despite reports from Baltimore that Count von Bernstorff plans to visit the Deutschland again next Wednesday, German sources here maintain it will be far out in the Atlantic by that time. Furthermore, they say the Bremen then will be in some American port.

SEES A BIG ONE.

Bridgeport, Conn., July 22.—Theodore Judson, keeper of the Stratford light house, reports sighting at 9:45 a large submarine bound east. The vessel is larger than the United States navy submarine, he says.

Commander R. H. M. Robinson, general manager of the Lake Torpedo Boat company, says that the G-3, a United States submarine which came to the Lake ship yards for repairs, left this morning for New London.

DENIES SEEING ANY EXCHANGE OF MONEY

Muncie, Ind., July 22.—Harriet Williams, who was styled the "missing witness" during the trial of Gene Williams, deputy prosecutor, recently convicted, took the witness stand for the defense today in the trial of Mayor Bunch, who was named with the deputy prosecutor and others in an indictment charging soliciting and accepting bribes from the underworld. Miss Williams was an office girl for Lloyd Yount, the slot machine agent, and previously had been stenographer for Gene Williams.

The witness denied seeing any exchange of money, check or secret package between Yount, Mayor Bunch or Williams while employed by the slot machine agent. She stated the slot machines were in a rear room and she had never entered the room. On cross examination she could not remember where she hung her wraps.

It is believed that the trial will continue to the middle of next week or later.

DEMOCRATS WILL NOT OVERLOOK CONGRESS

Washington, July 22.—Vance McCormick, chairman of the democratic national committee, conferred with President Wilson, senators and representatives and other democratic leaders here on the democartic campaigns and details of the plans for re-electing a democratic senate and house. The first definite work of this kind will be done in Maine, where the democrats will put forth their best efforts.

President Wilson has his speech of acceptance well under way, although he will not complete it until after former Justice Hughes delivers his speech of acceptance in New York on July 31. Mr. McCormick said today that he had not yet completed the selection of the campaign committee of the national committee, but expected to make headway today in his conferences here.

STORES CLOSE AT 6 O'CLOCK TONIGHT

Twenty-five or more of the principal stores in Fort Wayne will close this evening at 6 o'clock, as per the new summer schedule that will go into effect today and continue effective throughout the remainder of July and during the month of August.

The agreement to close at 6 o'clock has caused general rejoicing among the clerks of the city. The buying public is urged to do its Saturday shopping early.

FRAUDS THRIVING ON NEW YORK EPIDEMIC

New York, July 22.—Hundreds of "quack" doctors, patent medicine agents and get-rich-quick schemers are thriving on the epidemic of infantile paralysis here, Dr. Oscar M. Leiser, assistant director of public health education, declared today.

"Solutions that cost five to ten cents a gallon to prepare, are being sold for a dollar a bottle," he asserted. "The public should take warning against these so-called remedies which for the most part are harmful, if they

Col. Butler Innocent of Wrong in Shooting Case

Washington, D. C., July 22.—War department reports today from Alpine, Tex., giving further details of the shooting of Lieut. Col. M. C. Butler by Harry J. Spannell, manager of the Alpine hotel, say Colonel Butler was "absolutely innocent of any wrong," and whatever the cause might have been, "it appears like a cold-blooded, premeditated murder committed by a man crazed by jealousy.

The report says Spannell invited Colonel Butler to ride in his automobile in a seat beside Mrs. Spannell and that Spannell then drove into the residential section of Alpine and killed both Colonel Butler and Mrs. Spannell.

"Just how the killing was done," says the report, "cannot positively be stated, as there seems not to have been any witness present. Colonel and Mrs. Butler both associated freely with Mr. and Mrs. Spannell, taking frequent drives with the Spannells. Spannell seems to have been of extremely jealous disposition and it is stated that he had frequent disagreements with his wife who was a great beauty."

Five hundred spring chickens lost their heads Saturday in order that the appetites of 1,000 Elks might be partially appeased at the annual picnic which will be held Sunday in Herman J. Bueter's grove, two and a half miles east of the city on the Lincoln highway.

It is not to be understood, however, that chicken is all the jolly set of boys will get to eat tomorrow. Warm pork chops will be served the entire day. And anything else good to eat, including watermelons, will be on the menu.

Frank Morsch, chairman of the general committee on arrangements, has left nothing undone to make the picnic a success. Indications point to the fact that if the weather permits a record crowd will be in attendance. This affair is stag and will be for Elks only. Frank declares that it will be a lot of work-getting everything ready for the event.

Large delegations are expected from cities near Fort Wayne. Three large money prizes have been offered for the three largest delegations and, it is understood that the lodges of some of the cities near Fort Wayne are endeavoring to land some of the cash.

Free transportation to the scene of the picnic will be furnished. A bus will leave the Elks' temple every ten minutes, beginning at 8:30 o'clock in the morning.

One of the features of the day's program will be the base ball game in the morning between the fats and the leans. Other amusements have been provided such as throwing at nigger babies, horse shoe pitching, etc.

MOSSMAN TO INSPECT Y. M. C. A. BUILDINGS

Fort Wayne Man, in Trip East, Will Visit Many New England Cities.

B. Paul Mossman, a member of the building and site committee for the new Y. M. C. A. building, on a trip east will inspect Y. M. C. A.'s of recent construction at Springfield, Mass.; Providence, R. I., an dHartford, Conn., according to announcement of Arthur F. Hall, head of the publicity division of the building and site committee.

Have Fine Building.

The structure at Springfield, Mass., is said to be the "last word" in Y. M. C. A. building plans. It is complete in every particular. When Mr. Mossman returns from the east the building and site committee will visit in Canton and Van Wert, O.; Detroit, Erie, Pa., and South Bend, where Y. M. C. A.'s will be inspected. The Van Wert building, though of smaller proportions tha nthe one proposed for Fort Wayne, is said to be an excellently planned structure. Mr. Mossman will leave Tuesday for the east accompanied by Mrs. Mossman.

MANY DEMANDS FOR SPEECHES BY HUGHES

New York, July 22.—Chairman William R. Willcox, of the republican national committee, said today that the itinerary of Charles E. Hughes for his western speech-making tour was nearly completed, but as the demand for speeches was five times what the candidate could accomplish, announcement of the final program was being delayed until some of the claims of various sections for Mr. Hughes' appearance could be adjusted.

It was intimated at headquarters that a trip to Maine might be added to the itinerary with speeches there probably four or five days prior to the Maine election September 11.

THEFTS MAY BE $75,000

New York, July 22.—It became known today that secret investigation has been in progress for some time into the embezzlement of between $50,000 and $75,000 by a trusted employe of the Coal & Iron National bank, of this city.

Officials of the bank admitted today that the man under suspicion was being closely guarded and intimated that an arrest would probably be made within a few days.

Allison Dodd, one of the bank's vice-presidents, said this morning that discovery of the embezzlement came on June 21 through attention being called to a discrepancy of less than $1,000. It was said that not even the man who took the money knows what the total is.

The suspected employe is said to have been employed by the bank for many years. Systematic embezzlements of various sums continued throughout most of the time, it was declared.

The employe is said to be deeply repentant, but it was stated, was unable to make restitution.

May Not Be Prosecuted.

According to a later statement by President Sproul, of the bank, there is no present intention of prosecuting the employe, whose name is being carefully guarded.

"It is true," said Mr. Sproul, "that one of our employes stole about $75,000, but the bank is fully protected by bonding companies which have already made good their obligations. As far as the bank is concerned, the incident is closed. We do not even intend to prosecute unless the bonding companies request us to do so."

According to Mr. Sproul the defalcations were discovered on June 21 when a small discrepancy in the employe's books led to an investigation that disclosed the embezzlement of small sums over a long period of years. The embezzler himself took the most prominent part in the investigation and is endeavoring, it is said, to make restitution to the bonding companies. In the event that he does, it is understood he will not be prosecuted and his identity kept secret.

IN HANDS OF EXAMINERS.

Washington, D. C., July 22.—Investigation into the reported embezzlement in the Coal & Iron National bank, of New York, is so far entirely in the hands of the national bank examiners there. The examiner is not expected to make a report here until he has finished investigation or unless he discovers something which makes it necessary to advise the comptroller of the currency. In such cases it is not customary for the examiner to report until he has finished at least a preliminary investigation.

MAN BROUGHT HERE HAS PECULIAR MALADY

Homer Platt, living a mile south of Uniondale, Wells county, has been brought to a local hospital suffering with a peculiar malady. Last Tuesday morning he woke with his mouth filled with blood. A physician was immediately called and the man was rushed to this city. During that day he had suffered terrible hemorrhages and had lost much blood. The disease is very unusual and, according to physicians, generally results fatally. It causes the gums to bleed and little can be done to check it. Platt is a farmer and a son of Ed Platt. He has a wife and children.

EXCAVATION WORK PROGRESSING RAPIDLY

The work of excavation on the site where the new Odd Fellows building is to be erected on Berry street has progressed very rapidly this week and by nightfall will be nearly completed. This is almost a record time considering the amount of ground which had to be removed.

The method that is used in hauling the ground out has caused much comment and attracted no little attention. The southern portion of the basement was excavated first. A large platform has been erected and a steam engine is being used to pull the heavy loads up to the surface, in this way greatly assisting the horses in their work. Enough teams are being used so that the large steam shovel is kept constantly in operation.

LIPKEY TO DEVOTE FUTURE TO THE FARM

For eight years Cliff R. Lipkey has pounded typewriter keys, pasted copy and used the scissors as well as the blue pencil at the office of the Journal-Gazette. He has filled every position in the editorial department of that paper and for the past four years has been its managing editor. Now he is going back to the soil from whence he came.

While his services at the Journal-Gazette will be missed, certainly no one can blame him in resigning when it is known that he is to become associated in the management of the farm of his uncle, Charles Lipkey, near Uniondale, and will move next week into the new residence that has been erected for him there.

Mr. Lipkey will be succeeded as managing editor by Frank Holloway and Avery M. Groves has been advanced to city editor. Chester F. Weems, a former local newspaper man, but for the past two years connected with the Louisville Herald, has joined the editorial staff of the paper.

MORE GLORY FOR STATE

CLOSE WATCH ON CAMPAIGN HERE

State in Unusual Position as Producer of Presidential Possibilities.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 22.—The position of Indiana in the political arena this year became more conspicuous since the nomination of J. Frank Hanly, as the prohibition presidential candidate at the convention in St. Paul. His nomination following that of Charles W. Fairbanks as the republican candiate for vice president, and that of Thomas R. Marshall for the same office on the democratic ticket, places the state in an unusual position as producer of presidential possibilities.

Another feature of the political campaigns in this state this year, which has caused some of the political leaders of the country to refer to Indiana as the "Verdun of the campaign," is the fact that two United States senators are to be elected, one for the full term, and one to serve for four years.

The election of at least one of the candidates for the office above United States senator being probable, and also that of two senators assured, is causing the state to be watched closely by political leaders and will make it one of the hardest fought battle grounds of the campaign. Practically every party has placed a full state ticket in the field.

Mr. Hanly is a former republican governor of the state and since he left that office has practiced law and fought the liquor interests. He consented to and was the progressive candidate for governor, having been nominated at the March primary. When the progressive national convention failed to include a prohibition plank in its platform, however, Mr. Hanly withdrew from the state ticket. He is 52 years old. His residence is only a few blocks from those of Mr. Fairbanks and Vice President Marshall.

RECEPTION FOR NOMINEES

Chicago, July 22.—J. Frank Hanly, of Indiana and Ira D. Landrith, of Tennessee, nominees of the prohibition party for president and vice president of the United States, are to be guests at a reception tendered by local prohibitionists, upon their arrival at Chicago from St. Paul today.

A conference on plans of the party is set for today and both nominees are expected to address the meeting.

the offensive thrust along the Somme front on Thursday, according to a German army headquarters bulletin. Its use was futile, however, according to the statement, which said:

"British cavalry mounted on horseback entered the combat. This new feature of trench warfare was unable to change the final result."

A press dispatch from Stockholm says that a Russian submarine discharged a torpedo at the German steamship Elbe in the Gulf of Bothnia within Swedish territorial waters.

Six British trawlers were sunk by German submarines off the English east coast on July 17, says a German admiralty statement today.

FRENCH PRAISE FOR HAIG.

Will Have Paid for Valid Peace, Says the British Commander.

Paris, July 22—Senator Henri Berenger, who has returned from a visit to the British field headquarters, quotes Gen. Sir Douglas Haig as saying: "We must impose a peace that is really valid as we shall have paid for it."

The French senator was shown in detail the methods used by the British general staff in handling the enormous details of the western campaign. He describes Sir Douglas Haig as a commander who leaves nothing to chance, and says that the British commander believes that the war will be decided on the western battlefields.

"The technical skill of the British general staff," said the senator, "is on an equality with the heroism of the British troops."

CALL IT PURE INVENTION

London, July 22.—The report that a secret treaty had been concluded between Austria-Hungary and Germany, providing for the unification of armies and conduct of foreign affairs, is emphatically denied by the Hungarian press bureau, according to the Vienna correspondent of the Exchange telegraph company. The bureau characterizes the report as a pure invention.

A dispatch to Lloyds from Algiers says that the British steamer Karma, 2,354 tons, and the French steamer Cettois, 1,200 tons, have been sunk. The crew was landed at Algiers.

GERMAN ATTACK REPULSED.

Paris, July 22.—(12:30 p. m.)—A strong German attack northwest of St. Die, in the Vosges, was repulsed last night by the French, the war office report of today says. On the Verdun front the Germans bombarded violently French positions in the sectors of Fleury and Fumin wood. In the region of Moulin-Sous-Toutvent a strong German reconnaisance was dispersed.

SAN FRANCISCO TO PARADE.

San Francisco, Cal., July 22.—San Francisco is to enter today the list of American cities whose people have registered a demand for "preparedness" by holding parades. According to those who have arranged the demonstration, between 40,000 and 50,000 persons will march through Market street, the city's central thoroughfare. The demonstration as planned is non-military, with no uniformed ranks excepting those of the students from the business men's training camp at Monterey, Cal.

NO VACATIONS IN FIVE YEARS

Many Bank Employes in Country Are Not Allowed Outings.

Washington, July 22. — Comptroller Williams today announced that 901 employes of country national banks and ten per cent. of clerks in national banks of reserve and federal reserve cities, have had no vacations for five years. The figures were obtained from reports solicited in an effort to encourage vacations so that books may be examined in employe's absence and possible defalcation prevented.

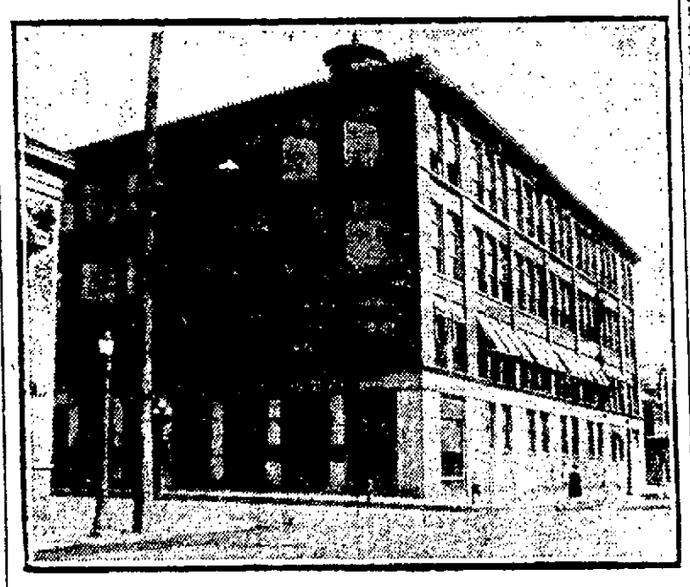
PATTERSON-FLETCHER COMPANY CLOSES LEASE FOR PIDGEON BUILDING.



The Patterson-Fletcher company has closed a ten-year lease for the modern four-story building at the southeast corner of Wayne and Harrison streets belonging to the Pidgeon Realty company and will occupy the same by the first of the year. The C. T. Pidgeon Millinery company, which now occupies the building, will move to the new building to be erected for the Indiana Gas and Electric company, more familiarly known as the gas company, on the site of the old Fort Wayne Bur company's barn on East Wayne street. The millinery company will occupy two entire floors.

Extensive changes are to be made in the building, which, when completed, will make it into one of the finest, if not the finest, buildings for a gents' furnishing store in the state. The story will have 30,500 square feet of floor space, making it probably the largest in Indiana. Although the store now occupies a four-story building on Calhoun street, there is only 13,600 square feet of floor space. The new store will be over twice as large, besides the many more advantages and conveniences that will be provided.

180 Feet of Show Window.

The store will have 180 feet of show windows on Wayne and Harrison streets. There will be show windows on almost the entire Harrison street side of the building. Two passenger elevators will be provided, together with one freight elevator. The lot is 150 feet deep.

Many improvements are contemplated by the company. One entire floor will be devoted to a children's department. New departments will be added.

When the building now occupied by Patterson-Fletcher on Calhoun street was leased to a five and ten cent store some months ago, Mr. Fletcher immediately began to look for a new location. Several buildings were under consideration, but none of them offered the advantages of the Pidgeon block. It is ideally located and will be even better situated within the next few months as business is rapidly extending to West Wayne street and Harrison street. The fine new business block being erected by Freiburger Brothers, owners of the Central grocery, on the southwest corner of Wayne and Harrison streets, will doubtless be completed and ready for occupancy by the time the Pidgeon block is ready for Patterson-Fletcher company.

PLEASED WITH THE BUILDINGS INSPECTED

County Commissioners Talk of Their Recent Trip to Cleveland.

County commissioners of Allen county were favorably impressed with the operation of county institutions on their visit to Cleveland, Ohio, concluded Thursday. The county at Cleveland operates a farm of 2,200 acres with a house of correction, tubercular sanitarium, infirmary and home for the aged located thereon. The sanitarium and infirmary are 200 feet apart and there is no confusion in operation, according to William H. Schwier, county commissioner.

The county farm at Cleveland is fourteen miles from the city. There are a total of 212 in the tuberculosis camp, 900 in the infirmary and 400 in the house of correction. There is a general farm superintendent employed and a superintendent for each county institution is maintained. The Cleveland farm managers found it advantageous to bunch the county institutions in their operation, Mr. Schwier states.

It is the desire of the county commissioners to bunch the county institutions on the county farm. There are at present a detention home, tubercular camp and infirmary on the county property and the contract for a barracks to care for the lazy husbands will be let on August 12. The farm consists of 793 acres. The county commissioners got many good ideas in tuberculosis hospital construction while at Cleveland. These will prove valuable, it is claimed, if it should be decided to vote funds for a county tuberculosis hospital here.

Suits for Separation.

Philip E. Klingenberger has filed suit for a divorce in superior court from Mary J. Klingenberger, alleging cruelty. Mr. and Mrs. Klingenberger were married in 1912 and separated July 21, 1916. Emrick & Emrick are attorneys for the plaintiff.

Eva Osterman has filed suit in superior court for a divorce from Charles Osterman, asking a divorce, alimony of $500 and custody of the child. Mr. and Mrs. Osterman were married Oct. 21, 1914 and separated in July, 1916. The plaintiff charges that the defendant forcibly ejected her from their home. She asks a restraining order preventing Osterman from drawing his funds from the Hoffman Brothers company, with whom he is employed.

Suit to Quiet Title.

Ed. G. Anderson has filed suit in superior court against Sam Diffendarfer, to quiet title. William H. Kissinger, Columbia City lawyer, represents the plaintiff.

Wait on Ruling.

"The county commissioners will make no kind of a decision as to the successor to H. P. Scherer, Wayne township trustee, until after Judge W. H. Eichhorn has entered final record in the case," declared William H. Schwier, county commissioner, Saturday. He said there was no foundation for reports that the men who were Scherer's opponents in the election for office would be considered on the basis of their vote count, thus giving the second highest man in the election returns the best chance of appointment. "The second highest man in the election has not been around to see the commissioners," said Mr. Schwier.

Marriage Licenses.

ACTS AS SPECIAL JUDGE.

Judge O'Rourke, of this city, sat as special judge in the issues of the case brought by Bertha Stenger against the Metropolitan Life Insurance company Friday afternoon in the Whitley circuit court. The plaintiff some time ago was awarded $1,000 and costs on a life insurance policy carried by her deceased husband. The insurance company contested the payment of the claim on the ground that Stenger came unlawfully into possession of the contract and carried the case to the supreme court of the state, where the decision of the trial was set Friday by Judge O'Rourke for the November term of the Whitley circuit court.

Divorce Is Asked.

Zella R. Hines has filed suit for a divorce in superior court from Charles T. Hines alleging failure to provide. Mr. and Mrs. Hines were married Oct. 27, 1909, and separated Jan. 5, 1914. R. B. Dreibelbiss is attorney for the plaintiff.

INJURED IN POWDER BLAST

Kenvil, N. J., July 22—Seven employes of the Hercules Powder company were injured early today in an explosion at the plants "dry" house. The company denied reports that a number of workmen were killed. It was said that all the injured probably would recover.

THREE MORE CASES REPORTED.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 22.—Three additional cases of infantile paralysis were reported to the state board of health yesterday. They were the 18-months-old daughter of Walter Yates of Montgomery, 6-weeks-old child of Charles Beau of Indiana Harbor and 5-months-old child of Donald Heise of Scipio.

at her address and was prostrated over the fact of her daughter's marriage. The bride is 16. "I had no objection except they were too young," said Mrs. Killen.

With His Father.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed returned to Fort Wayne Thursday night, taking residence with Reed's father at 1218 Organ avenue. They were married by a Presbyterian minister at Hillsdale. They were accompanied there by LeRoy Clifford, of Rome, N. Y., and Miss Vera Reed, sister of the groom. A wedding dinner was served at the Reed home following the return of the couple, attended by the newlyweds and the wedding witnesses.

Met at Rome, N. Y.

The elder Reed says his daughter met Clifford at Rome, N. Y., where both attended Rome academy. Clifford is in Fort Wayne on a visit to the Reed home. He came a few days before the marriage took place at Hillsdale. "There was no objection to the marriage, the young folks just wanted to leave town to get married," asserted young Reed's father. The elder Reed put up the money for the wedding trip and furnished the auto for the tour.

"I knew the couple were going to get married two weeks ago," said the feed merchant. But Mrs. Killen had a different story. "Daisy left home Thursday morning for her work and did not return for dinner. Then I knew something was wrong," said Mrs. Killen. Her daughter did not come home again until she came home married. The bride was employed as a stenographer at the Fort Wayne Box company. She had held the position since last November, Mrs. Killen said. The mother secured it for her.

Was a Good Girl.

"Daisy is a good girl, but you can never tell what you are raising your children for," said Mrs. Killen. "I educated her thinking she could help me." The mother of the bride has three small children. She separated from her husband three years ago. According to Mrs. Killen, Reed had asked her daughter two weeks ago to become his wife, and the girl asked him to wait two years. Reed had shown Miss Killen attention for two years. They will furnish a home soon, according to the groom's father, their residence with the elder Reed being temporary.

Sister eHars Discussion.

Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, agreeing with Senator Stone, said he believed Great Britain would commute Casement's sentence to life imprisonment and pardon him after the war. Mrs. Agnes Newman, sister of Sir Roger, sat in the senate gallery during the discussion.

Senator Williams, asking what the United States would have thought if the British parliament had adopted a resolution of intercession in the case of Mrs. Surratt when she was executed for complicity in the murder of Abraham Lincoln.

Senator Vardaman, in sympathy with the resolution, urged Senator Martine to eliminate from the preamble criticism of the British court, and Senator Phelan suggested a substitute merely expressing sympathy of the senate and urging clemency.

Go Over Without Action.

Senator Martine finally offered a new resolution which would request the president "to advise the American ambassador to Great Britain to use his kindly offices unofficially to ask for communtation in the sentence of death passed upon Sir Roger Casement."

Senator Phelan submitted one to ask the British government "for clemency in the treatment of Irish political prisoners." Senator Thomas objected, and they went over until Monday without action.

Does Liquor Business Pay?

The following very interesting report was read by Professor Price:

"Some months ago the Men's Christian league undertook to determine whether or not Fort Wayne and Allen county profited by the liquor traffic. It is argued by some that it is financially profitable for the city and the county to continue this traffic; by others, equally confident, it is asserted that the liquor business is a burden on the community, rather than a financial asset. The facts are what each side to this controversy needs.

"Certainly no community will continue to support a business that entails a financial loss upon itself unless there are compensating advantages accruing from that business. It is, therefore, the intention of the Men's Christian league to investigate this subject and to give to the interested public such facts as we are able to obtain. The following report covers our investigations up to date:

Source of Information.

'For the expenditures of the city and the county public records were consulted when obtainable. Where no public records were available, the information was obtained from those persons most intimately associated in the expenditures and whose judgments are, therefore, the most reliable that are to be had. In determining the proper share of expenditure that may justly be charged against the liquor traffic, the following question was asked: 'What percentage of this expenditure was, in your best judgment, made necessary either directly or indirectly by the liquor traffic?' When the question was not answered by the officials or those in charge the most reliable source of information was substituted. To illustrate this, let us cite the case of our state penitentiaries. The officials answered our letter by sending us their annual report. This gave us their expenditures, but failed to give us the much more interesting information, namely, the cause of the prisoners being there. We then consulted the best authorities on causes of crime, and used the percentage so obtained. We believe these figures to be as near the truth as will be obtainable until our charitable and criminal institutions give more attention to the causes producing their inmates.

'The city of Fort Wayne received from liquor license fees $54,700 within the year ending Dec. 14, 1915. Allen county received from the same source $41,400. The total receipts are, therefore, $96,100. This is a very nice sum of money, and we might be excused for being so dazzled by it that we fail to see any of the moral evils produced by the liquor traffic. To raise this sum would require a levy of 14 cents on the $100. But before we accept this bribe for permitting the continuance of this traffic, let us see what financial obligations we assume by thus entering into a partnership in the liquor business.

Our Paupers.

"Let us begin with the care of our dependents. The Allen county poor asylum was asked: 'What percentage of your inmates come from Fort Wayne, and what percentage of these inmates are wards of the county because of alcoholic drinks?' The answer was, 95 per cent of the paupers here are from Fort Wayne, and 75 per cent are here from the influence of drink.

"We understand full well that drink was not in every case the immediate cause of the commitment. Ofttimes it is old age or sickness, but in the majority of these cases the person had spent his income for liquor and had made no provisions for old age. In such cases the saloon had taken over the man's money that should have supported him in old age or sickness. The saloon, however, refuses to support the man, and society must assume the burden.

"During the year 1915 the county spent for the care of its wards in the county home 5 per cent interest on the value of the plant, $59,417.20. Seventy-five per cent of this expenditure in the judgment of those most intimately associated with the work was for the care of the products of our saloons. We will, therefore, enter as our first charge against the liquor business the sum of $44,562.90 for the care of our alcoholic paupers.

"The trustees of the townships spent for the relief of the poor $13,894.54. Seventy-five to 80 per cent of the poor relief was made necessary by alcoholic drink.

"Seventy-five per cent of the relief given by the township trustees would amount to $10,420.90.

"The city of Fort Wayne through the public schools gave aid to the amount of $541, 70 per cent of which was made necessary because of drink. This gives as our third charge $378.70.

"A letter was sent to the ministers of the churches affiliating with the Men's Christian league asking the following questions: 'What did your church spend last year to relieve the poor?' 'What percentage of this was made necessary by the use of liquor?' From this source we found that these churches were spending annually $3,900 to care for the products of the saloons.

"The Catholics and German Lutherans are spending about $2,000 per year for the same purpose. This estimate we believe to be too low rather than too high.

"The Rescue mission spent last year about $5,000, of which $3,675 was to care for those who had been patrons of the saloon.

"The Salvation Army and the Associated Charities estimated that their expenditures to relieve want traceable to booze was $3,665.

"The county orphanage was asked: "What per cent of your wards were made wards of the county by the influence of drinks?' The average estimate by the officials giving information was 66 2-3 per cent.

'Last year the county spent for the county orphanage the sum of $10,672.50. Five per cent interest on the money invested in the plant gives an additional outlay of $825, a total of $11,497.50. Sixty-six and two-thirds per cent of this sum gives as the cost to care for alcoholic orphans the sum of $7,665.

"The estimated expense to care for the orphans of this county in the church orphanages is $3,450, of which $2,300 was made necessary by alcohol."

The amount given by individuals directly to relieve the poor we have no way of determining. It would doubtlessly amount to a tidy sum. Neglecting all private charities, we have $78,565.80 that we expended last year to care for our alcoholic poor.

Before we turn to the study of our criminals, let us consider rather briefly whether or not the abolision of alcoholic drinks bring any decrease in the amount of pauperism. The only safe test for determining this is to take the history of those places that have abolished the use of alcoholic drinks. From the federal census of 1910 we find that in the prohibition states there were 118 paupers to each 100,000 population, but in the wet states there were 276 paupers to each 100,000 population.

Prohibition Kansas has 38 counties, with their poor asylums empty, and in many cases these plants have been transformed into agricultural experimental school farms.

It is a recognized fact among charity workers that alcoholic drink is the largest contributing cause of poverty.

Our Criminals.

Now, let us turn our attention to the cost of Allen county's criminals.

In the northern state prison at Michigan City, Allen county has 51 inmates. The cost for their maintenance was $7,764.24. This institution failed to give us the percent of the inmates that were guests of the state, through the influence of liquor and the saloon. From a Michigan prison we got an estimate. In reply to our inquiry, "Why are these men here?" we received the following answer, "Three-fourths of these men are here because of drink. The other one-fourth because they thought they were smart enough to beat the world." It is in this latter class that we find our tank convicts and confidence men."

In the Jeffersonville prison, Allen county has 47 inmates. The expenditure for their care was $9,797.15.

Allen county has three women in the women's prison at Indianapolis. Their care cost $771.18. This makes a total cost of $18,332.57.

Seventy-five per cent. of this amount would be necessary to care for the products of our saloons, if the Michigan authorities are correct. To be conservative, let us say 60 per cent. of the criminals owe their downfall to the saloon and drink. At this estimate it costs $10,999.54 to care for the alcoholic criminals that are in our three state prisons from Allen county. The state has invested in these institutions about the sum of $1,714,652. Allen county's share of this is about $76,000. We may therefore add $2,850 interest on money invested to care for our alcoholic prisoners. Unless we stop making criminals so rapidly we are going to have to invest a few more million to care for them.

County Jail.

Last year our own county jail cost us the sum of $18,217.22. The value of the jail plant is $112,000. Five per cent. interest on this sum is $5,600.

Seventy-five to eighty per cent. of our county jail population, not counting bed bugs, etc., is there because of drink and the influence of the saloon. If this is doubted, follow the records of the courts for a few weeks and all doubts will vanish.

We therefore are paying $13,662.92 to jail our saloon patrons. There is need for a new jail, or for some method of decreasing the number of prisoners. One or the other must be done.

In addition to this, there is an added expense to the sheriff costs. Allen county paid her sheriff last year, exclusive of cost for care of prisoners, the sum of $7,234.29. About 12½ per cent of this amount is made necessary to pay for duties growing out of the liquor business.

Our city police court cost us $2,033.08. Seventy-five per cent. of its business is the cases growing out of alcoholic drinks. We, therefore, may charge up booze with $1,524.81. During the month of August, 1915, there were before this court 126 cases in which alcoholic drink was the cause, 106 of which were plain drunks.

During September of this year, there were 141 cases in which drink played a part. Of this number 125 were plain drunks. Last year nearly 1,500 plain drunks were before the court at the expense of the taxpayers.

The chief of police informs us that in his judgment ten policemen could be spared from the force in a city of this size if the use of alcoholic beverages were dispensed with. This would result in a saving of $9,600. We believe that the chief's estimate is very conservative. The experience of other cities bear out Chief Lenz's estimate.

The circuit and superior courts and prosecutor cost us $27,039.98. About 20 per cent. of the business of these courts has to do with the liquor business or cases growing out of the use of alcoholic beverages. This gives us $5,407.99 that may be charged against our liquor traffic.

The above figures do not include any part of the expenditures for the boys' reform school at Plainfield, nor the girls reform school at Indianapolis. Allen county has 22 boys in the former and 19 girls in the latter institution. Their care costs the state $10,010.51. There is no doubt that many of the girls and boys in these two institutions are there from the influence of the saloon on themselves or on their homes. But we will not charge any part of this expenditure to the liquor traffic.

Lest some think alcohol is not such a prolific cause of crime, let us call attention to the following facts. Of the 384 prisoners admitted to the northern Indiana prison, 39 were temperate in their use of alcohol, 40 were moderate drinkers and 199 were excessive users of alcoholic beverages. Of 283 women admitted to the Indiana women's prison, 206 were drunks or drunks and prostitutes. Of the 512 received at Jeffersonville prison, 236 were temperate in their use, 226 were moderate and 48 excessive in their use of alcohol. When we know that Jeffersonville receives all of the young offenders, the majority being under 25 years of age, we are not to be surprised that few have become excessive drinkers. One does not have to be an excessive user of alcohol to be fired to do a crime.

Prohibition Kansas has 53 of her county jails empty and no inmates in her penitentiaries from 65 counties. Our jail is continually crowded. In many of her counties there has been no jury criminal trial for ten years.

In wet New York, of 49,423 arrests, 30,509 were for drunks.

By the records of 1890 of every 100 criminals arrested, 20 were non-users of alcohol and 80 were drinkers. Holland attributes 80 per cent. of her crime to drink, Sweeden 75 per cent, and France 50 per cent. to the same cause.

Our Insane.

The best scientific authorities attribute 20 to 24 per cent. of insanity among men to the use of alcoholic beverages, and 6 per cent of the insanity of women to the same cause.

Allen county has 147 inmates in our insane asylums. The total cost for their maintenance was $29,686.65. Figuring 20 per cent. of the men and 6 per cent. of the women insane through the influence of alcohol, we have a cost for Allen county's alcoholic insane, the sum of $4,021.84.

Our Feeble Minded.

Allen county has 53 children in the Indiana school for feeble minded youths. Their maintenance costs $7,841.35. Persons in position to know attribute 12½ to 15 per cent. of feeble mindedness to alcoholism on the part of the parents. The larger per cent. are from feeble minded parents. Feeble mindedness is inherited, a feeble minded family, when it is once established, may produce many feeble minded individuals in successive generations. The cause of the feeble minds of many of the feeble minded children of today can no longer be determined. The initial cause occurred generations ago. In many cases now accredited to hereditary feeble mindedness the initial cause was alcoholism. We will charge alcohol with the 12½ per cent. known to be due to alcoholism. This gives us the sum of $980.16 to care for Allen county's alcoholic feeble minded.

Our Other Dependents.

Allen county has 7 epileptics in the village for epileptics at New Castle, Ind. Their care cost the state $1,845.83. About 16 2-3 per cent. of the cases of epilepsy are accredited to alcoholism. This would give us a charge of $307.64 for the care of epilepties produced by alcohol. There are very many epileptics in the county that are cared for by the families of which they are members.

Allen county has 16 inmates in the soldiers' home at Lafayette. Their maintenance costs the state $3,458.72. Some of these inmates have become wards of the state because of alcohol. We will not charge any of this against the liquor business, however.

Costs Not Estimated.

This investigation is by no means complete. We have made no estimate of the loss of wages through loss of employment by those who drink. Neither have we estimated losses through industrial accidents traceable to drink. Very recently in one of our large industries a man occasioned quite a loss by the destruction of materials. He was drinking.

We have not estimated the loss of wages of the men shut up in our jails. No estimate was made of the expenditures for relief of poor of the churches of the county other than those in Fort Wayne.

Totals.

Omitting all unestimated losses to the community, we have an expenditure of over $128,000 traceable to the liquor business.

We do not infer, however, that all the above expenditures attributed to the influence of liquor would cease the moment the liquor traffic is eliminated. For many years we will have to continue paying for the care of our criminals and paupers that were the products of our saloons. But unless we abolish the saloon, we are going to be compelled to invest still greater sums in jails, almshouses and asylums.

Gentlemen, are drinks so essential to you that you are unwilling to give them up for the greater good of our country? Many of you would shoulder a gun and face hardships and death to repel an invading enemy. Such an act would be manly and patriotic, but will you serve your country by driving out a foe that is within and that is annually killing more men than were killed in all four years of our great civil war?

NEWS OF FORT WAYNE'S NEIGHBORS

Auburn, Ind., July 22.—James Muzzillo, fruit merchant of Garrett, dropped into the county clerk's office Friday and asked for a marriage license. This venturesome young man did not want the newspapers to get onto what he was after. He is a native of Sunny Italy, never was married and is 28 years of age. The prospective bride called at the clerk's office and signed the necessary blanks. She gave her name as Mrs. Nellie Schoaf, her age as 56, and her residence as Garrett.

HEARS OF BROTHER'S DEATH.

Hartford City, Ind., July 22.—Mrs. Alonzo Atkinson, living southwest of the city, has just received word of the death of her brother, Robert Sexton, 31, which occurred July 6, at Van Buren, Ark. Not until she received word of the death did Mrs. Atkinson know her brother's whereabouts, for she had not heard from him for eleven years. The news of the death was brought to Mrs. Atkinson this week by George Sexton, another brother whom she had not heard from or seen for eight years. The brothers and sister became separated years ago, after the death of their father, Robert Sexton, who lived near Albany. At the time of his death the brother was attending a medical school at Van Buren, Ark., while his family was residing with his wife's parents, at Richmond, Ind. The cause of death was a fever, with which he was only ill a few days. Interment was made at Albany, Ind.

JUMPS FROM AUTO.

Warsaw, Ind., July 22.—Miss Dora B. Wertz, bookkeeper at the H. B. Sykes store and a member of the picnic party to Lake Wawasee, sustained painful injuries when she jumped from an automobile while en route home from the picnic. One bone in her left ankle was fractured and another was crushed. The accident occurred at Syracuse. The driver of the automobile in which Miss Mertz was a passenger had driven past the right road home and when her attention was called to the fact, she stopped the machine and reversed the engine. Miss Wertz, who was also sitting in the front seat, became nervous and when the machine struck a stump she jumped. She was assisted to the office of Dr. Hoy in Syracuse and after her ankle was tightly bandaged was able to continue the trip home.

MAY DAM RIVER

Huntington, Ind., July 22.—As result of the constantly increasing consumption of water in this city each year, Huntington is now pumping water from wells that were formerly flowing springs. The water head has sunk to forty-seven feet below the surface since a few years ago when it was only forty-one feet underground, according to John F. Fulton, superintendent of the city water works. When asked as to what would be a remedy and check to the sinking of the water head, Mr. Fulton said: "I would recommend the construction of a dam in the Wabash river just below the wells. This is the only thing that will conserve our water supply and it should be done soon."

THREATENED WITH LOCKJAW.

Columbia City, July 22.—Kitty Belle, the little 8-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Stickler, near Peabody, who ran a nail in her foot several days ago is threatened with lockjaw. The small injury made by the nail apparently healed over and was thought to be all right, but Tuesday she complained of a headache and showed signs of high fever. Later in the evening Dr. Ben P. Linvill was summoned and found a serious case. He made a hurried trip back to town for anti-toxine, which was given the little girl, and her foot was lanced for the removal of all the poison. Friday she was reported as a little better, but there is still danger of tetanus.

NEW TEACHER AT BLUFFTON.

Bluffton, Ind., July 22.—John Edris, a member of the class of '14 of the Bluffton high school, was elected yesterday afternoon by the school board to take the sixth grade in the Central school during the coming school term. Mr. Edris has been a student at Indiana university for two years past and has done some supply work in the local schools and has been very successful in performing these duties. The policy of the board has been to have two men in the Central building in addition to the principal, in order to better supervise the playground.

Point.

CARRIES BULLET TWO WEEKS.

Bluffton, Ind., July 22.—Harry Wall, 7, a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Wall, accidentally shot himself in the palm of his right hand two weeks ago with an airgun. The parents thought the bullet had not remained in the flesh, but when the hand refused to heal and began to swell he was taken to a physician, and today the bullet had to be cut out, having lodged near the base of two fingers. Blood poison is threatened from the infection and the hand and arm are swollen.

HOME IS IN CELINA.

Portland, Ind., July 22.—The identity of the lad who robbed the Finley-Myers country home, west of the city, last Sunday, and has since been in the county jail here, was established with the arrival of a brother from Celina, O. The boy gave his name as Frank Stolzenbeck when arrested and said he lived at Toledo, O. It develops that he is Albert Gurloch, of Celina, O. His brother, Edwin Gurloch, came here to his rescue, but the boy is still in jail.

MADE ILL BY PAINTS

Hartford City, Ind., July 22.—Delores Claytor, little daughter of William Claytor, of North Jefferson street, was made critically ill for some time Friday afternoon when the child swallowed a small amount of the crayon paints which are used by the children in school. The child is less than two years old. The attending physician was present at the Claytor home for nearly an hour before the child's sickness could be relieved, but the tot is now much improved and able to play.

SENT TO PENAL FARM.

Bluffton, Ind., July 22.—Judge W. H. Eichhorn has found it necessary to recall the sentence of thirty days confinement pronounced in January on Jack Hankins, when the latter again came before his notice on the charge of drunkenness. Judge Eichhorn this time made it a trip to the penal farm, and with the old sentence of thirty days and the time laid out by his inability to pay a fine, Jack will no doubt get about forty-five days on the farm.

HOW POTASH IS OBTAINED FROM KELP.

Kelp is cut by a sea-going mower, brought ashore and reduced to potash and other products by a refining process. Nearly 90 per cent. of kelp is water. The process for reducing it consists chiefly in evaporating the water and then, by a grinding and chemical process, separating the residue into its component parts.

(BY MARK LARKIN.)

(Staff Correspondent.)

San Diego, Cal., July 22.—Making hay at sea is the new and interesting industry of kelp harvesting, which has sprung up along the western coast line.

Millions of dollars have been invested in this business of reaping the crops on the ocean floor and yet it is only a makeshift. This vast expenditure is a temporary means of obtaining potash in this country. When the war is over potash will again be imported from Germany for less than it can be produced under present methods.

Kelp is a seaweed growing in gigantic beds on the Pacific ocean bottom close in shore, from Alaska to the end of Lower California. Some of the beds cover many thousands of acres. Huge sea-going mowers, not unlike the machines used on land for cutting grain are employed in kelp harvesting.

The industry has built up a new romance in ocean work and is a calling as hazardous and adventurous as that of the deep sea fishermen. It is a job that breeds a hard-fisted, brawny type of manhood.

The kelp harvester, with his hip boots, oilskins and sou'wester hat looks like a fisherman, but he is really a hay-maker of the sea. Perched high on his cumbersome harvester, he goes rolling and swaying through the water, cutting a 40-foot swath of kelp, cursing when wind and current whip the weeds from the range of his sickle.

Kelp is cut at a depth of six feet. When the wind is blowing hard currents are created in the water, interfering with successful harvesting. The sea farmer has as much trouble with wind as his brother on the land. It is almost impossible to cut in the teeth of the wind, since the harvester can't make headway against heavy seas. When the fog is thick there is danger of running ashore to be pounded to pieces by the surf.

"It's no job for a ribbon counter clerk," said Capt. H. Watson, skipper of the Alicel, the biggest kelp harvester on the Pacific. "It's work for a man with strength in his arms and a mouthful of good American cuss words. Whether the harvester's standing on her beam's end or wallowing in the trough of the seas, a man must have grip and grit enough to hang on without being tied. The fishing game is child's play compared with kelp harvesting."

Capt. Watson's machine has a capacity of 500,000 tons, but if a machine brings in 200,000 tons a day, it is considered good work.

Potash is not the only product of kelp. The Hercules Powder company, of this city, extracts chemicals from kelp to use in the manufacture of explosives; potash being considered only a by-product. Swife & Co., operating here, consider potash their main product. They use it in the manufacture of fertilizer.

Kelp also produces iodine, acetone and cellulose, the latter being used in the manufacture of photographic films celluloid, artificial silk and paper.

"No one can say whether the kelp cutting industry has come to stay," said S. G. Smith, manager of the Swift plant. "After the war potash can be obtained from Germany much cheaper than we can reap it from the sea. Our hope is to be repaid for money invested before the war ends. This industry is really a big business gamble. If the war ends suddenly, we lose."

The United States department of agriculture has investigated the kelp beds of the Pacific and as a result federal regulation of the use of the beds may be established.

RUDISILL PAVING ADDS TO HARRISON HILL

The prospect of the rapid completion of the paving of Rudisill is attracting many prospective purchasers to Harrison Hill, the new addition located just south of the boulevard on Calhoun street. How rapidly this paving is being completed few people realize. The curb and gutter has been finished on the entire north side and on the south side between Piqua and Calhoun street, while the remainder of the south side will probably be completed by to-night or the fore part of next week at the latest. All grading has been completed on the south side of Rudisill and the gang on this work has now finished the north side as far as South Wayne avenue. The remainder of this side will be completed within the next ten days. The completion of this work will open up the finest driveway in this section of the country and is bound to increase the values of Harrison Hill property. Full details regarding this feature may be secured from the promoters of the addition, Hilgemann & Schaaf, North American building.

Elsworth Cramer and others from Paulding were here Friday circulating a petition that a vote be taken on the abolishment of the office of probate judge. This office pays a monthly salary of about $190. The work of the office is to be transferred to the common pleas court, which would lighten the expense unless the salary would be transferred also. In that case, it would be unfair to James Pugh and others, who are candidates for the office just at a time when it "looks good" to them.

The electrical storm Thursday put the electric light system out of commission and Thursday night our merchants and others had to resort to the old standby, the coaloil lamp. It reminded the old settler of days gone by and the friendships cultivated and stories told around the grocery stove by the then dazzling light of a bracket lamp with a tin reflector.

THE weekly wash is by no means an easy task, and whoever does the work is entitled to the latest appliances for making it less a labor and as agreeable as possible.

This can be done by having us install "Standard" porcelain enameled laundry trays. Call and have us show you why.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

DAILY BIBLE READINGS FOR THE HOME

1 Corinthians, 9:16-27.

16. For though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!
17. For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward: but if against my will, a dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me.
18. What is my reward then? Verily that, when I preach the gospel, I may make the gospel of Christ without charge, that I abuse not my power in the gospel.
19. For though I be free from all men, yet have I made myself servant unto all, that I might gain the more.
20. And unto the Jews I became as a Jew, that I might gain the Jews; to them that are under the law, as under the law, that I might gain them that are under the law;
21. To them that are without law, as without law, (being not without law to God, but under the law to Christ,) that I might gain them that are without law.
22. To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak: I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some.
23. And this I do for the gospel's sake, that I might be partaker thereof with you.
24. Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run, that ye may obtain.
25. And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all thing. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible.
26. I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air:
27. But I keep under my body, and bring it unto subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway.

Mr. Hanly's Nomination.

They're still coming to Indiana for national ticket timber. The renomination of Mr. Marshall for the vice presidency by the democrats and the republican choice of Mr. Fairbanks as the running mate for Mr. Hughes has now been followed by the selection of J. Frank Hanly as the prohibition standard-bearer this year, with Dr. Ira Landreth, of Tennessee, on the tail of the ticket.

It is one of the queer turns and twists of American politics that puts Mr. Hanly forward as the candidate of the cold water folk. Here in Indiana we came to know Mr. Hanly as one of the most uncompromising of republicans, elected by that party as governor of Indiana, and in those days a stalwart of the stalwarts. His official course—particularly his insistence upon a county option law—put him "in bad" with his party leaders, and their favorite diversion for some years has been lying awake o' nights to most cordially hate him. Then Mr. Hanly became to all intents and purposes a progressive. No longer ago than the spring of the present year Mr. Hanly accepted the nomination for governor on the bull moose ticket, with the stipulation that the party platform must not contain certain cardinal progressive doctrines to which he found himself unable to subscribe. When the progressive national convention refused to incorporate national prohibition in its platform, Mr. Hanly withdrew from the Indiana state ticket.

The next number, ladies and gentlemen, presents Mr. Hanly as a full-fledged prohibitionist and as the nominee of his party for the presidency. Yet, after all, the political transition which has landed Mr. Hanly in command of the prohibition ranks is a perfectly logical evolution in his case. He has been for many years an ardent temperance man. Following his term as governor he devoted himself to platform work in the interest of the Anti-Saloon league and kindred organization conducting a militant fight against the liquor power. More than that, he has come to be recognized as heavy artillery in the temperance cause, for he possesses platform power of singular force and effectiveness, and he hits hard.

On the whole, both Mr. Hanly and his party are to be congratulated upon the nomination. Mr. Hanly doesn't expect to be elected, but his party will get the benefit of the services of a seasoned and skilled campaigher, and Mr. Hanly will have the pleasure of officially championing a cause to which his devotion is unquestioned. Besides, a presidential nomination can scarcely operate as a bear factor in fixing the fee for platform addresses after the present campaign is over.

The official report of Major General Bliss to the general effect that the Texas camps to which the national guardsmen of Indiana and other states have been sent for duty along the border are in excellent condition, will do much to relieve the friends of the militiamen back home. Dispatches have already carried many stories of complaint as to both accommodations and equipment, and there have been intimations that sanitary conditions were by no means up to the standard. The regular army officer's report is indirect contradiction to all of these, and as a matter of fact, the army officers are probably correct. The health service of the army is one of the most efficient of the governmental departments, and we do not believe it will fail in providing every safeguard for the troops on border duty.

Indiana progressives who bolted the plan to nominate a state ticket this year have already gotten the machinery of a new political organization in working order. It bears the titular designation of the Progressive League of Indiana, and is under the leadership of Jackson Boyd, Clarence R. Martin and William Holton Dye, the latter being the Indiana member of the national committee who was tossed overboard for his part in sanctioning the Hughes-bull moose deal at Chicago. Well, what would Indiana politics be without some insurgents, anyway?

Allied representatives are said to entertain the opinion that the United States, having recognized the Deutschland as a merchantman, would be liable to indemnity for damage in case the commercial submarine should suddenly change her mind, pluck armament from the air by means of some mysterious legerdemain and ravage peaceful shipping on the high seas. Can you beat that for diplomatic ingenuity?

Authorities agree that the Lincoln highway is rapidly become the main street of the nation, and estimates show that $4,000,000 has already been expended in the improvement of the road. Allen county, too, can take pride in the reflection that she has had a part in the splendid effort.

Regardless of the outcome of the graft trials at Muncie, that town is doubtless going to feel much better after the pretty thorough ventilation it is receiving.

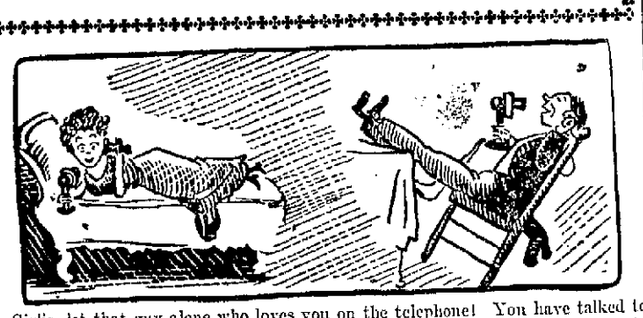
"Remember Boy!"

GOOD ADVICE.



Girlie, let that guy alone who loves you on the telephone! You have talked to him enough, silly, mushy, gushy stuff; and you're making people sick, babbling to that phoney hick! Yes, you think it's kind of cute, "just to entertain the brute." Silly, silly, simple kid, how you cackle through your lid! Get a guy who'll come and talk right out yonder on the walk, let him prattle low or loud, on the porch or in the crowd, let him talk of what you like, only, for the love of Mike, don't make everybody groan, spooning on the telephone!

Fellow on the other end, have you countless hours to spend? Quit your boresome, goofy talk, rest the phone, and take a walk! Toddle home and love your wife, just for once in your pied life!

—CHARLES B. DRISCOLL.

ON THE RIGHT TRACK.

(South Bend Tribune.)

Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the Indiana state board of health, continues to press his campaign for county health officers who shall devote their entire time to the business of looking after the health and sanitary conditions of his county. That such legislation should be enacted we believe to be wise. There is argument, too, that these men should be appointed, after examination, by the state board of health, provided proper precautions are taken to prevent insofar as possible the building up of a personal political machine.

The argument is strong that these health officers should be supreme in the county, having jurisdiction even of the cities. In this way much of the clash of opinion and variance of orders would be eliminated. Such a county health officer should, however, be empowered, like the prosecuting attorney, to name his deputies in the towns outside the county seat.

We are not exactly certain just what Dr. Hurty's opinion on the salaries of these men should be. But they should be sufficient to obtain the services of good and competent men. Perhaps $1,000 might be sufficient for counties of less than 20,000 population; but it is doubtful if the right sort of man could be found for St. Joseph county for less than $2,500 to $3,000 and deputy hire. This may seem a bit high, yet the prosecutor of St. Joseph county receives $3,500 and $2,800 deputy allowance, and surely it is as important to preserve the public health as the public order. Dr. Hurty is on the right track.

INVESTIGATES CHARGES.

Chicago, Ill., July 21.—Investigation of charges brought against two physicians employed by the health department who were charged with attempting to extort money from immigrants whose children they examined for infantile paralysis, was begun today by the city civil service commission. Morris Broidie testified that he paid the physicians $1 for examining his infant son. The physicians admitted having examined the child but denied that they had taken any money.

OFFICERS ARE ADVANCED.

Washington, D. C., July 21.—Colonel John W. Ruckman, of the coast artillery, was today nominated to be brigadier general and Lieutenant Colonel Samuel Reber, of the signal corps, was nominated for colonel.

CANDIDATE IS FINED.

Butte, Mont., July 22.—Arthur Reimer, of Boston, socialist labor party, candidate for president of the United States, was fined $10 in the municipal court here yesterday for violating the city ordinance by speaking in a down town street. The fine was suspended by the magistrate. Reimer conducted his own defense, asserting he was the victim of discrimination.

GIRL WEDS RESCUER.

South Bend, Ind., July 22.—The marriage of William Robert Mays, jr., and Miss Esther Watkins here was the culmination of a courtship which began at Hudson lake two weeks ago when Mays rescued Miss Watkins from drowning.

AIN'T NATURE WONDERFUL?

Unnatural History, by Eugene Ahern.

He walks around stoop-shouldered and drags his feet like a fly doing a "Weston" over fly paper.

What's the matter with the boob, Arthur; what's the idea in trying to be a bad guy; what is he going to get out of it?

Oh, he thinks it's just the candy to be hard-boiled; he imagines people admire him for it.

Tough birds always travel in gangs; they like to get a name over the surrounding territory as a bunch of holy terrors, always looking for a scrap—and maybe they can't battle!

But if you ever met one of the tough birds alone away from his gang he'd have a yellow streak that'd make the milky way look like a crack on the head of a pin.

No, Raymond, don't wallop the next tough bird you see on the head, or you'll get your hand full of slivers.

The engine in the automobile was not damaged and the machine was brought on to Fort Wayne.

Campaign is Launched by National Housewives' League.

New York, July 22.—A campaign urging housewives throughout the country to "do your canning early," was begun today by the national executive committee of the Housewives' league. The committee's statement says: "The housewives of the country are losing an opportunity to save money for themselves and for the producer in not canning the usual amount of fruit at this season. The reason given is the high price of sugar, although it is only three cents above the normal quotation. This is a home-canning season if there ever was one and we ask women everywhere to fill their own larders with delicious home made canned fruit, which will produce both economy and health in the family and greatly aid the producers of fruit."

Fruit is cheap this year, the appeal adds, and next year commercial canned fruit will be higher "on account of the increase in the cost of tin."

Germany now has iron money in circulation.

Our best recommendation "Hol-Tayto-Loaf" Bread.

Portland, Ore., July 22.—Approximately one million acres of agricultural lands of the Oregon and California land grant will be thrown open to entry and settlement by fall, it was announced here today by the United States land office. Settlers will be permitted to file on tracts of 160 acres each, paying the government $2.50 an acre. These lands, which were granted to the Oregon and California Railroad company have been in litigation for years, the company having refused to carry out the terms of the grant. The government sued to enforce the terms and won the case in the United States supreme court. Recently congress passed an enabling act to restore the lands to entry but the Southern Pacific company, which succeeded to the interests of the Oregon and California company, has served notice that it would refuse to abide by the act, and that it intended to fight the case anew through the courts.

An automobile museum has been established in London, where there are exhibited gasoline cars, made as early as 1895, a steam tricycle made in 1891, and one of the earliest steam cars, made in 1860.

During July and August we will close at 5 o'clock on week days and six o'clock on Saturdays.

MOOSERS THREATEN TO GO INTO COURTS

Syracuse, N. Y., July 22.—Progressive leaders gathered here for the meeting of the state committee this afternoon threaten to go into the courts if any action is taken to place the name of Charles E. Hughes or those of the republican presidential electors on the progressive ballot in New York state.

Chairman John J. O'Connell, of the New York county committee said today that joint mandamus and injunction proceedings would be brought if an attempt is made to carry out in this state the action of the progressive national committee. The state committee, according to Mr. O'Connell, will be enjoined from placing the names of Hughes and Fairbanks on the state ticket and it will be mandamused to meet and name presidential electors for John M. Parker, the progressive nominee for vice president. Committees to bring about the nomination of Judge Samuel Seabury of the court of appeals for governor in opposition to Governor Whitman have been appointed in several counties.

In spite of O'Connell's prediction the indications are that Hughes will be endorsed.

Bainbridge Colby arrived here this morning and immediately issued a statement in which he stated that a number of former Hughes appointees were here working tooth and nail in an effort to deliver the progressive machinery to the republicans. He said Hughes' leaders among the progressives were attempting to "garrote and coerce others to follow them."

TENNIS FOR THE BEGINNERS

In making the forehand stroke the racquet should be held almost horizontal and straight out in the line of the arm. Thus you will reach over to hit low balls instead of scooping them with the racquet. Tighten your grip on your racquet as you swing back and the wrist will govern direction. A snap of the wrist often adds effectiveness to the stroke.

It is essential that you get the right swing in execution and you cannot accomplish this unless you are in the proper position. Rely upon the forehand stroke to return practically all ground balls on your right hand.

Assume a position facing the plane of the approaching ball, poise your weight on your right foot and as the ball bounds from the ground swing your racquet well behind your back, then, while balanced, swing the racquet around so it will strike the ball just before it completes the bounce.

Simultaneously with the impact of racquet and ball your body should be going forward, your weight on your left foot. Be sure to carry the stroke through until your racquet is across your body.

To obtain the whole force of your arm and body, catch the ball when it is opposite or even a little less past you.

With the resignation of William Breuer, jr., son of William Breuer, vice-president of the Berghoff Brewing company, and over whose actions as foreman at the plant of the brewery company about 250 members of the brewery workers' and beer drivers' union declared a strike Friday, there was a settlement of the trouble Friday night in Bartenders' hall, 619 Calhoun street, and the men were at their posts Saturday. The strikers demanded the resignation of Breuer, declaring he continually "rushed" them and insisted on helping load cars in violation of union agreement.

The strike lasted twenty-four hours and is the longest time the brewery workers at Berghoff's have been on a walkout since M. C. Norton became general manager of the brewing company three years ago. Mr. Norton says there have been slight difficulties lasting a few minutes of a morning prior to starting work, but a strike was never declared.

Fair to Labor.

The Berghoff Brewing company is not in opposition to organized labor, Mr. Norton states, and the union men do not so consider the company, it is declared, following the strike adjustment. The strike was caused by the action of individuals rather than by any open rupture between union men and the brewing company, it is asserted. The joint local executive board of the brewery workers and drivers' union, which had charge of the walkout consisted of Albert Langer, Fred Roth, Albert Ekerle, Joseph Curtis, Jesse Walker, Peter Ladig and Henry Schwein, secretary.

There has been a rush, it is declared, at the Berghoff Brewing company since the heat wave set in, and the force has been taxed to fill orders. Speeding up deliveries and urging men to harder tasks, as well as alleged violation of the union agreement by one of the foremen, led to the strike.

PLAGUE DEATH MARK AT HIGHEST TOTAL

Thirty-Nine Children Die and 135 New Cases Come in Twenty-Four Hours.

New York, July 22.—There were more deaths in the epidemic of paralysis during the last twenty-four hours than at any time since the inception of the disease four weeks ago. Since 10 a. m. yesterday the plague killed thirty-nine children in the five boroughs of New York city. There were 135 new cases.

The plague took a big stride in Manhattan, where there were ten deaths, the largest number yet reported. In the Bronx also the disease gained, where there were five deaths. A marked increase was shown in Brooklyn, the seat of disease and cases and deaths in the other boroughs indicated that the epidemic, aided by a wave of high humidity was becoming more widespread.

INDIANAPOLIS FIRES CAUSE $58,000 DAMAGE

Indianapolis, Ind., July 22.—Two downtown fires that occurred almost simultaneously about 8 o'clock last night at the Citizens' Relief Ice company's plant at 915 East North street and the Gibson company's auto sales office at 416 North Capitol avenue, caused a loss estimated at approximately $58,000, a loss of $50,000 being suffered by the auto company. Capt. William Grady of Engine company No. 8 was compelled to jump from a high shed at the ice plant fire and suffered a broken leg. Seven horses were burned to death in this fire. About 100 automobiles at the Gibson concern were saved without damage.

The ice company fire, the first of the two, was in the barn at North and Economy streets, running along the Big Four railroad line. The origin of the fire is unknown. The barn was about a block long and was burning fiercely before the first companies reached it from headquarters, which is only a few blocks away. Eight horses were in the barn, but the flames were so hot and the smoke so dense that spectators who had gathered feared to go into the place again after they had saved one of the horses, and the others perished. A large quantity of hay and other supplies was in the barn and was destroyed.

STREET CAR MEN STRIKE

Wage Increase and Shorter Hours Ie Demand at Yonkers, N. Y.

Yonkers, N. Y., July 22.—All local street car lines were tied up here today by a strike of motormen and conductors who demand an increase of five cents an hour in wages, and shorter hours. Efforts instituted by the mayor and a committee of citizens to bring about a settlement have been fruitless.

WILL PICK MEN FROM HUNTINGTON CAVALRY

Fort Wayne Battery D May Be Largely Augmented from This Source.

Enthusiastic and patriotic sons of Huntington formed a cavalry troop but Adjutant General Bridges would not accept them, stating that he wanted artillery before he did cavalry and suggested that the boys who had expressed their willingness to serve Uncle Sam should join the Fort Wayne battery. Captain John Scheffer and several other recruiting officers will go to Huntington Saturday evening and will muster into the service those who desire to enter. The cavalry had reached a membership of 103 men and it is presumed that the local organization will be largely augmented from this source.

The recruiting officers returned from a two days' trip to small towns in the vicinity of Fort Wayne Friday evening. They were well repaid for their labor and came back with about twenty more new men. This makes the total membership in Battery D nearly 125, eight less than required peace strength.

Nothing definite has been received from local authorities as to when the new battery will be called. It is presumed, however, that before another week has gone by the boys will be quartered at Fort Riley, Kansas.

Sunday afternoon many of the men will march in the funeral procession of Private Floyd Wolf, who met his death by drowning at Mercedes, Texas.

PATRIOTIC FUNERAL FOR PRIVATE WOLF

The remains of Private Floyd Wolf, of company E, who was drowned while in bathing near Mercedes, Texas, last Monday, arrived in Fort Wayne Friday evening at 5 o'clock. All arrangements have been completed for a patriotic and military funeral, which will be held Sunday afternoon. Services at the residence, 1626 East Wayne street, at 1:30 o'clock and at the First M. E. church at 2 o'clock.

All patriotic bodies and organizations and ex-members of company E, battery B and new members of battery D will meet at the recruiting station, on East Wayne street, at 1:30 o'clock and will march to the church at 1:45.

The Electro-Technic band kindly donated its service to furnish patriotic music. A firing squad of company E will attend the funeral and the six honorary pall bearers will be chosen from the ranks of the company.

Trumpeter Harry Weisbecker, late of the Fifteenth United States cavalry, and Charles Tesselman, of the Thirteenth United States cavalry, will sound taps at the grave.

GERMANY AGREES TO PAY SWISS VICTIMS

Lucerne, July 22.—(Via Paris.)—The Lucerne newspapers say that Germany and Switzerland have reached an agreement regarding the indemnities to be paid the families of Swiss victims of the sinking of the Sussex. Each government has appointed an expert, who will consider the cases separately and fix the amount to be paid.

The British steamer Sussex was torpedoed without warning in the English channel on March 24. Fifty lives were lost and among the injured were some Americans. On May 10 Germany admitted responsibility, promised to pay indemnity to the Americans injured and punish the submarine commander.

MATERIALS COMBINED FOR THE SURF SUIT

THE vogue for using a combination of plain and figured material is not by any means limited to street and dress costumes, as this very smart bathing suit will bear witness. Here you have before you a charming conception of what can be done with a dark-blue taffeta and a green-and-blue plaid.

The blouses and deep peplum are made in one piece and are laid in rather deep side pleats. These pleats are held in at the waistline with a belt of the plaid taffeta. The advantage of a one-piece suit of this sort is that the belt may be placed wherever it is the most becoming to one's figure, as there is no reason why it cannot be dropped or raised at will. You will see that there are no sleeves to this suit, as the pleats on the shoulder are allowed to droop gracefully over the upper arm.

Something on the order of a fichu, but without the bunchiness of a fichu is fashioned of the plaid silk to tie about the neck, with balls of green silk to finish the ends. A pleated underskirt of the plaid skirt serves to hide the knickers, which clasp tightly at the knee, as most bathing-bloomers do this season.

With dark-blue shoes and green stockings and a tight cap of rubber, covered with a scarf of the plaid silk, and a detachable rim of dark-blue rubber, this bathing costume will be smart enough to grace the most fastidious beach gathering.

As a suggestion, you might lengthen the one-piece blouse and peplum, omit the plaid skirt and finish the bloomers off with scarfs of the plaid silk tied in handkerchief knots.

SPECIAL PLAYS FOR SUMMER DAYS

UP IN the country and down by the sea are equally good places to play, and if you look hard enough you can find water, and even sand, in the mountains as well as by the ocean. So for that reason sand and water toys are popular with all.

Of course, there are all sorts of tin molds for the sandpie maker. There are fishes and birds and beasts, and besides that, tins tinted in all the natural shades of lucious fruit. Square molds are finished with a cameo design in the middle making the youthful sand worker believe that he is completing a real work of art. Buckets, gayly painted, and strong substantial shovels and rakes should not be omitted from the catalogue.

If you are not satisfied with these and would like to haul the sand away, you can have a truck automobile, built entirely of wood, and capable of holding an extra heavy load. There are games of quoits to play on the shore or in country, and parachute bows and arrows, that send up tiny parachutes to the never-ending delight of the youngsters.

Brightly painted wooden animals and people are sure of standing up because they have wooden spikes attached to stick into Mother Earth.

Of course, one must mention the seesaws that differ from the old-time ones in having corners rounded, polish applied to avoid nasty splinters, and a bar for the timid ones to grasp.

There is a sliding board as high and as long as you like, and an ingenious little wheeled cart on which you can sit and ride down a red track. This gives you a start to send you rolling right over the country, almost as far as you'd like to go.

FASHIONGRAMS

Gloves to match the shoes seem to be another phase of the matching fad. Pearl gray and biscuit-colored kid, with loose wrists to fit over the sleeves, are among advance glove fashions.

Plastrons, as the French call the chemisettes which fit over the frock instead of under, are coming into vogue again. Sometimes they are scarcely more than the long flat jabot or stole collar.

A big lace season is promised for fall and winter. The laces will be retained principally for evening wear, however, and will number many new metallic effects.

Velvet fruit for millinery in the shape of peaches, pears, apples and grapes is appropriate surely for the autumn hat!

Here is a new fabric for the sportswoman. It has a right side, with a satin finish of high luster in any bright sports color, while the back is a close imitation of leather. Either side can be used, or they may be used in combination.

Fancy skirts to be worn with dressy blouses are coming back to favor. The princess skirt or the skirt with bretelles comes under this head.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

Bathing Suit

Is taffeta used for bathing suits? How would you make and trim a black bathing suit of this material? Mrs. W. R.

Taffeta of a good quality is suitable for bathing suits. Make a full circular skirt, with as many narrow ruffles on it as you wish. Attach this to a surplice waist and finish the neck with a narrow quilling.

Outing Hat

Please give me several easy ways of trimming a hat for sports wear. I do not want anything too elaborate. Miss E. E. W.

A band of striped ribbon, or flowers painted or worked in wool on the crown are easy and effective ways to trim a hat. Or if you have an effectively colored bandanna handkerchief, drape it loosely over the crown and weight the ends with jet beads.

ORGANDIE AND TAFFETA COMBINED

EVERY one has need for a silk street dress even in the midst of summer months. There are dreary, rainy days when one cannot possibly wear a light washable frock and look respectable. For such a purpose the frock pictured would prove most serviceable. It is made of dark blue taffeta. The bodice is very striking, being made on modified basque lines. This impression is gained because of the fact that the front section is drawn tightly around to the back where it is tied in a huge bow.

It is rather unusual to see organdie used on silk as it is here seen. A ruching of the organdie tops the heading of the gathered skirt and trims the sleeves near the cuffs. The crisp material is again used to fashion the deep collar which is scarcely visible in front.

A frock of this type would prove most satisfactory, since it would carry one well into the fall days and allow one time to select the best of the new fashions which will then be launched.

PARASOL NOVELTY

ARE you looking for something new in parasols? Here is a novelty that is most attractive. It seems that there has been a Japanese invasion of novelties and decorations, for these parasols are made of Japanese silk and embroidered in fetching colors. These are made exactly the same as the paper parasol with the soft wood ribs and bamboo handles. One of the nicest features of these parasols is that they can be carried with either a fancy dress or with a sports costume. In fact, for all occasions, they are convenient and becoming.

CALL IT MERELY A PLEA TO GAIN TIME

Cleveland, Ohio, July 22.—The following statement was issued today by the Transportation Brotherhoods:

The proposition of the railroads to refer the demands of the railway brotherhoods for an eight hour day to the interstate commerce commission is nothing but a proposition to gain time for the railroads and to waste time for the men.

The interstate commerce commission is not equipped to undertake this task. In order to undertake it the interstate commerce commission act would have to be radically amended by congress. Such an amendment would require at least a month for passage, and upon its passage several months would be required before the commission could actually begin the work thus imposed upon it.

Whatever may be the desirability of empowering the interstate commerce commission to handle wage disputes, this is not the time to do it. The commission is overburdened with duties. A bill has been pending before congress, urgently advocated by the railroads themselves, calling for an increase in the membership of the commission in order to enable it to handle cases already on its docket.

A resolution is now pending in the house, after having been passed by the senate, calling for an investigation by a joint committee of congress into the need for railroad legislation, particularly into the need for legislation affecting the interstate commerce commission. This resolution was introduced at the request of the railroads and for the express purpose of heading off any railroad legislation till a comprehensive survey of the entire situation should have been made. Representatives of the railroads have urged this resolution for these reasons.

Yet now the railroads, forgetting these arguments and frightened at the prospect of being forced to yield to the brotherhoods, are demanding hasty and ill-considered legislation, the first effect of which would be to give them an advantage in their dispute with their employes.

The commission only has authority over rates, etc., on interstate traffic and has no control over matters that are wholly within a state.

If authority is conferred on the interstate commerce commission by congress to fix or exercise any control over wages, it would only apply to employes whose runs are from one state to another.

Inasmuch as the bulk of trainmen work wholly within a state, it would result in the worst muddle possible. A few employes having their wages fixed by the United States and the rest of them standing just where they are now.

The claim made by the railroads that as the interstate commerce commission has authority over freight rates, it should also have authority over rates of pay, is a clever and seemingly plausible argument, put forward to secure public sympathy.

The interstate commerce commission has always taken cognizance of wages or labor costs in passing upon freight rates. One of the leading arguments of the railroads in making application for authority to advance their freight rates has been that outlays for employes have increased and as a consequence that they should be permitted to charge more for their services.

Elaborate statistical exhibits have in all general rate cases been presented by the railroads to the commission, which set forth in great detail how many more dollars are paid out in wages and salaries now as compared with former years. As a consequence the interstate commerce commission has always passed on the question of the relation of wages to freight and passenger rates and to total operating costs.

'Spot Saved My Life and I Don't Want No Home Nor No Job Without Spot Around,' Says Runaway Boy

IT WAS breakfast time on the shanty boat, moored in a little inlet of the big Mississippi River in the South. On the projection, by way of a porch, sat Leo Hegan, with Spot, "jest an 'ornery houn' dog pup," according to river men, who sometimes came in contact with Spot in disputing the right of way.

But to Leo he was the finest specimen o' the dog family that ever existed, and he was more than a dog, for he was the only friend that Leo had. Others thought Leo ought to be at something, all the time helping with the everlasting fishing, hanging the clothesline, caring for the baby or doing something else equally unimportant in the boy's estimation.

But Spot had no sympathy with such tasks and was only happy when he and Leo were following the bent of their own sweet wills, chasing birds along the bank, sitting in the shade watching the steamers or eating lunches, abstracted with painstaking care from the family supply.

Leo's "pappy" was up early in the morning, and all day he set his lines and attended to other duties connected with his fishing. When the moon came up he lay down to sleep. One night after Spot had first come to live with them Leo had slipped off the boat into the river. Spot had watched his efforts in the water for a moment and then had set up the most ear-piercing cries, that were something more than barking, and penetrated to the consciousness of the sleeping man, who, coming out, saw the peril of the child and rescued him.

Needless to say, this had cemented the friendship between the boy and the dog, and ever after they were always together.

"Spot Saved His Life"

Leo could swim now, like a fish, and he and Spot were often in the water together. One day a man came along and was about to steal Leo's poor little clothes, consisting of "pants and shirt," when Spot rushed out like a whirlwind, and Leo, who did not wear a bathing suit, needless to say, hurried out of the water and caught up his precious clothes, which the man had dropped.

"They Had Fish for Supper"

After a few days he found he had to leave the river bank and take to the road that ran as nearly parallel as he could find.

He and Spot were driven away from doors where they asked for food, and often were given a generous supply, so that they did not starve. Upon the whole it was a pleasant trip, but it seemed a long time before they came to their journey's end, and landed in New Orleans. Leo was footsore and weary, when a policeman found him on the street and took him to the station. He had missed breakfast, likewise supper, the day before, and was dead tired and hungry, but his first thought was for Spot.

"Don't you all do nothin' to Spot," he said, looking up at the police officer without any fear. "He done saved my life, barkin' and wakin' up pappy when I fell overboard before I could swim good. We stick. I don't want no home, nor no job, where I caint have Spot aroun'."

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children was asked to take Leo in, and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals found a place for Spot. No doubt some good people will care for both of them on one of the little vegetable farms around New Orleans.

On this particular day Spot was sharing his breakfast with Leo, for it was as much the breakfast of one as the other. Leo had had to help get it, and now he knew that he would have to wash the dishes if not called upon to do that more odious task of taking care of the baby.

The air was filled with the perfume of wild cherry blossoms, and grape blossoms, and the sky was as blue as sapphire, with here and there a flaky cloud floating by. In the distance could be heard the chug-chug of the Grey Eagle on its road to Memphis, and the faint line of smoke in the distance told of a smart little motor boat on its way to a river clubhouse.

All the good times in the world beyond the shanty boat, Leo thought, and here he was moored to this old boat and uncongenial people. "Twelve years old," he said to himself, "and no start made yet." It was time he got a move on him if he was ever to be anything in this world. He got up with his piece of corn bread in his hand. Spot looked at the crumbs of his piece, but after a moment followed him.

He walked down to the river bank and quickly disappeared in the tangle of willows, alders, cat tails and other green things that grew down to the river's edge. He knew a place where wild ducks had nested, and where a water puppy had been seen, and as he went along it was all familiar ground, but he did not stop for a moment, his face being set resolutely to the south.

He heard the baby cry, then his mother call, then the shout of his father, but still he went straight on and was finally out of hearing. It was not until he had covered a couple of miles that he and Spot made their way out of the bushes, although still keeping to the bank. He slipped his corn bread into his pocket as he did not know how soon he might see another piece like it.

They walked all day and at night he and Spot slept on the bank. After awhile he would stop and maybe wash dishes or do something to earn some food, but for today the piece of corn bread must do, and so at sunset he and Spot lay down under the stars and slept until sunrise. He found some poles set and caught a fish. He then foraged for some bread among the farmers, and for some matches. "I hope you don't smoke," the good lady said, who gave him matches, and he declared that he did not, but that he wanted to have some to make a fire in case it turned cold. She laughed at him and gave him a package of food, which he carefully put away, cooking the fish for supper.

HIDDEN WORDS PUZZLE

FAMILY AFFAIRS.

MY father says that we aren't going away this summer because mamma's spent so much money," said little Clara, "but mamma says that she's glad of it, 'cause now she'll know why papa spends so much every summer staying at home."

"You should not tell your family affairs in that way," said the teacher.

"Oh, they ain't family affairs," said Clara. "The family jest listens."

SKEPTICAL.

MOTHER, Willie said that Mike eats snakes, and I asked him did he eat snakes."

"And what did he say?" asked mother.

"He said yes, and I asked him what for, and he said 'for greens.' Now don't you think that was a funny kind of greens?"

"Yes," said mother, "but you must not believe all Mike tells you."

"Oh, I don't, mother. He told me that once you were as little as I am and that you were ten times prettier, but, of course, I did not believe that."

NAUGHTY NETTIE

NAUGHTY NETTIE TIED A RIBBON
TO HER KITTY'S TAIL,
AND THE KITTY WHISKED IT WILDLY,
BUT TO NO AVAIL.
THEN QUITE FRANTIC KITTY SCAMPERED
TO THE DINING ROOM,
HOPPED ON SIDEBOARD AND ON TABLES,
THEN CAME CRACK-O-DOOM.
MOTHER'S CHINA SMASHED TO PIECES,
KITTY PROMPTLY YANKED,
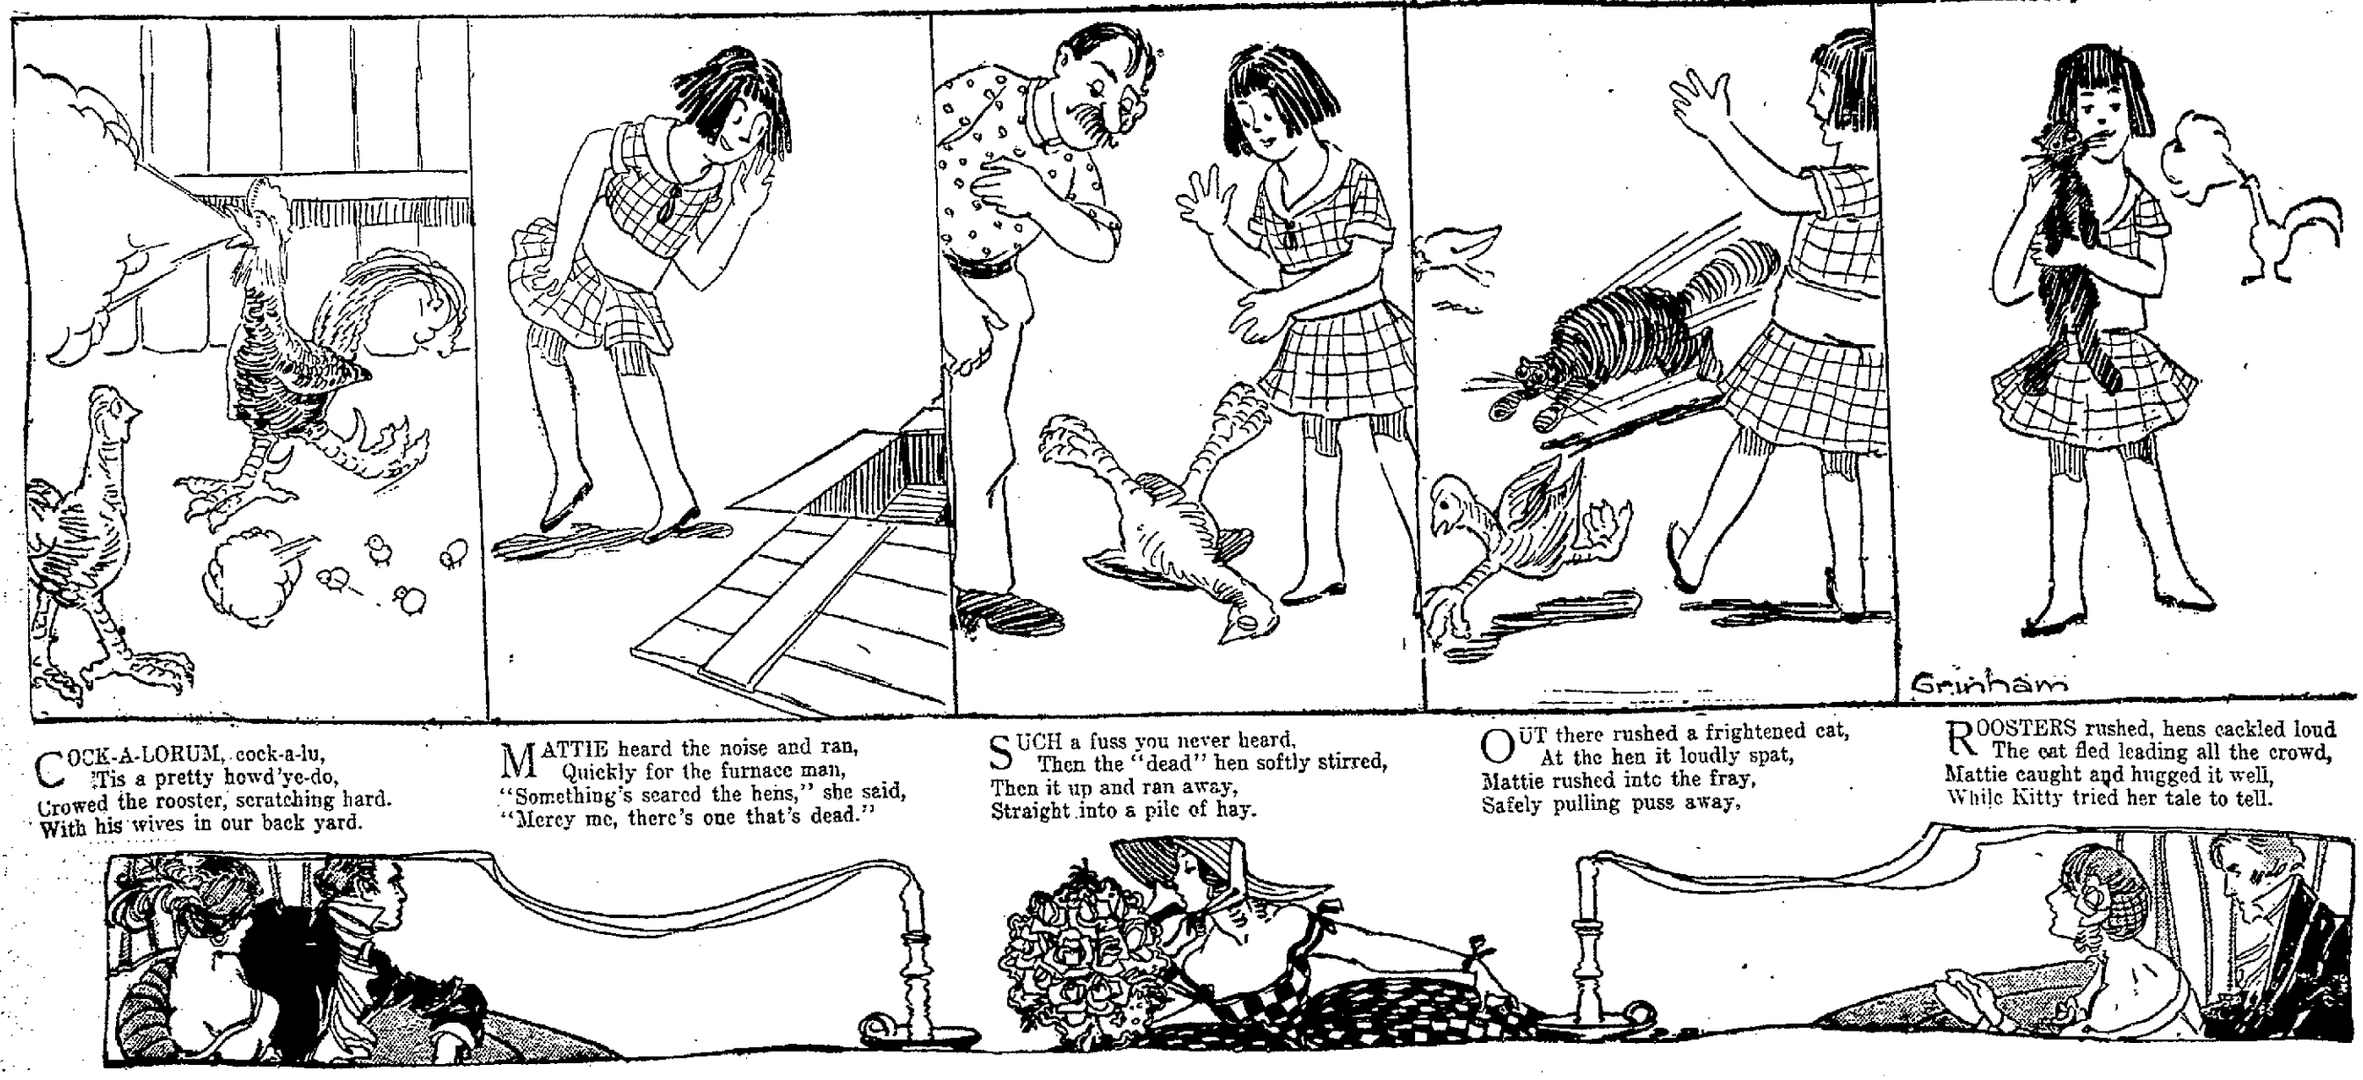
NAUGHTY NETTIE SPANKED.

A LITTLE BIT OF TRAGEDY IN OUR BACK YARD



COCK-A-LORUM, cock-a-lu,
'Tis a pretty howd'ye-do,
Crowed the rooster, scratching hard.
With his wives in our back yard.

MATTIE heard the noise and ran,
Quickly for the furnace man,
"Something's scared the hens," she said,
"Mercy me, there's one that's dead."

SUCH a fuss you never heard,
Then the "dead" hen softly stirred,
Then it up and ran away,
Straight into a pile of hay.

OUT there rushed a frightened cat,
At the hen it loudly spat,
Mattie rushed into the fray,
Safely pulling puss away.

ROOSTERS rushed, hens cackled loud
The cat fled leading all the crowd,
Mattie caught and hugged it well,
While Kitty tried her tale to tell.

FREIGHT STATION DESTROYED BY FIRE

G. R. & I. Transfer House at Portland is Burned to the Ground.

Word was received at the local offices of the G. R. & I. road this morning that the transfer freight house of the company at Portland, Ind., was burned to the ground last night. No cause has as yet been found for the origin of the fire, which seemed to have started near the roof of the structure. There were no lights burning in the building at the time the fire probably started. The building is a total loss, as only one wall remains standing.

The burned structure was located in a "Y" between the G. R. & I. tracks and those of the Lake Erie & Western. It was used for storing freight which was to be transferred from one road to the other. The exact loss has not yet been determined, but unless a great amount of freight was destroyed it may not exceed a thousand dollars.

MORE MEN STRIKE

Clover Leaf Again Experiences Trouble With Section Men

With the strike of trainmen confronting them, officials of the Clover Leaf railroad are experiencing much trouble in keeping sufficient men on the sections over the three divisions to make the necessary repairs,

Yesterday a large number of men employed on the western division, between Charleston and St. Louis, left their work after making a demand for higher wages. While the strike is not regarded as serious, it is causing the road no little inconvenience. This is the third gang of section workers that have walked out on the road, even foreigners and negroes who were out on the job, refusing to remain. The men have been receiving $1.65 a day and are making a demand for $2.

TRACK ELEVATION TO COST BIG SUM

The Pennsylvania railroad will spend $295,700 in elevating its tracks over Hanna and Lafayette streets if the estimate filed with the board of works Saturday from the Pittsburgh offices of the railroad are accurate. The city of Fort Wayne is expected to add $75,000 more in completing the work, according to the figures by railroad officials.

The estimate of cost of the proposed track elevation, which members of the board of works hold to be about correct, is several times the amount used in lifting the tracks over Calhoun street. Advance in the cost of structural steel is given as one reason. The fact that there will be many more tracks to be carried over the streets than were laid over Calhoun is another costly feature. Calhoun street is crossed by but three tracks, while at least seven will be over Hanna and Lafayette streets.

Final plans for the elevation, made to conform with views of Fort Wayne officials, are expected from the Pittsburgh offices next week. The list of estimates was sent as a forerunner of the complete plans. The structural work over Lafayette street is expected to cost $151,600 and over Hanna street $41,100. The city of Fort Wayne must pay for the street approaches and subway.

MOURNING OF CHINA HAS BEEN FARCICAL

Liang Shi-Yi and Chow Tzu-Chi, the of The Associated Press.)—Chinese public opinion has been in a strangely unformed state since the death of Yuan Shi-Kai. The passing of the would-be emperor president, was hailed with rejoicing rather than sorrow and efforts to enforce mourning have been somewhat farcical.

Every day it becomes clearer that many of the leaders of the revolution in the south who declared Yuan Shi-Kai's retirement was the chief end which they sought, has personal ambitions and are not giving Yuan Hung the support which might reasonably be expected of them. Many of the provinces have refused to rejoin the union and new demands are made upon the president almost daily by political leaders in the rebelling provinces.

Liang Shi-Yi and Chow Tzu-Chi, the two members of the government who have had most to do with finances in China, have both resigned under fire. The former was head of the financial council and director general of the Bank of Communications. The latter was formerly minister of commerce and agriculture, but had for a short time served as minister of finance. Both of these men were close advisers of Yuan Shi Kai, and are regarded by foreigners as two of the ablest leaders in China.

Liang Shi-Ki has been the storm center of criticism for many months and recently the republican press has assailed him bitterly. The board of censors has made an adverse report on his malfeasance in office. He is accused of various finahcial irregularities and is blamed with the shortage of hard money which made it necessary to suspend specie payment on the notes of the Bank of Communications and the aBnk of China.

BLACKLIST CALLED TACTICAL BLUNDER

London, July 22. — (Delayed).—A neutral diplomat exceptionally well informed regarding the details of the economic war which Great Britain is waging on the central powers declared today to a representative of the Associated Press that he regarded the recent publication by the British government of the blacklist of certain American firms as "the greatest possible tactical blunder at this stage when a French loan is about to be financed in America and important Russian financial arrangements are under way there."

"It is a blunder," continued the diplomat, "because it is unnecessary since for months most of the firms on the list have been on a subrosa blacklist. At any rate they were not on the white list, so the government had complete control over any of their operations which touched British territory.

The financial section of London is by no means unanimous in approval of the measure, even those in its favor being dissatisfied with its scope, contending that some omissions from the list are more significant than inclusions.

"Its publication at this time is a mystery. One possible theory is that the government's hand was forced by recalcitrant British firms which may have declined to give up trading with firms not on the white list until their position was made legally untenable by the actual promulgation of the list. If the government had desired to warn the British public wider publicity would have been sought. The list was published only in the official London Gazette. None of the London papers printed it.

The possibility of legal retaliation against the blacklist is a question for international lawyers, but the possibility of unofficial retaliations is almost unlimited. At least a Pacific coast firm of unimpeachable Americanism might make the positions of British traders in a number of fertile fields decidedly uncomfortable."

Bridgehampton, N. Y., July 22.—Charles E. Hughes and his wife and daughters motored today to Southampton beach, ten miles away, to watch a heavy surf pound the four-masted Norwegian bark, Clan Galbraith, which went ashore in a fog early today while on route, in ballast, from Avonmouth, England, to New York.

The high tide brought the ship within 75 yards off shore. She rolled heavily, broadside to the sea, and appeared some time about to capsize. Her crew of about fifteen remained aboard.

FIGHT DUEL OVER GIRL WHO DIED 50 YEARS AGO

Hammond, Ind., July 22.—James Alfonzo, 75, and Gastova Gentele, 72, are in a serious condition today as the result of a duel they fought with stilettos in a box car last night over a girl who has been dead fifty years. Both men may die.

Nearly fifty years ago the men were in love with an Italian girl in Sardini. They were called to war, and when they returned home the girl was dead. Their paths separated and the men had not seen each other since, until they met here as track laborers. The trouble started over an argument as to which of the men the girl loved more.

All Alpine Turns Out to the Funeral of Mrs. Spannell.

Alpine, Tex., July 22.— Practically the entire population of Alpine attended funeral services here today for Mrs. Crystal Holland Spannell who, with Lieut. Col. M. C. Butler, was killed by her husband last Thursday night. Friends of Spannell said today that he apparently shot in a fit of insane jealousy and that since he has been overwhelmed with remorse and on several occasions begged his guards to kill him.

As she boarded a train last night for Washington, where she is taking her husband's body for burial, Mrs. Butler said to friends on the station platform:

"Neither my husband nor Mrs. Spannell was in the least to blame."

SPANNELL IN EL PASO JAIL.

El Paso, Texas, July 22.—Harry J. Spannell, who Thursday night shot and killed his wife and Lieut. Col. M. C. Butler, at Alpine, Texas, was held at the county jail here today under heavy guard. Three deputies, who arrived with the prisoner early today, asserted feeling in Alpine is tense and authorities there felt an attempt at violence might be made.

Spannell is held in Communicade. On the way to the jail the party was intercepted by a newspaper man who asked Spannell why he killed his wife and Butler.

Apparently on the verge of a collapse, Spannell replied:

According to reports from jail authorities Spannell last night awoke from a fitful sleep, burst out weeping and expressed a wish to see his five-year-old daughter.

ASKS COLUMBIA CITY PAPER TO REPRINT IT

Indianapolis, July 22. — Adjt. Gen. Frank L. Bridges yesterday addressed a letter to the editor of the Columbia City (Ind.) Post, in which he asks that newspaper to reprint the facsimile of a letter addressed to him recently by Joseph R. Harrison, also of Columbia City, who speaks highly of the Indiana national guard camp at Fort Harrison. Mr. Harrison formerly was a lieutenant colonel in the Indiana national guard, and Gen. Bridges says that he was deposed in the 1915 reorganization of the state militia.

Mr. Harrison visited the camp while the troops were concentrated there, and wrote a letter to Gen. Bridges expressing his appreciation of the splendid condition of the camp and the spirit of the men. In his letter to the Columbia City editor Gen. Bridges declares that Mr. Harrison wrote him the complimentary letter regardless of the fact that he gave the newspapers of Columbia City information on which was based articles purporting to show that Bridges was incompetent.

ROTARIANS GIVEN GREAT RECEPTION

With the clashing tunes of twenty-six bands still ringing in his ears and the lasting memory of how that Cincinnati watermelon lay in his digestive tract, Charles Biederwolf, secretary of the Fort Wayne Commercial club, returned to the city Friday in company of the Fort Wayne delegation after having attended a memorable convention of the Rotary clubs of America in the ueen City. Mr. Biederwolf and Rev. Arthur J. Folsom were the delegates to the convention from the Fort Wayne Rotary club.

"You have no idea of the sight that convention was," said Mr. Biederwolf, "It was a succession of watermelon feasts, boat rides and auto trips over the city." The secretary was profuse in his praise of entertainment accorded the Rotary clubs at Dayton, O., by John H. Patterson, president of the National Cash Register company. Mr. Patersón tore Dayton wide open with his reception of the Rotary clubs. Two special trains of twenty-six coaches carried the clubmen to Dayton, O., where they were met at the train by autos and taken for a drive over the city and for an inspection of the plant of the Cash Register company.

"Is there anything new, today?" Mr. Biederwolf was asked. But it was a foolish question. He was too busy going over a neglected mass of mail.

DR. ATWOOD, VICTIM OF BULLET, MAY SURVIVE

Boston, Mass., July 22.—Dr. Wilfred E. Harris, was much improved today in the opinion of the attending physicians and hope was strengthened that he would survive the wounds inflicted by Dr. Aldridge Atwood on Tuesday.

The police are continuing their efforts to establish a connection between the shooting of Dr. Harris and the death by poisoning a few hours before of Dr. Celia P. Adams. Atwood says that Harris prevented his marriage to Miss Adams and that he attacked the other physician when he learned that his fiancee was dead, supposedly a suicide.

Apoplexy is the latest substitute for infantile paralysis. Apoplexy was what Berlina Suttles, colored, 1217 Thayer street, had when the house was quarantined for infantile parlysis. There is a wave of relief in the neighborhood of North Oliver street, and children which were sent on visits, when the plague was reported in the vicinity, will return home.

The colored girl showed all the early symptoms of the disease. She was paralyzed, physicians say. Her right side was helpless, they report. This is a rare symptom for apoplexy, doctors claim. Late Friday afternoon, however, advanced stages of the ailment showed clearly that the girl had apoplexy.

The city health department is relieved. They hope that Fort Wayne will not have a case of real infantile paralysis this summer. There is little danger until the plague gets a foothold, they say.

FOREIGN SERVICE PAY MILLIONS VOTED OUT

Washington, D. C., July 22.— Millions of dollars for extra "foreign service pay" for officers and men of the army, provided for in the army bill, in the expectation that troops would be engaged in Mexico, were voted out today on motion of Senator Chamberlain of the senate military committee, who is regarded as speaking for the war department.

The action was regarded as evidence that the leaders do not expect the Mexican situation to take the serious turn it promised when the army bill was in committee.

Army bill advocates had urged adoption without amendment, asserting that increases of more than $148,000,000 over the house measure were essential. The bill now carries a total of $330,000,000. Debate probably will continue for several days.

The appropriation for subsistence of the army and national guard was reduced $7,000,000. A reduction of $13,000,000 was made in the appropriation for transportation and a four-million-dollar cut was made in the appropriation for clothing, camp and garrison equipment.

The reductions urged by the military committee aggregated $31,000,000, reducing the total of the bill to $299,000,000.

PARTIAL REPLY WILL NOT BE SATISFACTORY

Washington, July 22.—If great Britain's memorandum regarding mail seizures now on its way to Washington from Ambassador Page, deals only with specific cases but neglects to discuss the principles for which the United States contends, as has been indicated in forecasts of its contents, the American government will press for a complete reply making it plain that it considers delay in answering the American note inexcusable.

It was made clear at the state department today that a partial reply will not satisfy the United States. The British memorandum had not been received today by the department.

FORT WAYNE WILL NOT GET AUTO THIEF

Toledo Wins Race for Custody of Man Who Stole Car from Here.

If the interurban car running between Fort Wayne and Bluffton had not broken down Friday night Arthur P. Newman, 40, would have been in Fort Wayne, Saturday to answer to a charge of stealing a Ford automobile from Dr. Christian Martz. The machine was taken from in front of the Martz home, 207 East Creighton avenue on May 3.

As it is, Newman is in Toledo to answer to a similar charge there. He was arrested Friday afternoon in Anderson. Police of Fort Wayne and Toledo were both notified of his capture.

"Newman will be given over to the city who sends a man for him first," was the telephone message Police Chief Lenz received.

There was a rush to have the necessary papers made out. Detective Sargeant Joseph Brennan was dispatched for Newman. Brennan was ready in twenty minutes and left on the 6 o'clock car. He had a beautiful start.

But the car broke down between Kingsland and Bluffton. Brennan walked up and down the track and impatiently looked now and then at his watch. It was forty minutes before the car started again. Brennan arrived in Anderson fifteen minutes after the Toledo officer. He would have won the race but for the breakdown.

Brennan wired back the disappointing answer to Lenz late Friday evening. Brennan stayed in Anderson Saturday morning to question the prisoner. Then Newman was taken to Toledo and Brennan returned home.

On His Trail for Months.

Fort Wayne police have been on the trail of Newman for three months. Police Chief Lenz says he has always been sure of being after the right fellow. Newman worked in Fort Wayne a short time as representative of the Velvetone Products company, of Cincinnati. He quit his job and he and the car were missing next day.

He answered the description of the man seen with the machine perfectly. Police followed him to Monroe, Mich., where he had, give his name as I. E. Walker. He went from Monroe to Detroit and had not been heard of since.

Brennan wired back that Newman said he had left the car belonging to Martz in Rochester, N. Y. He said police would be able to recover the machine as he knew exactly where it was located.

Lenz thinks that Newman is a member of the organization of auto thieves working in this section of the country. Lenz was especially anxious to gain possession of him as a prisoner because of information he hoped to obtain relating to other stolen cars.

NO CONTEST OVER HETTY GREEN'S WILL

Probate of Document Does Not Show Exact Amount of Estate.

Bellows Falls, Vt., July 22.—The will of Mrs. Hetty Green was admitted to probate here today without contest, leaving the entire estate to her son, Col. Edward H. R. Green, and daughter, Mrs Matthew Astor Wilkes. Col. Green filed a bond for $50,000 as trustee for the fund left his sister.

Edward L. Walker and Charles E. Capron, of Bellows Falls, were appointed commissioners of the estate and Mr. Walker will also act as agent of service.

Col. Green's attorney, Charles W. Pierson, of New York, stated that he anticipated action by the state of New York to obtain, if possible, an inheritance tax on the estate, though Mrs. Green claimed a legal residence here. The state of Vermont collects no inheritance tax on estates willed from parents to children. The exact amount left by Mrs. Green is not a matter of public knowledge as the law does not require this to be shown.

LONG WRANGLE DUE ON SENATE'S NAVAL BILL

Washington, July 22.—The senate naval bill went to a conference committee of the two houses today with every prospect ahead for a long struggle over its increased building provisions. The house is expected to insist on its plan for only five capital warships next year, three less than the senate voted, and to fight the senate's three year program. Eight senators voted against the measure yesterday. Two are democrats, Senators Thomas and Vardaman. Republicans who opposed it are Senators Clapp, Curtis, Gronna, La Follette, Norris and Works. Many proposals to curtail big building increases were voted down overwhelmingly. Senator La Follette made a seven hour speech against the bill.

BABES IN THE WOODS FAIRY TALE IN LIFE

Waterbury, Conn., July 22.—The fairy tale of "babes in the woods" has been duplicated in the woods near Lakewood park, this city, by Andrew Yankauskas, aged 9, and his sister, Mary, aged 8. The children left home on Tuesday to go fishing. Since then they have lived on wild berries and have been sleeping in the woods. Their parents had given up hope, believing they had been drowned. They were located today by a policeman.

WEED GROWERS HAVE CAUSE TO TREMBLE

Many Affidavits Are Expected to Follow Inspection Trip.

Police court is expected to be filled with weed growers Monday morning.

Three officers, in the police runabout, drove through nearly all sections of Fort Wayne Saturday afternoon. They said their trip was for the purpose of finding out upon what properties weeds were allowed to grow. Affidavits will follow at once, police said.

Not less than 100 affidavits are expected to be signed up against property owners who tolerate weeds unless many lots have been mowed within the past two days, police say.

The police method will be to give no preliminary warning. They will find out who the property upon which gaunt weeds thrive, belong to. One of the officers will sign an affidavit against the citizen, who has not performed the duty of making his land respectable. The affidavit will be read to the offender. He will be told to appear in police court. If he is not there the patrol will be sent for him.

Will Fine Offenders.

Judge Kerr says he is afraid he will have to fine all those brought before him, who have not heeded the repeated warnings to cut their weeds. The statute fixes a penalty of from $5 to $25.

"There is little use for delinquent citizenship," Judge Kerr said. "In winter and summer I find it the same. There is always the same class of citizens who will neither shovel snow in December nor cut weeds in July, until they have to."

When the order to have weeds cut was given out by Mayor Hosey there was some discussion as to which department the task of looking after prosecutions would come under.

The health board did not want the job. It has been removed from their department, they claimed. The board of safety did not take up the matter at once. Police will now take the position of prosecutors. aPtrolmen will report properties where weeds grow until all plats have been cleaned.

"It is a nuisance and not a health matter in reality," Mayor Hosey said. "We have a law against weeds. Maybe we should have enforced it in May and brought in all who gave weeds a chance. We tried to be reasonable. There is no excuse for weeds continuing to grow. We will stop it by stringent measures."

MORE STENOGRAPHERS NEEDED IN THE FIELD

An examination for male stenographers and typewriters for the field service will be held under direction of the civil service division at the federal building July 29, according to an announcement of W. J. Hess, assistant postmaster. There is a scarcity of stenographers and typewriters in the field service.

Field service stenographers are employed outside of Washington, many of them in federal buildings in some of the larger cities of the country. As an illustration of the nature of the work of a field stenographer, Mr. Hess pointed to work done by stenographers for the engineers who were in the Fort Wayne territory making a report on the proposed Michigan-Erie canal. The salary to start for the position of male stenographer is about $900.

ORGANIZE A CIVIC IMPROVEMENT CLUB

The Park Avenue Civic Improvement association was formed at a recent meeting of the property owners of Park avenue, which extends from Broadway to Thompson avenue. The object of this club is to keep the thoroughfare in excellent condition at all times.

Charles M. Beck was named president of the new organization and H. G. Jacobs, secretary-treasurer. The board of directors is composed of Charles Wedler, C. C. Southern, Fern Crick, C. B. Graham and John Wyman.

Every property owner on the avenue with but two exceptions has children who will give a number of parties this summer and fall. With this in view the following women were appointed as chaperones: Mrs. George V. Yann, Mrs. W. S. Wells and Mrs. Alexander Wilson.

The cases will be heard Aug. 5. The cases were venued to the court of Justice A. C. Nierman from the court of Justice Henry J. Grabner.

New Jitney Ordinance is Ready for City Council

The reconstructed jitney ordinance will be placed before the council, assembled as a committee of the whole, Monday evening. Several jitney drivers are expected to attend the meeting and a warm discussion may result.

The new law, as built by the subcommittee, will not ask a bond for jitney drivers. It will demand instead a strict regulation of drivers and traffic. It will call for a $50 license fee to be paid annually by jitney operators.

The ordinance is patterned as nearly as possible after the code established at Washington, D. C. The capital city is supposed to have the best jitney law in the United States. The traffic code there was drawn up by experts and congressmen.

Requirements for jitney drivers will be more strict than if they were burdened by expense of furnishing a cash bond, according to the proposed ordinance, committeemen believe. Each applicant for a jitney permit must furnish a statement from three reliable citizens stating that he is moral and capable of operating a public conveyance. He will not be allowed to drive on Fort Wayne streets until he meets the requirements.

Jitney drivers will have established runs, according to the proposed law. They must run on a schedule. They must operate for seven hours each day. This clause was inserted to protect regular jitney drivers from men who operate cars after working hours. The new law takes into consideration the needs of jitney drivers as well as the public at large, members of the committee think. They called taxi drivers into their conferences.

A traffic officer, to regulate jitney traffic alone, will be employed from the money paid in by drivers for their licenses. This traffic guard will see that cars ru non schedule and that they keep their regular runs. A Pontiac driver must always stay on his Pontiac line, under the new code.

Several members of the council strongly favor a bond for taxi drivers. It is said that they will oppose the license plan of regulating the taxi pilots. Members of the sub-committee believe, however, that most council members will favor the new law as framed by them.

CYCLONE ALBERTS TO BE GUNNER SUNDAY

Cy Alberts is to be in the box Sunday for the Blackbirds to show that he is as good as ever. Cy is as tickled as a kid with a stick of candy over his choice for the game. Cy mowed them down so easily last Sunday the management decided that he was good enough for the Chicago Nickel Plates. Mike Froese, the youngster who has been pitching such sterling ball for the Blackbirds, will be at hand should the Chicagoers take it into thir heads to hit Cy. Something tells the management that there is going to be one of the largest crowds that the game has drawn this year at the game Sunday. The popular prices put into effect last Sunday are to have full sway Sunday and as the prices are within the reach of all there is no reason why the fans should stay away.

The Chicago Nickel Plates arrived in town today, a husky bunch to look at. The manager, Mr. Springer, says that all of the tossers with him are in the best of condition and are the starts of the Chicago semi-pros of his town.

Jack Raidy, of League park keeper fame, says that he has the grounds in the best of condition and will show the Chicago visitors what a real ball ground is like.

NORTH RANDALL SCENE OF BROKEN RECORDS

Cleveland, O., July 22.—All season's and two world's records went by the boards in the free-for-all pace at the last day of the North Randall Grand circuit races in which Single G. created a sensation after Russel Boy had won the opening heat in 2:00¼ by coming on and nosing out Murphy's pacer in the second heat, duplicating the time of the first mile and then taking the race by tramping the third heat in 2:01¼.

The world's records were: The fastest three heats ever paced, the three heats averaging 2:00 92-100. The fastest second and third heats ever paced by the same horse, averaging 2:01.

The season's record: Fastest first heat, 2:00¼; fastest second heat, 2:00½; fastest third heat, 2:01¼; fastest three heat race, averaging 2:00 92-100.

Single G. crowned himself as one of the greatest pacing machines in the history of the harness sport. He raced like a real race horse; trailed, burst out and when compelled to, made a pace that killed off those that tried to follow in his path.

That they can sometimes come back, was shown in the 2:06 trot, when Joan, driven by Mike McDevitt, romped off with the race in straight heats and looked like the Joan of two years ago, when he was practically unbeatable.

Castaway, the Cleveland pacer that once sold for $55, won the 2:18 pace by taking the first and third heats, while Contention B. was the winner in the second mile.

Donna Clay kicked everything wide open in the 2:13 trot when Charley Valentine piloted her to first money by winning the first and second heats and trimming the heavy favorite, Worthy Prince.

TRAPSHOT PREFERS CHAMPIONSHIP TO PRESIDENCY OF THE UNITED STATES.

Alden B. Richardson's father was a power in politics, once serving as United States senator from Delaware, but the former doesn't hanker after public office and the honors attached thereto. He would rather be amateur champion trapshooter of the United States than be president.

Dover, the home of Richardson, seems to extract more genuine pride from the fact that he lives there than that the city is the capital of the state.

Richardson is the present trapshooting champion of Delaware and many regard him as the best shot in America. Just now he is shooting at the top of his form and is bent on annexing the grand American handicap to be contested starting Aug. 21 at St. Louis.

For two years Richardson has missed the honors by the narrowest margins but next month he expects to pulverize every bird released from the traps in the Mound City classic and bring the glad news back to Dover.

Competing against a crack field in 1914, Richardson won the Delaware championship with 96 breaks and repeated in 1915 with 100. His average in 1913 was 93.57; in 1914, 93.80 and in 1915, 95.66. To date this year he has averaged better than 97 for over 2,000 targets and there doesn't appear to be any sign of a let up.

At the independent club shoot in Philadelphia Richardson shooting on Memorial day broke 200 straight, smashing 175 from the 16-yard mark and 25 from the 20-yard line, and he nailed every target in the center.

That is his best performance of the season but on several occasions he had concluded the program with unfinished runs of 50 and 100 and has copped the honors in nine-tenths of the tournaments he has competed in this season.

Just to get on edge for the Delaware championship and the grand American, Richardson challenged Allan Heil, of Allentown, Pa., to a shoot for the 16-yard championship challenge trophy. Heil won it last fall at the Westy Hogan shoot, breaking 97 targets in a gale.

When the two met July 17 at Philadelphia Richardson won with a score of 97.

PLAY FIRST GAME IN LEAGUE SERIES

Saturday afternoon at League park there was played one of those good old ball games where rivalry is sticking out everywhere and where the players are the best.

The Bowser nine having played off the disputed game last Saturday, took on the Turners for the first game of the championship series. The managers say that their teams are in the best of condition and are confident of winning.

There was a lot of rivalry demonstrated. The contending teams had two bands and about four or five hundred rooters. Last Saturday, when the Bowser and Electric works played off their disputed game there was a large amount of noise resembling a college game, but Saturday's game promises to surpass even that.

INJURY JINX HITS YANKS HEAVY BLOW

Miracle men bob up on the ball field each season. At the start of the race Lee Fohl wore the 1916 title, but the Cleveland pilot must make way for Bill Donovan, who is keeping his Yankees in first place in the face of tremendous odds, due to the activity of the injury jinx. Here is the Yankee's hospital list, yet the club continues to lead:

Frank Gilhooley—Took Maisel's place, became star lead-off man of league, then broke ankle sliding to base.

JACK LAPP, CHICAGO WHITE SOX:

"A catcher always takes a chance of having someone read his signals, but if he employs the right kind of sign language then he is safe for there are so few fellows in baseball who know it that you can spell your signal to the pitcher with the coacher looking on and never let him know whether you are asking for a fast one, a curve, a slow ball or a pitchout.

"I learned the trick when I was with the Athletics, where all the men under Mack were proficient in the language. Jim Scott is enthusiastic about the new code and says that the next time he pitches he will discard the usual signs and carry on all of his conversation with me by wiggling his fingers."

CONNIE MACK, PHILADELPHIA ATHLETICS:

"I have everything I own tied up in the Athletics and am doing what I know is best. I believe I know the baseball business and I am coming back with a greater team than ever before.

"I don't believe in building up a ball team as other managers do and therefore I care nothing about the charges made by critics. I have the foundation for a great club right now.

"I admit that I am disappointed at the showing of several of my recruits and a few of the veterans but we have others coming who will fill the bill if these youngsters fail."

THIS BUSHER WHIFFS 27 IN 23 INNINGS

Owensboro, Ky., July 22.—Pitcher "Lefty" Roberts, of the Owensboro team of the Kitty league, has qualified as an iron man. Hurling a double-header against Clarksville he allowed only one run and fanned twenty-seven men in twenty-three innings. Twelve hits were made off his delivery. Roberts won the opener 1 to 0. The windup, fourteen innings, went to Clarksville 1 to 0.

A few days prior to this feat Roberts pitched two games against Henderson without being scored upon.

SPORT DOPE

Dispatches from St. Louis state that a crowd started a riot at one of the ball parks the other day. We presume he was subdued.

With a few more columns of expert dope Frank Gotch's fibula may become as famous as Jimmy Britt's ulna.

Blank has signed to play shortstop for the Evansville team. He is expected to fill in nicely for Manager Knoll.

"I can't say I'm nutty about the 'Charge of the Light Brigade,' mused the old-time sport as he glimpsed his gas bill.

Ping Bodie has fallen for golf, according to a tip from the coast. He claims to have done the first nine holes in three hours and fifteen minutes.

The news that Umpire Rigler has been consulting Bonesetter Reese is disappointing to several National league managers, who think he should consult an oculist.

STAR JUMPER TO QUIT.

New York, July 22—Wesley Oler, former Yale captain and New York A. C. champion high jumper, will hang up his shoes after the national championships at Newark on Sept. 9. Although one of the best high jumpers in the world, Oler yesterday announced he would complete his athletic career at the coming games, for which he is already training.

DEATH ON WHEELS!

THIS is the story of Giovanni Bocca as it is being told in Padua, where Italian troops are gathering from the footpaths of the Tyrolean Alps, from which the Austrians are slowly beating back these hardy mountain soldiers.

From Innsbruck, the capital of the most southerly province of Austria, there runs southward and to the east of Lake Garda, the great Brenner Pass, connecting the Italian city of Verona. Foot by foot at the beginning of the war, the Italians advanced across the border for several miles as the crow flies—but for many, many miles, if the twisting paths through the mountains are measured.

Along the east of the Brenner Path the Central Tyrolean Alps rise in jagged peaks so abruptly a man all but hangs in space as he climbs, only to find sheer precipices on the opposite side when the summit is reached. The altitude varies from 8000 to 12,000 feet above sea level.

There are the scenes of more than a score of times of the fiercest fighting in history, owing to its position astride the Alps, and so commanding is the road across them. It is the roof of the world, and a victory on the small plateaus, where opposing handfuls of soldiers occasionally meet in hand-to-hand conflicts, means that the bones of the defeated bleach where they fall, or are thrown off the globe. Quarter is seldom given, for it usually is an individual warfare, each man for himself.

In retreating, each man's life depends upon the sureness of his toes and the grip of his fingers. His rifle is strapped to his back. It would be difficult in the extreme to guard a prisoner in descending to a camp if one should be captured among the glaciers and slippery toe-holds of the snow-capped mountains.

But Giovanni Bocca captured fifty and they were brought down the mountains to Padua.

The story has drifted to Venice, Bocca's home, by those who, at this writing, fear that Padua will be unable to withstand the threatened onslaught of the invading Austrian.

Going back to Roman history, the passes through these mountains have been few, and with the exception of some of the larger ones, are known only by the natives. The Romans knew of two, the Spiugen and Septimer, but were guided through these. But back from the old tourist trails there is a network of paths that lead to more than one artery that runs from one side of the range to the other. It has been comparatively easy for either side to block the known passes with artillery. It has been a different matter with the network of paths, for that has required the climbing of peaks, the transportation of machine guns and howitzers up the thousands of feet of perpendicular mountain walls.

Once in position, this artillery has easily commanded as high as a dozen footpaths, one of which, perhaps, would connect another network, the whole making an outlet to the other side. There would be held for weeks and months an entire section of range until the enemy, avoiding the beaten paths, would climb the hitherto defiant mountain sides, and, in a surprise attack, command instead of being commanded.

It was one of these commanding sites that the Italians recently were situated upon. Below was the pass. To the east as far as the eye could see was an impassable range. Across the path below rose the sides of a 100-foot slab of upended rock, snow and ice. As far as the eye could see across the pass, there was no other way of crossing the range until another smaller path between the hills was reached, and there the Italians commanded.

The Austrian Tyroleans, famous for their marksmanship and their climbing, could not get through. Their only hope would be to scale the mountain side to the Italian position in a surprise attack from the Austrian side, or to gain a commanding position on the peak that reared above the Italians across the path.

An attack on the Italian position up the Austrian side of their mountain was closely guarded night and day. Through the pass below the Italian troops constantly poured, back and forth, hunting their enemy through the maze of footpaths that lead from every angle. Further on the pass was held by the Austrians in a position as impregnable as that of the Italians seemed.

Across the pass on the opposite mountain peak within rifle shot was a plateau, across which ran breastworks of solid stone. Behind that it would be an easy matter for the enemy to dislodge the commanding guns of the Italians, should the Austrians ever succeed in getting on the top. Clashes along the mountain sides were of daily occurrence, but only one attempt was made by the Austrians to rush the main pass. In that attempt they discovered with heavy loss the position of the Italian machine guns above.

The Italians in vain endeavored to gain the plateau of the opposite peak, and in the midst of repeated failures word was brought by scouts that a company of Austrians had succeeded in gaining a level half way between the pass and the plateau, but around on the Austrian side, away from the higher guns of the Italians.

The Italians found the footholds leading to the Austrians' position, and tried in a night climb to surprise them, but were repulsed. Word was sent to the base in the valley for an aeroplane, minute directions being given for the purpose of bomb-dropping.

Then the aviator explained his plan.

"The plateau that overlooks the pass," he said, "runs level for 50 yards. It is open on three sides—the side next to the pass and on either end. Back, however, there is a ridge of stone. My plan would be to try to alight at the edge of the plateau and let the machine run the 50 yards into the ridge, where it would be wrecked, but where myself and passenger would stop, possibly dead—but that is a chance we would have to take.

"We could take rope enough to bring up men from the Italian side of the mountain. We could carry enough rifles and ammunition to hold off the Austrians, if they should succeed in climbing up from their present position."

The aviator was interrupted by the appearance of a messenger.

The messenger reported that the Italian scouts in the mountains had seen the Austrians' position, but that it was beyond rifle range, and that it was impossible to get artillery in a position to fire upon them. The scouts had seen enough to convince them that the Austrians were attempting to gain the farther side of the plateau so that they could climb up behind the natural breastworks, and that the enemy was busily engaged in driving spikes in the walls of rock for footholds, but that it would require another day's work before they could gain the top."

"Oh, captain, let me try the climb from our side," Giovanni pleaded.

"It cannot be done, my boy," the officer replied, kindly, "but if you are so eager to get into the mountains, I'll see what I can do."

Toward the early morning hours the captain awoke the aviator who had proposed the wrecking of the machine to get command of the dreaded plateau. The ridge that ran across its face stopped abruptly at one edge around which a man could walk.

"Could one man pick them off as fast as they could climb up?" he asked the airman.

"I am sure of it, captain," the aviator replied. "There is but one place in which to gain the top, and they will have to spike the wall all of the way up. They will not be looking for interference and will be slow."

"I have decided," the captain said, evenly, "to try an unheard-of feat. I believe it will succeed and will not be as dangerous as the plan you proposed

"It is needless to say that Giovanni will gladly risk his life for the attempt. He will die happy, at least.

"I have given orders for a machine gun to be packed, also a box of ammunition, a rifle and rope. This will be suspended from your machine and we will have Giovanni on it. I want you to circle above the plateau and turn at the proper moment to allow Giovanni to drop upon the top. He will cut the rope and land all together, if that is possible. If he succeeds in landing, but does not succeed in severing the rope in time, you will have to return and throw enough rope to him. He will then use the rope to get up a rifle and possibly more men. We can climb within 300 feet of the plateau, and there will be 400 feet of rope."

Giovanni was ready at daybreak for the start. The problem of suspending the heavy weight from the aeroplane was solved without accident.

On the left of the aviator was the coil of rope. On the right wing sat Giovanni, nursing a heavily padded gun, box and rifle. As the machine arose, Giovanni lowered the gun and ammunition overboard slowly until it hung 20 feet below, then, as instructed by the captain, he leaned over, grasped the rope as the landscape raced backward beneath him, and quickly was on the small, strong cord below the aeroplane. Down he slid until his feet rested on the big bundle.

In order to keep from spinning around in mid-air as the machine climbed higher and ever higher, Giovanni had attached to one tip of the aeroplane wing a small cord which he held fast.

Soon the peak appeared beneath him, then began a long circling descent toward them. He saw the pass, recognized the position held by the Italians and studied carefully the opposite plateau upon which he was to land. The captain had instructed him to keep knife ready to cut the rope and drop just as the machine turned in the center above the mountain floor. If the aviator misjudged the distance, he had been warned not to drop, but await a second circle. He was to use his own judgment, and the aviator had been instructed to circle above the plateau again and again until the attempt succeeded.

Giovanni realized that if the machine descended too low before approaching the mountain top, he would be dashed to death against the side. It was the biggest risk of all. He decided he would rather take the chance of a long drop.

The machine flew over the plateau, too high and too fast for the suspended man to drop off. Then the aeroplane turned back through the pass, with Giovanni lower than the level of the peak, but in a circling flight that tended upward, so that as it neared the edge of the peak it turned again outward from it. The right height had been reached. Giovanni could almost step off on to the plateau as the machine whirled away for a figure S, one end of which Giovanni could see would quickly place him in the center of the mountain floor. The bundle beneath his feet almost scraped the edge of the precipice as the machine darted over, then turned.

Giovanni saw his chance. He was being jerked rapidly toward the edge and back into space when he slashed through the rope that held him to the machine. Over and over he rolled with the bundle of gun and ammunition after him until his body struck against the barrier of rock that crossed the plateau.

Slowly Giovanni lifted his head, then one arm and leg after the other. He sat up, half stunned, half wondering if he was falling through the air and half wondering if he was still riding suspended beneath the machine.

Time was not to be lost, however, and Giovanni quickly unpacked the gun, loaded the disc of shells and examined his rifle to see that it was in good order after the tumble it had received. The rifle was not injured.

Giovanni shouldered it and went to explore the opposite side of the plateau behind the ridge. He found an open place smaller than his own landing place. Cautiously he glanced over the edge. The Austrians had worked throughout the night and were near the top. They would have to approach the top one at a time, with their rifles strapped to their backs. They were unaware of what was waiting for them, and Giovanni smiled.

Stepping back he waited. Another spike was driven home below. Giovanni was doing some fast thinking. If the first man saw him he would shout a warning to those below. The first man would be sure to withdraw as soon as he stuck his head above the edge. The men probably were climbing without ropes, as most of the soldiers do in the Alps.

So Giovanni stood with rifle ready for the appearance of the first Austrian. First he saw an ungloved hand reach up from below and grasp the rock. Then an arm and the head and shoulders. Giovanni fired. There was a piercing yell. The Austrian flung high his hands and toppled backward.

Two went along the path that led back of the ledge where he knew the Austrians must be lying in wait. Soon he saw the men return and report. Then they returned and soon were carrying rifles. These were handed to the Italian soldiers below. Then the two Italian soldiers climbed up toward Giovanni a few feet, each holding to the spikes with one hand and a revolver in the other. Soon the Austrians appeared and descended. Giovanni was ordered to lower the machine gun on the rope and to descend. This was soon accomplished. There were fifty prisoners taken from the Austrian ledge.

BUNGALOW APRONS

EVERY mother likes to see her small daughter look dainty at all times. But girls, as well as boys, get their clothes soiled at play, and while boys can be put into overalls or rompers, according to their age, few mothers will like to see their little girls dressed in these homely garments. But there will be no objection to miniature bungalow aprons on the order of those worn by the mothers, especially if a pretty color is chosen.

To make the apron measure off twice the length from the shoulder of the wearer to the edge of her dress, allowing for a deep hem, fold this and cut the top in kimono fashion, taking out under the arms to below the waist line, then cut straight across to the selvage edges. This fullness is plaited or gathered and set on after cutting slits in the body of the apron to fit. A strip of the material holds the fullness down. If preferred, the skirt part may be gored all the way down, but the child does not get the freedom the fullness allows.

These aprons are quite easy to make at home. The best kind of materials to use are the soft cotton poplins, ratine cotton and silk mixtures in the cheaper grades, and the crepe goods.

MANICURING

BY EDNA EGAN.

"THERE! Your nails are manicured," said the bustling little manicure, leaning back and looking proudly at her work. "Have I hurt you? Are your nails sore? No? Just remember that the right manicuring, which is the gentle manicuring, does not hurt the nails, does not leave them sore or bleeding, and gives you an added sense of personal comfort. In fact it is resting to the nerves.

"If by any chance you have made them sore run hot water on them, and if they bleed apply a little peroxide of hydrogen.

"Your nails are in such a bad condition that the process of shaping them at the sides may take a little time and patience. Sometimes in such a case it is well to let them grow out once quite long, in order to get them back in their natural proportions at the sides, if you have been narrowing them too much.

"How often should you manicure? Once a week is enough if you give them a little daily attention, with oil and emery board and polish. By all means don't keep digging at them, and don't get lazy and say you haven't time to do them. Five minutes every day will work wonders. If they get bad again come to me; in fact, bad cases of nails should always be taken to a professional manicure to get them started right.

"Those white spots? I know you are waiting impatiently to hear about them. Prevent them, you can't remove them. It is generally said that they come from bruises on the surface of the nail, especially at the base where the growing nail is very soft, or further down on the finger where the root of the nail grows in a groove in the skin. Gentleness is the remedy. Don't press them with your instruments, don't hit them with the buffer. Be gentle while at your work. As the careful treatment, oiling and polishing go on the odious white spots will grow off with the growing nail and not reappear.

CAN YOU KEEP A SECRET?

BY LUCILLE DAUDET.

SOME women cannot seem to do without a confidante. They must have some one to whom they can tell their secrets. And how absurd it is that they should think that any one will keep it themselves!

Making confidences is one of the most foolish practices in which human beings indulge. It only leads, as a rule, to vain regrets and resolutions never to indulge again. If these resolves were kept, all would be well, but unfortunately women who have formed the habit of imparting confidences never seem to profit by their past experiences.

The habit is formed in girlhood. Almost every young girl has her intimate friend from whom, no deed or even thought is concealed. As the girl grows older she often replaces her school chum with other new confidantes, one at a time following after the other, until at thirty there is quite a formidable array of women who have known her every thought and care.

Can't you see the folly of making confidences, girls? Looking back over the years behind you, you will find that the girls who were your best friends four or five years ago are scarcely acquaintances now. The friend to whom you now tell all your little secrets will be almost a stranger five years from now.

You may even quarrel with your chum in the meantime and make an enemy instead of a friend of her. Think, then, of the weapon you are placing in her hands when you confide your every thought to her, a weapon which she may or may not use, but one of your own making, nevertheless.

To be sure, there may be no harm in these confidences, there may be nothing which you think could act against you. But if you at any time estrange the affections of your confidante you have no idea what she may see fit to read between the lines of your confidences.

ODDS & ENDS

KEEP a large stock of clean tissue paper or white crepe paper on hand with which to dry windows, mirrors, etc. The paper absorbs the dampness much quicker than cloth, and after the water has been absorbed from the surface of the glass the wet sheet is thrown away and a new sheet is used to give a fine polish. You will find that the work of washing windows, etc., can be done in much less time when tissue paper or paper toweling is used in the drying.

THE arrangement of the sick room is important. People seldom realize the wonderful effect which a patient's environment has on his conditions. Brightness and sunshine must have a decided effect upon the nervous system during recovery from serious illness, although in its acute stages much shadow may have been necessary. The best outlook for a sick room is a southeasterly one. Much can be done at times by altering the bed in order that the light may not cause glare in eyes easily strained because of weakness and ill health. Have just a few flowers, very fresh; and always take trouble about their arrangement. Whispering or talking outside the door is quite unforgivable. Never, if you can avoid it, awaken a patient, whether with intention or by accident. The patient is infinitely more dependent on his food than on any medicine. Therefore, one should never spare any effort to provide him with dishes likely to be appetizing. But try not to ask him what he wants or likes. Surprises often stimulate the appetite.

ONE way to make the underwaist is to cut it from the shirtwaist pattern which fits you, making it round or square neck as you like, and with a peplum to avoid fulness over the hips. When it comes to mending, ordinary patches are put in all the way to the waistband if it seems worth while, otherwise round or square ones with the corners carefully mitered. Circular underwaist covers are a little harder to patch since the place where the holes come most quickly—under the arms—is on the bias.

THE KITCHEN

Cream Eclairs.

Boil together for one moment one cup of water, half a cup of butter and one cup of flour, set away to cool and then stir in, one at a time, three eggs, not beaten, drop into greased pans and bake. After baking, which must be done in a steady oven, let them cool, cut a slit in the side and insert the filling.

Maple Walnut Tapioca.

Heat one pint of milk in double boiler, stir in carefully two tablespoons minute tapioca. Cook 15 minutes, then add the well beaten yolks of two eggs and a pinch of salt, but no sugar. Stir for three minutes, then let cool. Take two-thirds cup thick maple syrup and beat into the cool tapioca, and one cup English walnut meats closely chopped. Serve cold with whipped cream and place half nut meat on top.

Maple Blancmange.

Make one-fourth of the amount for a family of two, using one rounding tablespoon of cornstarch, half of a cup of syrup and a cup of milk. The printed rule runs thus: Mix five level tablespoons of cornstarch with one and a half cups of maple syrup until smooth; add one saltspoon of salt and half saltspoon of soda, and then pour the mixture slowly into one quart of scalding milk. Cook for 20 minutes, stirring frequently; pour it into small wet molds and serve cold with cream, either plain or whipped. When quartering this rule use the merest suspicion of soda and salt. Of course, too much would ruin the pudding.

Filling—One pint milk, two tablespoons of flour, two eggs, one cup sugar, a little salt. Let milk and sugar boil and stir milk and flour until well mixed.

Oyster Soup.

Two quarts milk, a head of celery, one-half or three-quarter pound of butter, one cup rolled crackers, salt, pinch of red pepper. Boil the milk with the celery, strain off the celery, put the milk back on the stove, add butter, seasonings, 100 oysters (or one may use a smaller quantity). Let it simmer once or twice, or until the edges of the oysters curl; thicken with the cracker and serve very hot with oyster crackers. Very delicious.

Caramel Cake With Butter Frosting.

One and one-half cups sugar, scant half cup butter, half cup sour milk, half cup chocolate dissolved in half cup boiling water, two eggs, two cups flour, flavor to taste, one teaspoon soda, pinch of salt.

Butter frosting—One cup confectioners' sugar, one tablespoon butter, one tablespoon milk, one tablespoon coffee or cocoa, one-quarter teaspoon flavoring. Mix well with spoon, then beat with silver fork until creamy.

Cracker Raisin Pudding.

Six large crackers split and well buttered. Place buttered side up in dish; pour over one quart of warm milk and let stand over night. In the morning take two eggs well beaten, half cup sugar, half teaspoon each of nutmeg, cinnamon, allspice, one-quarter teaspoon each of clove, mace, salt. Mix sugar and spice and salt together, then add the well-beaten eggs, now two-thirds cup seeded raisins. Put layer of crackers in pudding dish, layer of raisins spread over all mixture of spice, sugar and eggs. Do this until all ingredients are used, then add one cup more of milk. Bake in slow oven two hours. Keep covered first, then uncover, and if not wet enough add more milk, and when all soaked in add more.

Fried Scallops.

Clean one quart of scallops, turn into a saucepan and cook until they begin to shrivel. Drain and dry between towels. Season with salt and pepper, roll in fine crumbs, dip in egg, again in crumbs and fry two minutes in deep fat, then drain on brown paper. This is my way of frying them. You can dip in the following batter: Two eggs, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, one cup of bread flour, three-quarter cup milk. Beat eggs until light, add salt and pepper and add milk slowly to flour. Stir until smooth and well mixed. Combine mixtures.

MILADY'S BEAUTY

COURT plaster is a good wrinkle remedy. Cut the plaster into triangles and strips to fit the wrinkles and paste on in the night. Remove in the morning and massage gently for five or ten minutes with a good cold cream. Use a strong plaster and one that will stick well. The black variety is best for this purpose.

MASSAGING the scalp every day tends to loosen the scalp and thus induce a flow of blood to the hair follicles, nourishing them and causing a new growth of hair. Persistent massaging has often produced a new growth of lustrous hair where it had been thin and lifeless for years.

POLISHING powder makes the nails brittle; once a week is all that should be allowed for its use. Make a cream especially for the nails by mixing half an ounce sweet almond oil with sixteen and a half grains each of powdered alum and resin and sixteen grains table salt; to this are added a grain of carmine and forty of white wax. This cream may be rubbed on during the day, leaving it on if convenient.

IN beautifying brows a soft brush must be constantly used and frequent applications of vaseline—that is, using it twice a day, morning and night—will be beneficial, especially if instead of brushing the grease is rubbed in with the finger tips. This rubbing must be done from the nose toward the other end of the brows. The stroke of the brush must be given in the same direction. The hair must never be turned the wrong way. When the finger tips are employed the movement should be short and fairly hard—that is, sufficiently so to stimulate circulation. A beneficial unguent to put on in this way is almond oil—the sweet variety. Oil of cajuput is another good tonic. Several drops of this are rubbed into the brows every other night. A combination of red vaseline in the proportion of an ounce to half a dram of tincture of cantharides and seven drops of each of the oil of lavender and rosemary strengthened the hair. This is rubbed in morning and night.

ONE treatment for pimples is to open them with a new cambric needle, very gently press out the matter and then wipe the spot with clear alcohol. After this wipe the skin with a lotion made from one-half dram each of precipitate of sulphur, tincture of camphor and glycerin, adding two ounces of rose water. Put this most liberally over the eruption, applying it several times a day and at night.

UNLESS special precautions are taken hair is as apt to fall badly in spring and early summer as in autumn. The scalp feels the overheating of winter headgear and the general system being run down also affects it badly. Try the effect of ventilation and sunning. If possible let the hair down and sit in a sunny window for half an hour, at least, each day. If the windows can be opened all the better. Frequently run the fingers through the hair and lift it out to its full length to let the air circulate freely through it. If you have grown careless about massaging begin systematic movements for a month or six weeks. One well-known hair specialist declares that better results are to be had by rubbing the head periodically for a month or six weeks at a time and then stopping for several weeks. An excellent movement to loosen the scalp and make it flexible, also tone up the blood vessels, is to clasp the hands flatly on the top of the head and move them back and forth on the scalp in a line parallel with the shoulders.

THAT TIRED FEELING

BY MRS. McCUNE.

THERE are times for every one of us, when we get tired of what we are doing. Some grow tired of doing nothing and some of having a good time, but most of us are tired of the everlasting grind. Not always—but now and then.

The feeling comes when one catches a glimpse into the future and can find no hope of a change for the better; when one sees old age in the distance and nothing but loneliness as a reward for one's life endeavors.

If one could only loaf a while. If the brain and the tired muscles could have a rest. If the soul's longings could only be satisfied sometimes. If one could have a bit more leisure, some change of scene, even a change of occupation, without the risk of losing the little one has.

A sweet woman once said to me: "I've had many sorrows in my life, but I never think of them now. I'm remembering my blessings."

It is a good rule to follow. But there are times when one simply cannot remember blessings of the past in the pessimism of the present. Even blessings take on an indigo tint when the future seems to be marked out in the same old groove.

But the next time I'm tired of my own personal grind, I'm going to think of Mrs. Anna Nagy.

Mrs. Nagy has seven children of step-ladder ages. They are all young and must be cared for. Mrs. Nagy is thirty-four years old. Her husband earns a laborer's wage. They live in a small place near a big city, and have been married sixteen years.

In all that sixteen years Anna Nagy has never had a rest. Most of the time she has held a baby in her arms, and other babies have been tugging at her skirts.

She has kept house for her family, doing every bit of the manual labor herself. She has fed a hungry husband and seven hungry children and, when she wasn't too tired to eat, she fed herself.

Anna Nagy never sat down to rest. If she sat down at all, it was to sew or to hold a baby, and she never sat long at that, for every minute some need made her jump up to attend to it. Nor was there time to sleep enough. Seven small children have a way of keeping their mother awake nights. And of course, the man of the house must have his rest!

The other evening Anna Nagy fed her seven children, undressed them and tucked them into their beds. She washed the dishes and cleaned up the kitchen. She looked at a pile of mending to be done. And then she put on her coat and tied a shawl over her head and went out into the swirl of a blizzardy night.

She walked seven miles through the snowstorm before she was found, half frozen, half unconscious, and hurried to the city hospital.

"What was the matter? Why did you do it?" she was asked.

"I was tired," sighed Anna Nagy. "I was hunting for a place to rest."

TENACIOUS HABITS

BY MRS. KINGSLEY.

ONCE there was a professor at a well known college who used to exhort undergraduates to periodical disuse of tobacco; not because he thought tobacco a bad thing, but because he pronounced it weakness to make anything whatever indispensable to one's comfort.

Probably his principle was sound, though it requires a force of resolution rather higher than we are used to expect of human nature. But you will remark that it is a principle for undergraduates; that is, for young people. We are more adaptable at twenty than at thirty, and by forty we are nearly settled in our ways.

It is usual to speak of this as a rather contemptible, rather ridiculous tendency in human nature. We talk of people becoming fossilized, turning into mere oysters or barnacles. But in the slavery to habit there is some reason. By the time middle age is reached most sensible people have discovered for themselves the sort of life of all those within their reach that suits them best. They know what they can eat and drink without danger; they have learned by more or less unpleasant experience how much sleep their bodies demand.

So, too, with the more subtle, more spiritual needs of humanity. The middle aged know, for example, of how much affection they are capable, how much self sacrifice. Inevitably they are very reluctant to be dragged or coaxed or bullied into enterprises for which they feel themselves inadequate. At twenty, even at thirty, you may believe yourself the stuff of which saints and martyrs are made. Once you have come to forty years you know how easy it is to be ridiculous.

But times of trouble often shed a new light on our possibilities. Many a woman has discovered that she can do without many of the things that she believed necessities, and that she is capable of accomplishing tasks of which she never dreamed. Many habits which seemed as natural as breathing are abandoned under the stress of a dwindling income. When poverty makes itself felt many women and men too, have discovered that they can reconstruct themselves without catastrophe.

A NEAT little frame for a picture is made with a handkerchief. It is first stiffly laundered. All points are directed toward the center and ironed. The four points are then turned back, just reaching the edge. They are pressed and held in place with baby-ribbon rosettes. This leaves a small square for the picture. Hang it diamond shape on the wall.

DON'T throw away sour milk. It is highly nutritious and easily digested. In fact, many people who can digest little else manage well with this. Of course, the more thoroughly the clot is broken up either before or during its consumption the better able will be the gastric juice to get into it. All milk becomes clotted after it has been swallowed. It does so in rather large lumps, which are difficult to digest, and, it may be mentioned in passing, that one reason for adding lime water to infants' milk is that it makes the clot finer. Clotted milk when taken in that state, does not form large masses in the stomach.

CUT off some strong branches of the lilac and put in a crock of earth. Put a strong solution of plant food in the earth and set the crock in a deep saucer of water, never allowing the water to dry out. Occasionally pour a weak solution of ammonia water around the stalk. Some try to force the buds by growing them in water, but, while they bud, they soon die and are never fully matured. By adding natural plant food, keeping the plant warm and moist, the flowers will develop nicely. All kinds of fruit blossoms will develop if the branches are kept in jars of water, placed in the strong sunlight.

OLD gloves, so often thrown away, have good uses. The backs of light or white ones will make face and leg coverings for dolls wanted on the Christmas tree, and there can be no better iron hoders than those made of three or four placed together, as the heat will not penetrate them. Two pair of old black kid gloves boiled to a pulp in a quart of water will produce a black liquor which jellies when cold. This jelly can be melted and used as an almost unrivaled reviver of black lace and stuffs.

TENTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Jarvis Hope is detailed by the United States naval board to investigate and report his findings on the invention of Dr. Ralph Burke, which serves to bring the submarine to a state of perfection. The lieutenant arrives in Valdavia and is welcomed by the inventor and his daughter, Cleo. On the trial trip of the inventor's boat, a Japanese helper is surprised in the act of examining the mechanism of the ventilating device. Hope reports favorably on the new device but there are others interested in it. An attempt to burglarize Doctor Burke's laboratory fails, but later Cleo finds him murdered in his bedroom. Cleo sells her father's books to get money; later she finds a note from which she learns that they contain the secret formula. With Hope she races to the auctioneer's store only to find it in flames. Olga Ivanoff and Gerald Morton, two spies in search of the formula, attempt to capture Cleo when she calls at the house of Stephanski, the anarchist. Hope rushes to her aid; Morton shoots at him but the bullet hits a bomb in the cellar, which explodes. Stephanski and Cleo attend a ball at Mrs. Delmar's whose nephew has two of the missing books. Mahlin, a spy, attempts to steal the books, but is discovered by Hope; in the excitement that follows the books disappear. Mahlin escapes. Hope and Cleo take a boat for an island out in the bay. The conspirators follow in other boats. Mahlin and the Jap turn out the island light. Morton's boat with the countess strikes a stray mine in the bay. After a violent storm Hope and Cleo arrive on a strange island and discover that the man they hunt is there. But Mahlin and the Japanese also reach the island and put up a fight for the books. They escape from Hope but return and dynamite the shack. The conspirators fail to harm Hope and Cleo. They manage to reach Sandsboro, where Doctor Owen has one of the books. Each of the others approach the doctor, but he refuses to hear them. He arranges to meet Hope at the hotel with the book. Morton poses as Hope and but for an earthquake would have possessed the volume. Cleo is captured by Morton and taken in his friend's aeroplane to a lonely cabin in the mountains. She finds there the book for which they search. Fortunately she gets a note to Hope, who, with Hook, starts to the rescue. As he crosses the chasm in the swinging basket Mahlin steals up and chops at the cable with an ax.

Again Mahlin's ax rose and fell; again it bit through a strand of wire; again the tight-stretched cable sang and quivered. Hope, half way across the chasm now, and literally dangling between earth and sky, realized his peril. Yet he was helpless. So gradual was the incline of the cable that his progress was comparatively slow. He knew that before he could reach the opposite cliff Mahlin would have done his work and he would go plunging downward to meet his end on the rocks below. A thousand thoughts flashed through his mind. . . . Cleo, marooned on the ledge and dying of starvation. . . . the secret of the submarine lost to America forever. He shut his eyes and his lips moved in prayer. In another moment it would all be over. For a third time the ax swung upward . . . and then a shot rang out! A bullet spattered itself against a rock within a foot of Mahlin. He whirled about and as he did so a second bullet tore through his coat. Running across the mesa, a huge navy revolver in his hand, came Hook, firing as he ran. Even as Mahlin looked another bullet sang by his head, whereupon he dropped his ax and ran.

An instant later Hope reached the opposite bank. Swinging himself on to the ledge, he ran to where Cleo was lying in a heap. His danger and the perils through which she had passed had been too much for her; she had fainted. Lifting her limp and slender form, he bore her into the cabin and laid her tenderly upon the bunk.

"Cleo! Darling!" he whispered brokenly. "Speak to me. It's Jarvis."

Slowly consciousness returned. Her bosom rose and fell. A tinge of color invaded the alabaster of her cheeks. Her eyelids fluttered. She gave a moan which ended in a frenzied wail of "Jarvis! Jarvis!". Then her eyes opened and she looked up into the face of the man she loved.

"Hook saved me," he answered, "just as you fainted, darling."

"Thank God!" she whispered. "If—if anything had happened, Jarvis, I should have thrown myself over the cliff after you. Without you life would not be worth living."

"Do you care for me as much as that, dear heart?" he asked wonderingly.

"I care for you more than all the world," she answered simply.

"You are all the world to me," he whispered tenderly, as he drew her close. I have loved you since the first time I saw you, that afternoon in your father's garden."

"Will you marry me, Cleo?"

"Yes," she breathed, so softly that he could barely hear her, and her arms stole round his neck. Their lips met and for a long moment there was no sound.

Held tightly in Hope's arms, her head pillowed upon his shoulder, Cleo related her adventures. She told of being seized while strolling in the outskirts of Santa Eulalia and dragged into a car and chloroformed; of finding herself in the cabin on the ledge with Morton, and of his attempt to force her into marrying him.

"The cad!" exploded Hope, clenching his fists. "The dirty cur! I wish I could get my hands on him! One of these days I'll make him pay for his treatment of you, my darling."

"I knew that you would come for me, of course," Cleo continued, "but I was afraid that you might come too late. I had made up my mind that if he returned and attempted to so much as lay a finger on me that I would kill myself. . . . Oh, Jarvis, Jarvis!" she cried, shuddering, "you came just in time, my dear."

"You must never think of it again, dear heart," he said soothingly. "The danger is over now and you're safe in my arms."

"They say that every cloud has a silver lining—that out of evil good shall come," said Cleo, turned suddenly from grave to gay. "So, if that awful man hadn't kidnaped me and brought me here, I should never have discovered this!" and she triumphantly held up the book that she had found in the cupboard.

Hope fairly snatched it from her hand.

"I haven't found the formula itself," she answered, "but I've found where the formula is," and she showed him the inscription in her father's handwriting on the inside of the back cover.

"'Philosophy.'" he read slowly. "'Page sixty-one; every seventh word.' It can mean only one thing, of course. It means that if we will read every seventh word on page sixty-one of some work on philosophy we will have the formula of your father's invention. But the question is, which philosophy? There must be hundreds of works on the subject. Can you remember, Cleo, if there was a work on philosophy among your father's books?"

"I think there was," she said after a moment's reflection. "Yes, I am certain of it. Daddy would sometimes read aloud from it in the evenings. But I haven't the least idea what its title was or who wrote it."

"Then I'm afraid that we still have a long search ahead of us. There are still books for us to trace; the philosophy may be the last one that we find."

"I've more good news for you," said Cleo. "I noticed that this work on metallurgy is in two volumes, and, as I felt sure that Mr. Patten must have bought them both, I searched the cabin and discovered the other volume lying under the bunk. There is nothing in it, though; I've gone through it carefully. I had plenty of time for reading here," she added, laughing.

"You poor child," said Hope, kissing her upturned lips, "it makes me shudder to think of the perils through which you have passed."

"It has been worth all the perils, dear," Cleo answered softly, "because they have given me you. Now that we have each other I don't care if we never find the secret of the submarine."

Again there fell a silence in the cabin.

"I'm afraid we must be going, sweetheart," said Hope at last, "or Hook will think that something has happened to us. We've kept the poor old fellow waiting over there for nearly an hour. And he saved my life, too."

"It only makes us square then, lootenant," boomed a familiar voice at the cabin door. "I ain't fergot how you saved me from that shark down in Pago-Pago bay."

"Good gracious, Hook!" exclaimed Hope in surprise, "how did you get across the chasm?"

"Wall, I got sorter tired a waitin' fer you two young folks to finish your reunion, so I took a look around and what should I find, hidden away, nice as you please, in the bushes, but the basket? So I hauls back the block, hooks on the basket, and sails across as easy as though I wuz on one o' them there roller-coasters."

"You saved my life, Hook," said Hope, holding out his hand, which the old seaman grasped in his horny palm. "I shan't forget it. You came just in the nick of time."

"P'raps it wuz just as well that I come along when I did," Hook admitted. "Two more strokes o' that ax and you'd a been a goner, lootenant. And it wuz a forchnit thing that before we left the hotel I slipped my six-shooter in my pocket. I wuz out o' breath from climbin' the mountain and my aim wuz a leetle unsteady, but I made the feller vamoose just the same."

"Who was he?" asked Hope.

"It wuz Satsuma's side-pardner, Mahlin."

"Mahlin, eh?" repeated Hope. "I thought it might be Morton. The next time I meet either of those gentlemen," he added grimly, "there's going to be a reckoning."

"Waal, Miss Cleo," said Hook, turning to the girl, "it certainly does my heart good to find you safe and sound. We wuz pretty much worried about you fer a time."

"You're a perfect dear, Hook," she said, putting her hands affectionately on the old salt's burly shoulders. "You saved my life when you carried me out of Stephanski's cellar just before the bombs exploded, and now you have saved Mr. Hope's life. If it were not for you neither of us would be here—and that is why I am going to tell you a very great secret. Mr. Hope and I are engaged."

"Whoop! Whoop-ee!" he shouted, grasping their hands. "I wish you both, you, lootenant, and you, Miss Cleo, all the health and happiness and good luck in the world. I'm a good-fer-nothin', no-account old sailor, but when your paw died, Miss Cleo, I sez to myself, sez I, 'Doctor Burke took care o' you when you wuz down and out, Hook Barnacle, and now he's gone it's up to you to look after his daughter.' I ain't made a very good gardeen, Miss Cleo, but I done the best I knew how."

Standing on tiptoe, so that her lips were level with Hope's ear, Cleo whispered something to him. Then, with flaming face, she fled from the cabin.

"She says, Hook," said Hope, "that if we ever have a boy his middle name shall be Barnacle."

The book which contained the key to the code being too bulky to be carried easily, Hope contented himself with cutting off that portion of the book which contained the annotation.

"I ought to leave some word for this fellow Patten," he remarked. "It's hardly fair to cut up his book and not let him know who did it."

So he scrawled in pencil on the inside of the front cover:

"Mr. Patten—I have taken the liberty of cutting out a message which I found in this book. If you will communicate with me at the Shaftsbury hotel, Santa Eulalia, I shall be glad to reimburse you.

"JARVIS HOPE."

"Now," he remarked, "we must be starting. We have three or four hours of hard walking ahead of us and we must be out of the mountains before it gets dark."

Though Mahlin's ax-strokes had materially weakened the cable, it was still strong enough to support one person at a time, Cleo, Hook, and Hope making the passage across the chasm in the basket in turn. Then, turning their backs on the spot where they had found so much peril and so much of happiness, they set out on the long and arduous trip down the mountains.

* * * * * * * *

About the time that the three were leaving the cabin on the ledge, Morton and Olga were preparing to visit the mountains in the aeroplane. And Olga was by no means a welcome passenger.

"I think that I'll fly up to the mesa this afternoon and have a talk with the Burke girl," Morton had carelessly remarked. "She's been in the cabin three days now and I fancy that by this time she won't be quite so stubborn."

"And I think that I will go with you," Olga had rejoined. "I can get more out of the girl than you can."

"Nonsense," said Morton. "You don't want to go along. It's no trip for a woman. It's a nasty place to land up there on the mesa. There's no use in taking unnecessary risks."

"I'll take any risks that you will," said Olga decisively. "I have already said that I am going with you."

"And I say that you're not," said Morton angrily. The last thing in the world that he desired was to have Olga present during his interview with Cleo, for he knew that were the Russian woman to suspect his scheme of forcing Cleo to marry him she was quite capable of making things very unpleasant indeed. And his fears were fully justified by her next remark.

"You will either take me with you," she told him, "or I shall inform the police of some of your recent activities. I fancy that were it known that you are the kidnaper of the Burke girl for whom everyone is searching you would be lucky to escape with your life. They're a hot-headed people, these Californians, and they don't take kindly to having their women stolen. . . . Come, come, my friend. You can't 'put it over' on me, as you Americans say. You're much too anxious to see the girl alone. You will find it a dangerous business to try any double-dealing with me."

"Come along, then," he snarled, making the best of the situation, for he was perfectly aware that, were he to persist in his refusal, Olga would make good her threat.

Morton had been telling the literal truth when he asserted that the flight to the mesa was a hazardous one, for the stiff north wind that had sprung up added materially to the dangers of flying over a mountainous region. Twice they were nearly capsized by the treacherous air currents which unexpectedly swept up at them from the canyons, and it was only Morton's skill as an aviator that saved them. The wind increased in velocity as they ascended, and it was only after repeated circlings that Morton was able to effect a landing on the mesa, which was none too spacious for the purpose, even under the most favorable weather conditions.

"There's the cabin," he said, pointing, after he had helped Olga to alight, "but I don't see any sign of the girl. She must be inside. We'll go over and give her a surprise party."

"It will be a surprise party for her if she remains stubborn," remarked the Russian woman significantly. "A hot iron, properly applied, is a wonderful incentive for making people talk. I saw it used on a soldier once, in the fortress of Peter and Paul. He was a brave man, but it made a baby of him."

Though her tone made even the callous Morton wince, he made no comment, but led the way across the mesa. Pushing his way through the bushes that fringed the chasm, he stopped abruptly at sight of the basket swinging from the cable, where Hope had left it.

"I fancy it means," remarked Olga dryly, "that your bird has flown."

"Impossible!" asserted Morton. "She could no more escape from that ledge without assistance than she could escape from the moon. And there was no way in which she could get word to anyone."

"There's nothing to be gained by standing here and arguing about it," said Olga acidly. "Suppose we go across and see if she's still there."

"After you then," said Morton. "The basket waits, my lady."

"Thank you, no," she replied. "After you. I'm taking no chances of having you maroon me on the ledge the way you claim to have marooned the Burke girl. You'll go first, if you please, my friend."

1—"I Made the Feller Vamoose, Just the Same."
2—Made the Passage Across the Chasm in the Basket.
3—"Is It Really You, Jarvis, or Am I Dreaming?"
4—When the Three Paused to Rest, the Conspirators Paused, Also.

"You seem to be obsessed with suspicions of my motives, dear countess," sneered Morton, "but anything to please." Stepping into the basket, he slid across, whereupon Olga hauled it back and crossed in her turn. Together they approached the cabin. Morton flung open the door.

"She's escaped, the little devil!" he snarled. "I feared as much when I saw the basket. She had help from outside, of course."

"What's this?" exclaimed Olga, spying on the table the two books.

"Merciful heaven!" she cried, pointing to Patten's name on the flyleaf of one of them. "They're the very books we have been looking for! How did they get here?"

"I've no more idea than you have," said Morton, utterly stupefied. "I didn't see a sign of any books when I brought the girl here. Of all the hellish coincidences! To think that I should have stumbled on the cabin of the very man we have been trying to find and not have known it!"

"You may well call it a hellish coincidence," she snapped, holding up the volume from which Hope had cut the key to the code. "This tells the story. The naval officer that you are always sneering at has been too smart for you. He has not only found his way here and rescued the girl, but he has evidently discovered the secret of the submarine. You idiot! You blockhead! You fool!" she screamed, flaring into a sudden passion. "You had the secret almost in your hands and you have let it get away from us! Was there ever such incredible imbecility?"

But Morton was too stunned by the disaster to reply to her taunts. The imposing edifice that his imagination had erected had suddenly collapsed. With Cleo's escape ended his scheme of forcibly marrying her and thus obtaining possession of the fortune which she had inherited from Calvin Montgomery. And, as though this were not enough, the secret of the submarine, on finding which he had staked everything, had slipped through his very fingers and was now, he was convinced, in the hands of his rival, the man whom he hated more than any other—Jarvis Hope. The lavish expenditures he had made in prosecuting the search had almost exhausted his means. Gerald Morton was a desperate and a dangerous man.

"Well," demanded Olga, when her anger had somewhat subsided, "what are we going to do about it? There is nothing to be gained by sulking like disappointed children."

"We are going to follow them," said Morton grimly. "I'm going to get that formula if I have to kill them both."

"That," said Olga approvingly, "is the way to talk. Let us be going."

"Their mutual jealousies and suspicions forgotten in the loss of the formula, they recrossed the chasm and climed into the aeroplane. A moment later and, with a roar from its propellers, it rolled forward across the mesa and soared into the air. During their brief stay in the cabin, however, the wind, already dangerously high, had risen to a gale, and as their craft, leaving the comparatively sheltered mesa, climbed skyward, it was buffeted as a ship is buffeted by the waves. But it was impossible to return to the mesa now, and to attempt to descend elsewhere was but to invite disaster. The driving force of its powerful engines notwithstanding, the aeroplane was as helpless as a skiff in a storm. Yet so masterly was Morton's driving, so perfect his co-ordination of hand and brain, that it seemed as though his skill would triumph over the elements and that he would succeed in reaching the plan in safety. But suddenly a windsquall leaped out at them from a canyon over which they were passing; the frail machine reeled and quivered before the blow, and, despite Morton's desperate efforts, turned sideways, capsized and plunged like a wounded bird into the golf below.

An hour or so later a party of cowpunchers, returning to their ranch after rounding up a bunch of strays in the hills, saw on the rocky slope of the canyon a tangled mass of canvas, wood, and steel. Galloping up, they perceived, half buried beneath the wreckage of the aeroplane, the bodies of Olga and Morton.

"They're still breathing, boys," pronounced one of the punchers when he and his companions had succeeded in extricating the inanimate forms. "They're in pretty bad shape. The girl's ribs are all stove in and I'm afraid the fellow's cracked his skull. Bill, you chase down to the ranch and bring up the spring wagon. Better put in a mattress and plenty of blankets, and bring along some whisky. Send one of the boys off to town for the doctor—and tell him to get a move on, too. These people are hurt mighty bad."

So that when Morton and Olga regained consciousness, days later, they found themselves in a ranch-house in a mountain valley, with cowboys nursing them back to health.

* * * * * * * *

Cleo, Hope, and Hook, slowly making their way down the mountainside, little suspected that, following them like bloodhounds, were Mahlin and Satsuma. When the three in front paused to rest the two conspirators paused also, taking the utmost pains, however, to keep themselves concealed; when Cleo and her companions went forward, Mahlin and the Japanese did the same. Their progress was slow, however, for the country they were traversing was extremely rough, seamed with gorges and broken by unexpected outcroppings of rock. Part way down the mountain the trail that they were following entered a winding gorge, so narrow that they were compelled to walk in single file. As they emerged from it, with Cleo somewhat in the lead, Mahlin and Satsuma, who had made a detour so as to intercept them, sprang from a rock behind which they were crouching. So unexpected was the attack that Hope and Hook were taken completely by surprise. Satsuma, felling Hook with a single blow of his billy, turned to assist Mahlin, who was engaged in a desperate struggle with Hope.

"Run, Cleo! Run!" shouted the latter. "Get help!"

Hardly were the words out of his mouth, however, than the Japanese, watching his opportunity, dealt him a terrific blow on the back of the head and, with a smothered groan, the young officer sank to the ground. All this Cleo saw, but not until Mahlin started toward her did she realize that she was powerless to aid her friends and that her own life was in imminent peril. Then, with Mahlin barely a score of yards behind, she turned and ran like a frightened deer. Satsuma stopped only long enough to rifle Hope's pockets, taking from them his pocketbook, his papers, and the piece of the book-cover containing the key to the code. Then he, too, joined in the pursuit of Cleo. Straight down the mountain slope the chase led, over rocks, in and out of gullies, through underbrush and streams. Sometimes Cleo was out of sight of her pursuers, sometimes they were only a few yards behind. But she was young and strong and terror lent her wings, and she would have made her escape had her flight not been abruptly halted by a deep gulch which formed a fissure in the earth at right angles to the course she was pursuing. On the edge of it she stopped, trembling. Though the opposite bank of the gulch, which was comparatively narrow, was not too steep to scale, the side on which she stood fell away so precipitously that it was impossible for her to clamber down it, and, as it was a half a hundred feet to the bottom, to drop was equally out of the question. Like a hunted animal she glanced about her. Her retreat was cut off by Mahlin and Satsuma, who were rapidly approaching. She must act quickly if she was to escape their clutches. All at once she spied a great tree, a veritable monarch of the forest, which was growing from the bank on which she stood at such an angle that it partially overhung the gulch. Hanging from the tree was a wild grapevine of extraordinary length and thickness—the largest, in fact, that she had ever seen. It was as thick as an inch rope. Why, then, would it not serve as a rope on which she could swing to safety? Pulling on the hanging vine, she found that it was firmly anchored and that it was apparently strong enough to bear her weight. It was a hazardous plan, she knew; the chances were all in favor of the vine breaking and of her being dashed upon the rocks below. But such a fate was better, far better, she felt, than to be at the mercy of the human fiends who were closing in on her. Jerking the vine free of the trunk, she grasped it firmly with both hands, as, when a child, she had grasped the swing-rope in the school playground. Stepping well back so as to get the impetus of a run, she sped forward and, just as she felt the touch of Mahlin's outstretched hand, her feet spurned the earth and she swung out into space like a human pendulum.

BEES AS GERMAN ALLIES

Made to Aid Bullets Against British Fighting Force in East Africa.

The Central News quotes from the Natal Mercury, accounts of the difficulties confronting the British fighting forces in East Africa, furnished by an officer of the East African mounted rifles who formerly was a coffee planter at Nairobi. This officer said the principal difficulty was the great density of the bush which rendered effective scouting almost impossible and provisioning troops very difficult.

Of the ingenuity of Germans there is no doubt, as the following incident will prove: Round about Tanga, where the Lancashires landed, is a considerable bee country. The natives have a device whereby they placed hollow logs in trees to enable bees to construct their hives, and from these the natives collect honey. In one place the Germans tied a whole lot of these logs together and attached them to a wire in long grass. They also invented a plan which caused a white flag to jump up when anyone came into contact with the wire, this being the signal for them to turn machine guns on to the spot.

A party of Lancashires had the ill luck to stumble over the wire with the result that dozens of beehives fell and up sprang the white flag, revealing their whereabouts. The Lancashires immediately had bees and bullets to contend with, and between the two had a hot time.

Eb Hoover who has been botherd for yrs with a wart on his nose tuk some fools advice and tide a silk thred around it tite to remoove it. Well the thread remooved the wart but Ebs nose swelled up to twict its nacheral size and now he looks ridickulus in the extream. Our advice would be for ennybuddy with a wart on their nose to let it alone.

Bill Hendricks made a vissit to Hardscrabble last wk and indulged in the lushury of a haircut from the barber there. Being as Bill haddent had a haircut for about 2 yrs it so changed his appearants that when he returned home even his old dog "Tige" diddent know him and started for Bill who had to clime a appel tree.

Miss Hildy Wade, the bell of the Crossroads who was a gest of her aunt at the co seat three days last wk on a vissit returned home sick. Hildy says she gesses she et too mutch while away, things tasted that good to her.

Henry Tate had a hen to lay two duble yokked eggs for him last wk, one on Tuesday and one on Friday. We consider this quite a remarkable feet for the same hen to perform, speshially in one wk. Who can beat this laying dubble yoked eggs?

Sam Wilkins is engaged in breaking a cupple of steers to the yoke in a effort to make a pair of oxes outen em. Theyre purty stubborn and Sam can be heerd breakink em nearly a mile away.

These is all the news in our midst whitch we can think of at the present writing but no doubt some more will ockur by next wk.

SORROW HOLLOW

Enos Simpson while riding his old white mare "Lily" who is 24 yrs old going on 25 down through the village recent scairt at a newspaper witch blowd acrost the road and begin to ackt up like a fool. She snorted and kicked up her heels and throwd Enos clean over her head into the middle of the road and then run until she was all outen breth. When Enos ketched "Lily" he give her a good talkin to—he told her it was ridickulus for a old mare at her time of life to skeer at annythink as in significant as a newspaper.

Lonk Jones is helping Moze Higham bild fence at present but they aint got mutch accompishd so fur. They both differ from each other on politicks and spend most of the time argyfyin. Lank likes to argyfy with Moze becuz when he does so he aint workin except with his mouth whitch comes nacheral to him and yet his pay goes on jest the same.

Mrs. Jemima Hoff went to her back kitchen door last Tuesday to throw out the dish water and throwd about 2 gals of same right into her husband Jim Hoffs face who was jest coming up the steps. This was a good eal of a surprise to Jim but he diddent say mutch to Jemima. Jim never does say mutch to Jemima—he knows better.

Pluto Larkins set a steel trap for a fox whitch has been stealing his chikkens and ketched a old dominecker hen in the trap. Being as she was crippeld for life Plute killed the hen and had her for dinner last Sunday but he says she was so blamed tuff that a leetle mite of her went a long ways as far as he was concerned.

We aint had enny rain in our midst for nearly 2 wks. Why is this?

Miss Sally Branscomb is keeping company with Josiah Perkins, Eb Perkinses boy at present. She seems to of kind of dropd you aint she, Sam? Well, alls fair in love or a fistfite, so they say.

Hank Wants One

Hank Dewberry one of our most dilatory cittizens has got his heart and sole set on buyin a motersickel and cant talk about nothink else lately.

Hanks says he calkilates that a motersickel is one of the greatest invenshions what has ever been invented for gettin a person from one place to another in the soonest possibil time and that if he can ever scrape up suffishent funds blamed if he dont invest in one.

Personally we aint got on ambishion to buy a motersickel and if we had one wed he afeared to try to ride it and we dont regard ourself as a cowyard either. Judging from the few motersickels whitch we have saw passing through Bingville at the rate of about 100 miles per hour we would jest as leef try to ride a streek of greased lightnin or a sky rocket on the 4th of July or a bunch of firecrackers.

But it aint no use to reason with Hank when he gits a noshion in his head. The only think that will pervent him purchasing a motersickel is lack of funds. Hank says he knows where he can buy a seckond hand motersickel over to the co seat for $100 and being as he alreddy has saved up two dollars all he lacks is $98.

Talkd in His Sleep

Deacon Butterworth, one of our most respeckted cittizens & a stunch piller of the Bingville church made himself ridickulus in church service last Sunday morning while Rev. M Saml Moore our beloved paster was preaching the gospil.

As everbuddy knows Deacon Butterworth is a great hand to swap horses and dicker in same. Most folks hereabouts knows this to their sorrer being as a person has to git up turrible erly in the morning to git ahead of Deacon Butterworth in a horse trade being as he'll skin you outen your eye teeth if you dont look out.

Well last Sunday morning at church the Deacon was in his reglar place in the Amen corner as ushual and as soon as Rev. Moore begin his discourse the Deacon went to sleep as ushual. The sermon was about haff over and Rev. Moore had jest started in on his eighthly when all of a suddint the Deacon hollerd right out loud as follers so everybuddy in the congregashion could hear, "By mighty. I tell you that hoss is sound as a doller and gentle as a lamb!"

Plutarch Watkins who was setting next to the Deacon give him a jab in the ribs and the Deacon woked up with a jerk and Plutarch whisperd to him what he had said. Everybuddy in the audience was lookin at the Deacon and even Rev. Moore had stopd and was glarin at him very severe.

When the Deacon realized what a fool he had made of hisself his fase got as red as a beet and he looked awful cheep and twisted around in his pew and scrooched down so low that he was outen sight of nearly everybuddy in the congregashion. Then Rev. Moore perceeded with his sermon.

If you desire to git the Deacon riled up jest ask him if he thinks its right to swap horses in church on the Sabbath when hes asleep.

Bad Cold for Gorm

Gorm Hankins has a turrible bad cold in his head chest and all thru his system for that matter. How it ockurd is as follers:

Last Wensday Gorm went out to bild fence and you know yourself what a awful hot day last Wensday was. Well afore Gorm had been bilding fence two hours he was soakin wet with perspirashion and so thirsty he could of drunk a well dry. So Gorm he knockd off bildin fence and adjurned to the house to rest and git a drink. When Gorm reached the house the only cool place he could find was down cellar so he went down and set on a box beside his barl of hard cider from whitch he refreshed hisself from time to time.

When Gorm woke up three hours later he founs hisself layin on the damp dirt floor and calkilates he must of dozed off and fell offen the box. Be that as it may Gorm as a result of coolin off too quick when he was so awful hot ketched what he says is one of the turriblest colds that a mortal man or any other kind of a man ever had. Gorm is all bungd up in the head and chest and cant speek above a whisper. Doc Livermore says if Gorm dont come to him he is liable to pass away. Gorm says he aint no liabler to pass away than if he takes Doc Livermores horse medisin and besides feeling so miserable he dont keer mutch if he does.

Personal Mentchion

Several hen houses has been robbed in our midst during the past few weeks. Some folks thinks its foxes, but Seth Dewberry our lion hearted town constubble says he calkilates its two legged foxes. Seth says he has several clews and unless this chikken stealing desists the law is liable to take its course.

Eb Simpson started a long needed job when he begin to whitewash his railings in front of his residence last wk but when Eb had the job about haff finished he splashd some whitewash into his eye whitch pained him very severe. This made Eb mad who throwd down his brush and says the rest of that fence can rot before he'll whitewash it. As far as thats concernd the fence almost did rot before Eb whitewashed haff of it.

Everybuddy in Bingville calls this purty hot wether but old Dad Hendersone our wether perdickter & profet says it dont hold a candle to the hot whether there was in Bingville during July, 1821. We never knowd Dad was that old.

Amzi Gookins who fit and bled in the war of the Rebellyun and has a wood leg to show for it while walking down st tother day slipd offen the sidewalk and sprained his ankel. EXPLANASHION—Praps we ort to state that the ankel that Amzi sprained was the ankel of his other leg & not his wood leg.

Lokal Squibs

Mchitable Wilkins is nitting wool socks for her husband, Ben Wilkins. Mchitable nitts wool socks for Ben during the summer and he wears em out during the winter. She says he is awful hard on his socks.

Hen Weathersby prop of our general store says trade is so slack this hot weather that he aint skeercely paid for keeping the store open and if it wassent for transhient trade of strangers passing thru sitch as ottomobeelists, et cettery he would shut up shop. Hen says that day before yesterday he had 65 cts worth of transhient trade inclooding seegars, crackers & cheese, etc.

Bud Hinckley who aint quite right in his head aint did nothink out of the way during the past wk. Skeercely a wk passes that Bud dont go cut some prank or git into some scrape but for the past few days he has been acktink almost huming.

Miss Sally Hoskins has abandund her work on a pome entitled "Loves Kwest" whitch we hoped to be able to publish in the Bugle long before this but Sally says it aint no use for her to try to git enny inspirashion for pome writing sitch hot wether as this being as her Moose (whatever that is) wont work a tall.

Zeke Pillsbury from Happy Valley was saw shaking hands on our sts last Tuesday but he diddent show hisself at this offis. Sinst Zeke owes us $11.50 on back subscripshion we persoom he perfers to do his handshaking elsewhere than with us.

These seems to about all the "Lokal Squibs" we can scrape together at this time without a going out of our way to do so and we aint got time to do that. We allus give you all the "Lokal Squibs" we have on hand & we would appershiate it if you would reciprokate this faver by leaving a "Lokal Squib" at this offis now and then for publicashion.

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago, July 22.—Wild buying carried wheat prices up 3c a bushel today before any reaction set in. Opening prices, which ranged from ½c to 1⅞c higher, with September at $1.15¾ to $1.16⅜ and December at $1.18⅝ to $1.19¼, were followed by a rapid further ascent and then a slight down turn.

The close was strong, 3⅜c to 3¾@3⅞c net higher, with September at $1.19 and December at $1.21⅞.

Dry hot weather and the wheat strength lifted the corn market. After opening ¼c to 1¼c higher, prices continued to rise.

Oats shared in the bullishness of other cereals.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, July 22.—Short covering accounted largely for the activity of today's operations, although trading was again wholly professional and limited to speculative favorites. United States Steel was the foremost feature, rising to 86½, its best price of the week, on transactions embracing numerous 1,000 to 2,000 share lots. Automobile stocks were prominent at advances of three to ten points, the latter for general motors, and munitions were moderately better, with substantial gains in minor steel and metal issues. Bethlehem Steel lost ten points. Tobaccos showed additional advances, with some inquiry for beet sugar. Rails played no part in the day's business, aside from a four-point decline in Wisconsin Central. The closing was strong. Bonds were steady.

The week-end session opened with very light dealings and few changes of importance. Specialties again furnished the only noteworthy features. Industrial Alcohol, Willys-Overland, American Locomotive, American Linseed preferred and Hides and Leather preferred, recording gains of substantial fractions to over a point. American Writing Paper preferred and International Nickel were inclined to yield.

United States Steel and similar industrials were barely steady, and rails were almost utterly neglected. Tobaccos were represented by Liggett & Myers, which rose over six points.

THE MONEY MARKET.

New York, July 22.—Mercantile paper, 4¼; sterling 60 day bills, 4.71¼; demand, 4.75¾; cables, 4.76½; francs, demand, 5.90¾; cables, $5.90; marks, demand, 72 9-16; cables, 72⅝; kronen, demand, 12.55; cables, 12.65; guilders, demand, 41½; cables, 41⅝; lires, demand, 6.42; cables, 6.41½; rubles, demand, 30.45; cables, 30.50; bar silver, 63⅜; Mexican dollars, 48¾c; government bonds, steady; railroad bonds, steady.

YOUTH WHO SHOT AT TRAIN BOUND OVER

Farmer Lad, Who Wounded Five Passengers, to Appear in Higher Court.

Kenneth Gallagher, the farmer youth who shot into the vestibule of the Twentieth Century Limited as the train flew past a woods near New Haven last week and wounded five passengers, was bound over to the circuit court from police court Saturday morning. He is held under $300 bond.

Captain Stoll, of the Pennsylvania railroad detective force, reported that all those who were injured by the scattering shots from Gallagher's gun are recovering as far as he can learn. One of the men still has five of the small lead shots in his leg, although several have been removed, Stoll was told. All of those injured when Gallagher tried his marksmanship on the speeding train are now in the east.

Elmer Reinschneider, Gallagher's companion, who sat on the log beside him when Gallagher suddenly decided to shoot the train, must also appear in higher court. He is held on his own recognizance.

Judge Kerr had expected to settle the case in police court. He was taking into consideration only the statute providing for shooting at trains. The fact that passengers were injured makes the offense a felony and it must be ended in the circuit court.

TAKEN UNDER ADVISEMENT.

Case against Elva Diehl, charged with obtaining $90 from George Hanold under false pretenses, was taken under advisement. Hanold claims that Diehl sold him a coffee urn, wash-stand, dish rack and cash register which belonged to the Schlitz Brewing company and to Mr. Falnke, who operates a restaurant at 720 Mechanic street.

Hanold purchased the restaurant at 1435 West Main street from Diehl. The room had formerly been used for saloon and a part of the bar fixtures were left in Diehl's care, it was testified. Hanold claims Diehl sold him these things for $90.

FUGITIVES TO BE RETURNED.

James Malatesto, 24, and Jenny Gionatenko, 14, Italians, were turned over to Chicago officials. A detective from Chicago will come for them q ETM Chicago came for them this afternoou. They are listed as fugitives and Malatesto is accused of kidnaping the girl.

The pair were arrested when found in a room together on Melita street by Detective Sergeant Immel Friday night. Their arrest followed a communication from Chicago.

MILK CASE DISMISSED.

Paul Kucher, the new dairy and milk inspector, appeared in police court Saturday morning for the first time. He was interested in the case of Henry D. Korte, living near Fort Wayne, charged with selling milk without a license.

Korte's arrest resulted from a misunderstanding, Kucher said. Korte will take out the proper license at once. The health board officer asked that the case be dismissed. Kucher stayed for most of the police court session. He enjoyed it, he said, but hoped he would not have to be in court often.

OTHER POLICE COURT CASES.

Paul Klincher, charged with public intoxication, and Harry Miller, convicted of train riding, were let go. Remi Wingor, the man who fractured his skull a week ago when he hit his head on a wheel of a truck at the interurban station while intoxicated, is still in the hospital. His case is not critical, however, and his trial will follow recovery.

GOTHAM CIVIC BODIES FAVOR BARGE CANAL

Welding Ring, chairman of the executive board of the New York chamber of commerce, has thrown his strength to the support of a rehearing for the Lakes Erie and Michigan Waterway association before the board of rivers and harbors at Washington, setting forth the benefits and necessity of the Toledo, Fort Wayne and Chicago barge canal. T. E. Ellison, Fort Wayne attorney, has received a copy of a letter which Ring wrote to the rivers and harbors board

Mr. Ring says he is sure that the chamber of commerce of New York will indorse the rehearing, although it is not in session for the summer and cannot act officially now on any endorsement. Mr. Ring states he studied the canal proposition when he was president of the New York Produce exchange, it being brought before that body several years ago. "I was then convinced the project was very reasonable and desirable," Mr. Ring declares in his letter. "I am a great believer in canal transportation for all bulky products."

Exchange Sends Letter.

The New York Produce exchange also sent a letter to the rivers and harbors board signed by E. E. Carhart, chairman; Welding Ring, William Mott, W. H. Douglas, W. B. Cragin, E. T. Cushing, A. G. Field and E. S. Allen. One extract from the letter says: "The great possibilities of the waterway proposed are so apparent that we believe it a part of wisdom to delay any action that would stop further proceedings until at least after the opening of the new barge canal of the state of New York."

Get Cost Idea.

When the barge canal of the state of New York is finished some idea of the cost of constructing the Michigan-Erie canal will be easier obtained, the New York Produce exchange members think.

Mr. Ellison has received a letter from one of the engineers in which he says the board's office in the old postoffice building, New York, will be retained until after the hearing in November. All of the maps, profiles and general reports are in that office.

Col. John Millis, head of the board, has been removed to Savannah, Ga., by a report received in Fort Wayne.

Prominent South Bend Men Launch New Step in Preparedness.

South Bend, Ind., July 22.—Prominent merchants and manufacturers of South Bend, have formed a motor car reserve company and are endeavoring to secure legislation which will authorize similar organizations throughout the country under the supervision of the secretary of war.

They have petitioned congress for and have appealed to Senator Thomas Taggart and Representative H. A. Barnhart, of the thirteenth Indiana district to assist in the passage of the bill which the members of the South Bend motor car reserve company have drawn.

One of the purposes of the organizations will be to keep the war department advised where it will be possible to secure motor cars with the least possible delay in the event of an urgent need.

In addition to supplying available trucks, motor cars and motorcycles in time of emergency, the members of such companies would receive military training under the direction of officers of the regular army.

Another important phase of the proposed bill is one designed to create sentiment for highway improvement for both commercial and military requirements.

The South Bend men ask that in case the bill is passed their organization be designated as Company A, First regiment, of the first division.

"Charity Advertising" is Absolutely Tabooed by Association.

Positively no more charity advertising will be given by the members of the Indiana Retail Merchants Association of Fort Wayne, as indicated by the following notice that has been made public by Secretary Harry F. Kennerk:

"We, the merchants and other business men whose names are hereto attached, do hereby agree each with the other, that we will not advertise in any newspaper publication that is not admitted to the United States mails as second-class matter.

"That we will not advertise in any program, book or any similar publication gotten out by any club, fraternal order, church, factory or social organization, or any organization whatsoever, unless the parties promoting such publication produce a written letter from Mr. H. F. Kennerk, secretary of this association, certifying that the proposition has received the indorsement of our sanction committee.

"We further agree that unless the same authority is shown, that we will not donate either money or goods to society fairs or other similar public entertainments, field days, athletic, church or other pleasure organizations, and that we will not buy any tickets whatsoever to such entertainments.

"We further agree that we will not resort to the use of trading stamps, gifts, premiums, prizes, or any similar unhealthy schemes of trade promotion.

"Recognizing, however, that we are all of us desirous of bearing even more than our full share in the support of worthy public objects, we except from the above prohibitions, such organizations as follows: Allen County Orphan asylum, Catholic Orphan asylum, Reformed Orphan asylum, Associated Charities, Humane society, Fort Wayne Relief Union, Columbia Street Mission, Anti-Tuberculosis League, Hope Hospital association, Visiting Nurse League, Lutheran Hospital association, Catholic Hospital association, Young Women's Christian association, Young Men's Christian association and other worthy associations not mentioned above, organized for similar purpose."

LODGE NOTES

A beautiful American flag was presented to Henry W. Lawton camp, No. 35, United Spanish War veterans, by Comrade August C. Hartwig, at the regular meeting Friday evening. Past Commander John G. B. Jones made the presentation to the camp on behalf of Comrade Hartwig. The speech of acceptance was made by Commander Levi A. Todd. Two comrades of 1898 and three of 1861 were mustered in.

A special meeting of the Eagles' lodge has been called by President A. J. Ortlieb for Monday evening at 8:15 o'clock to decide whether the order will put on a week's circus here, beginning August 28. The picnic committee has completed arrangements for the annual picnic to be held Sunday, August 13, at Centlivre's park.

The Protected Home circle initiated a large class of candidates Thursday evening. After the initiation, the Willing Workers supplied the circle with ice cream and cake. A fine selection was rendered by Lady Lura Royer, which was very much appreciated. Dancing followed.

Made Him Duck

Everytime somebody came into the office, whenever he wanted to see the clock or look across the room, Mr. Busyman had to duck his head and look over his glasses. When a friend suggested Meigs' Kryptoks, the double glass without seams or lines, his troubles were over—now he sees better for distance and reads like olden times. Meigs, the eyesight specialist, Lyric Theater Bldg.—guarantees these time-savers. Let him fit your eyes today.

BABY BONDS CULTIVATE INSTINCT FOR SAVING

"Saving is like swimming," says a recent article signed by the American Bankers' association, "once you have the 'hang' of it, it's easy." To learn the art of saving just as to learn the art of swimming two things are necessary: confidence and practice. These two qualifications have been acquired by many local men and women through the medium of Baby Bonds, and now many of these same people have developed the faculty of saving to such an extent that they are investing in one Baby Bond each month.

Baby Bonds come in $10.00 denominations, bear 6 per cent interest, and are secured by first mortgages on local real estate. There are also a few $500.00 bonds of the same issue which bear the same rate of interest and have the same security. Other details may be secured from the Wildwood Sales Company, Shoaff Building.

CALHOUN PLACE

THE ADDITION OF HOLMES

WHY

Have twelve new homes been completed in this addition and why are there several more now under construction?

BECAUSE

BECAUSE

BECAUSE

The prices are low. Lots 40 ft. x 145 ft., $500.00 to $1,050.00. Terms easy. $10.00 cash, $1.00 per hundred per month on the balance.

REMEMBER

The new homes being built in this addition are increasing the value of all Calhoun Place Lots. ACT NOW.
